Adam assures her that he doesn't care about their age difference at all, and the two continue their relationship. Adam assures her that sex is not what all men look for and insists he hasn't slept around. Adam confides in Kevin about his girlfriend, Nina. Adam finally goes to Nina's place to have it out with her over who is the father of her baby. Adam finds out she is pregnant, but with the three of them not knowing whose child it is, everything is put on hold. Adam is angry but acquiesces seeing that Kevin really loves Nina. Adam is the lead singer with successful pop group The Make who are booked to perform at popular music festival in Scotland. Adam meets Rebecca when he picks her up in his cab on her way to a blind date. Adam reads his brothers the story of "The Sobbin' Women" (taken from Plutarch's story of the Sabine Women), one of the books Milly brought to the homestead. Adam realizes he was wrong to tell his brothers to kidnap them. Adam refuses to let himself be pushed around by the rival suitors and calls his younger brothers cowards for letting them get away with their behavior. Adam refuses, saying that he had said he would return home only when the snow had melted enough that the pass was open to traffic. Adam then bites down on the gun and chews off a piece; it is made of licorice. Adam then says, "Maybe I am. Adam thinks Amanda is showing a disregard for the law, since there should never be an excuse for such behavior. Adam thinks Doris is guilty of attempted murder. Adam thinks she is having an affair, but he also tells Kevin that Nina's suspected infidelity only bothers him because someone else is paying attention to her. Adam's character is well received by test audiences, and Rosie persuades Marty to give him a chance. Adam, feeling betrayed by Milly's reaction, leaves for the trapping cabin farther up the mountain to live out the winter by himself, unknowingly hurting Milly's feelings. Adam, figuring out Kevin is the man sleeping with Nina, confronts him at the bar where Kevin and now also Rebecca work. Adam, for what he thinks is the last time, goes to Holly's home and gives Holly's mom his drawing, commenting that the drawing has another side that Holly didn't see before she left, which turns out to be Adam telling Holly that he'll always be there for her. Adam, still angry, later storms out of their apartment. Adam, thinking it's Holly, says that her mom is setting a bad example, getting up and leaving when things get bad and that, in return, is making a bad role model for her own daughters. Adams is finally convinced when he finds Paul preparing to sleep in a different bedroom from his "wife". Add to the mix rival starlet Luci, a wannabe WAG with designs on both Kate's coveted role in 'Prince of Chaos', and on Vincent. Alienated from her roots and emotionally unavailable to love-interest, Benny Christophe (Alastair Mackenzie), a life as a baker is unacceptable to Desiree. Alim has an imaginary friend (or maybe a guardian angel or ghost friend, depending on how literally or symbolically one takes the film) who is supposedly Cary Grant, who gives Alim advice when Alim is in trouble. Alim is a young gay man. Alison Kirbe is a young London girl who has just found out she has inherited a Texas ranch from an old soldier she had befriended during World War II. Alison Scott (Katherine Heigl) is a career-minded woman who has just been given an on-air role with E. Alison and Walter see each other at the party, but jealousy leads to a confrontation between the two. Alison bursts out in tears, angry at Matthew for turning an honest and good-hearted inheritance into a supposed scheme. Alison enthusiastically accepts Matthew's proposal and the other men soon move on, hitting on other women only moments later. Alison is about to leave LA to join her beau in Tokyo. Alison is increasingly worried about Ben's lack of responsibility and commitment, and has doubts about the longevity of their relationship. Alison realizes what actually happened that night, and they kiss. Alison thinks it's too early to think about marriage, because she is more concerned with hiding the pregnancy from her bosses, believing that they will fire her if they ever found out. Alison wakes up only to find that it has started snowing in LA and flights are delayed. Alison's boss finds out about her pregnancy, and sees an opportunity to boost ratings with female viewers by having Alison interview pregnant celebrities. Alison's mother (Joanna Kerns) tries to persuade her daughter to have an abortion, but Alison decides to keep the child. All 27 brides who Jane helped, as well as Tess and Casey (Judy Greer, her best friend), are her bridesmaids, wearing the dresses she once wore as their bridesmaid. All Over the Guy is about Eli (Dan Bucatinsky) and Tom (Richard Ruccolo). All are celebrating Christmas Eve together, forgetting to hide as usual from the patrolmen who check the house every night, but the patrolmen agree to let the families stay until after the New Year. All are connected by Jimmy (Adrian Lester), a cab driver, and a place, 'El Corazon'. All are embarrassed, but they make small talk, and he shows Ellie to her room. All are occupied, mainly by the escaped women. All comes out well - just. All day long, he sees patients who express grievances, particularly rebellious teenagers who despise their parents. All ends happily when the show opens in New York with Nancy in the starring role. All ends well, of course. All four are taken to the Omaha police station. All four couples learn that they have problems, even Ronnie and Dave, who thought they were fine. All four couples return to Eden West. All girls blame Ishika for cheating and take their anger out on her. All goes as Wingate had anticipated; the audience laughs wildly, as the confused actors continue performing. All goes terribly wrong, with Janice instead suing Mickey for divorce and Sutton's company for $100,000. All have their narratives modified significantly. All her life, Isabella has suffered from motion sickness. All is complete when the Marchioness herself accepts the proposal of a longtime admirer, Major Harry Roxbury (Morton Selter). All is going well at the prom until Bianca learns that Joey planned to have sex with her that night. All is resolved before he can arrive, leading Colonna to point out: All is well and everyone happily dances to the music. All is well until millionaire Harvey Huntington Honeywagon III (Wynn) comes around, convinced that the beachgoers are so senselessly obsessed with sex that their mentality is below that of a primate especially Honeywagon's wunderkind pet chimp Clyde, who can surf, drive, and watusi better than anyone on the beach. All memory of him is erased, and later that Christmas Eve at midnight, Henry delivers the sermon that he believes he has written. All of Charles's friends and associates have turned their backs on him. All of Martha's attempts to expose Whitman as the sociopath that he is to her friends and family is met with disbelief and skepticism from everyone due to his skill of lying and manipulation. All of Priya's family is happy for the relationship to have ended, except for her 80-year-old Aunt who advises her that life is too short to live to make only others happy. All of her friends tell her she is being foolish, that nobody can resist that much temptation, but she stubbornly persists. All of his companions are killed, but he survives. All of his shared joys with Breezy, such as their adopted stray dog and us against the world mentality, dont stop them from parting ways. All of the brothers have red hair and all but Gideon are well over six feet tall. All of the characters are transformed by the episode: Louis' mob is disrupted, Gigli has dropped his hyper-masculine façade, Ricki has a heterosexual fling with Gigli, and Brian gradually emerges from his shell, noticing other people and conversing. All of the couples want to use a birth control pill called "Thenol", but none of them wants to admit it. All of the dead go "upstairs" to the Land of the Living to perform the wedding ceremony for Victor and Emily. All of the lies are revealed, and Dashiell punches Lester. All of their efforts are ultimately unsuccessful, with the result that all five of the women give birth the following year. All of them are dressed as 6-foot-tall birds, although such creatures are not naturally found on Spengo, and the only weapons they have to fight the Emperor and the Destroyers are rocks, their "intelligence" and a number of stolen weapons, including Light Grenades, which completely disintegrate anyone who picks one up. All parties end up having a wild time at "The Boiler" where Pert catches the eye of Peabody Jr. All searches are fruitless, and Prince Charming is close to giving up hope when he learns of the Evil Queen's magic mirror. All seems lost until Trudy gives birth to sextuplets. All seems to be well and Ty convinces Elle to audition for Berklee again. All she asks for in return is a play date for their children. All she can do is listen with envy to what her African-American maid Vera (Theresa Harris) does in Harlem after work. All sorts of suspects present themselves: Nick Martel (Robert Armstrong), a bookie who owed North $100,000 for a winning bet; Leroy Hutchins (Ralph Morgan), the owner of the winning horse; John Summers (Grant Mitchell), the favorite's owner; mrs Summers, who is seeing Martel behind her husband's back; and Summer's lawyer, Henry Strand (an uncredited Frank Reicher). All that is left is to do what the note says. All the characters have ideas about what should be in the contract, based on their own experience. All the couples in the house have sex that night, while Lance gives Mia a back-rub and Q sends risque photographs of himself to Shelby. All the couples pair off happily at the seniors' graduation as the graduating class sings ("We'll Be Together"). All the employees think they are stuck-up and don't believe that they can do their job. All the friends arrive at the house, the first time they've come together in 14 years, and the celebration begins. All the guys are completely drawn to her and when the dance music starts Eddie automatically grabs Gidget's hand. All the inmates greet her warmly and familiarly as she walks down the cellblock. All the ladies and gentlemen at the ball admire her, and the Queen of Transylvania invites her to dance with her son, the prince ("Embassy Waltz"). All the personality conflicts come to a head, and everyone begins the process of healing. All the while Payne does not realize that Miss Dillwood is independently wealthy, and the married man she was to sleep with was the man she had just exchanged vows with that afternoon. All the while she's stalking the olderD, Tom, who is actually very wealthy, keeps after her. All the while, Gary (AD). All the while, Guy and Faye grow closer as friends. All the while, Jean is secretly followed by a private detective. All the while, Sam has been watching these events from afar, hoping to see his brother arrested. All the while, he grows closer to Mary Tate and Joe Santo - who initially appear to be a couple. All the while, he tries to maintain a stormy relationship with Sarah, his girlfriend. All their hiding was for nothing because as the curtain rises, they are seen kissing by everyone. All they have to do is keep Chisholm and his mandolin, which he wants to play in the concert, away from Shaw until after the show; the solution is sleeping pills to knock Chisolm, and incidentally Hank, out. All they know is that he's a cowboy, and while Ellen is attracted to him, Grace dismisses him. All this characteristics make Uma choose him as the donor. All three are jailed, but Wally and Vida are bailed out by Wally's friend and carnival partner, Rex (Jim Varney). All three become romantically involved with one another. All three feature the same common thread: the Girl is from the future. All three of them overhear Miriam yelling at Buzzy for having Teddy stay overnight. All through the time the Girl and Gyeon-woo were seeing each other she had been seeing her dead boyfriend's mother, who wants to introduce her to a nice young man. All turns out well, with Dupree becoming a motivational speaker, Carl and Molly spending more time with each other, and mr Thompson accepting Carl as family. Allegra and Philip begin seeing each other, and Philip leaves Grace for good. Allegra goes back and forth on dates with Philip and Grace. Allegra goes on a date with

Philip, but she leaves after thoughts in her mind tell her it is wrong to be with a guy. Allegra meets a man named Philip (Justin Kirk) at a party, with whom she feels a connection. Allegra sees Grace outside of a movie theater and Grace cries about her boyfriend leaving her. Allen agrees to set him up on a duet with Kandi Kane, a British pop star with "a million hits online" and Ty agrees to think about in search of something new and willing to take any risk it takes. Allen also tells Elle that he admired her parents very much and the song that she accidentally over-recorded was "beautiful". Allen had intended to propose to her, but he secretly puts away his engagement ring after she confesses she has fallen in love despite herself. Allen offers Elle a job as an intern and even though this means supporting Spunn's biggest act: a bubblegum pop trio called Sensation, led by the horrendous Stephanie (Katherine Bailess). Allgood Butts is a young promiscuous male hairdresser whose goal in life is to sleep with as many women as possible (already in the first scenes we are told he has slept with 389 women). Allgood's struggle with his temptation becomes even more difficult when two attractive women enter his life. Allison's jealous square boyfriend, Baldwin, then starts a riot. Ally attends her sister's wedding with him while Colin and his band perform at a different wedding. Ally quickly realizes that her true feelings lie with Colin and that she and Jake are incompatible, breaking it off with him. Ally rejoices in the fact that Colin is indeed the 20th and last man she ever slept with. Ally then has to run to numerous weddings before she finally finds Colin and confesses her feelings. Ally then runs into "Disgusting Donald" (Chris Pratt), her once overweight ex-boyfriend who's now successful and good-looking, and his fiancee. Almost instantly, Tony and Thayer rush to Andie's side and beg her to keep quiet, when they do not realize she is still blissfully unaware. Amy informs the principal and gets Carl to testify against her. Amy is a single 29 year old Jewish woman. Amy is still posing as Johnny's wife Tillie, when she confronts Johnny right there at the party on his responsibilities as a husband and father. Amy leaves in frustration after she nearly kisses him, prompting a brief argument between her and Oscar where Oscar states that her relationship with Newman has no future. Amy modifies Tillie's new passport and travels to America by boat on the ticket Tillie had bought, posing as her best friend. Amy pretends to remember with fondness their six-week romance all those years ago, but problems arise when Johnny wants to get closer and demand his conjugal rights. Amy starts a pointless search for a "John Grey from Rochester" and finds nothing. Amy tries to get away by saying that he should fall in love again, since it was such a long time ago they met. Amy tries to win him back by kissing him and offering to spend the night with him, which Bernard accepts although he's thinking of Barbara the entire time. Amy visits him and he proposes to her from his sick-bed. Amy, acting on the growing resentment between them due to Elizabeth pursuing Scott and ignoring school rules, attempts to warn the principal about Elizabeth's embezzlement scheme, but he dismisses her claims as groundless. Amy, however, still risks being deported as an illegal alien with fraudulent documents, since the photographs prove that she in fact isn't who she has claimed to be. Anna Foster (Mandy Moore) is the daughter of President of the United States James Foster (Mark Harmon). Anna Karenina is the tragic story of a married aristocrat/socialite and her affair with the affluent Count Vronsky. Anna and Vronskaya have traveled and talked together in the same carriage. Anna and Vronsky reunite and elope to Europe, leaving Seryozha and Karenin's offer of divorce. Anna becomes increasingly jealous and irrational towards Vronsky, whom she suspects of having love affairs with other women. Anna begs him to come home, but he only says that he has no home any more, and leaves. Anna calls Brian for comfort and he rushes over to her apartment. Anna calls the ambulance and Edy is rushed off to the hospital. Anna cannot understand why she can attract a man like Levin, who has a young and beautiful new wife, but can no longer attract Vronsky. Anna comes to a bridge, where she meets the Jumping Germans, a bungee jumping group. Anna confesses that she loves him. Anna finally realizes that Edy was not cheating on her, and that the Susan that Edy was talking to was actually his oncologist. Anna finds her in the hotel and aids in her escape. Anna follows him and finds him on a lonely beach, where she tells him that she wants a "little Ludo" before they can talk about a "little Anna". Anna greets Rabbi Lewis (Eli Wallach) as he passes by and asks about their meetings together, referencing the class that Anna had told Jake briefly she had been taking, at which point it becomes clear that she had been taking classes to convert to Judaism. Anna has become intensely jealous of Vronsky and cannot bear it when he leaves her even for short excursions. Anna interprets this as an "evil omen". Anna is clearly drunk and is very upset. Anna is devastated. Anna is unable to hide her distress during the accident. Anna is uneasy about leaving her young son, Sergei ("Seryozha"), alone for the first time. Ben Stone (Seth Rogen) is laid-back and sardonic. Ben and Pete decide to go on a road trip to Las Vegas. Ben arrives just as Anna is being strapped into the harness, and insists on jumping with her. Ben begins an investigation into Frank, and eventually discovers that he was once married to a Maria Gonzalez. Ben calls him and leaves a furious voicemail, threatening murder. Ben decides that the best available option is to try to get Sam and Suzy aboard a crabbing boat anchored off the island so that Sam can work as a crewman and avoid Social Services, but before leaving he performs a "wedding" ceremony, which he admits is not legally binding. Ben disagrees, noting the differences between his and Missy's sex-based relationship and Jason and Julie's long-lasting friendship. Ben discovers that the gynecologist they had been seeing (Loudon Wainwright) is out of town, despite having assured them that he never took vacations. Ben discovers that they have boarded a Venice-bound train going in the opposite direction from Berlin. Ben discovers the microphone/transmitter but does not tell Sadie, for fear she will accuse him of lying and planting the bug himself. Ben expects a fight, but Hank explains that though he can't give Lou what Ben can, he's still a better man for her. Ben however disagrees with this, and decides to go to Jamaica. Ben is soon pardoned from community service for saving Hogue, allowing him to head to California for his job interview. Ben rescues her, and Anna and her family return to the United States. Ben returns to Grady, hoping to patch things up with Lou, who takes him back. Ben seeks advice from his friend Joel, who advises him to give up on Sadie, saying that there are other women like her out there. Ben soon confides to her that he grew up in a small town in rural Indiana, where his parents lived and died, and how he can't see himself confined to a small town. Ben soon finds the clinic work is more laid-back than the emergency room to which he is used with simple cases, such as spots before the eyes of an elderly patient not cleaning her glasses, fishing hook impaling and even reading mail for a young illiterate couple, Kyle and Mary Owens, whose baby he later delivers. Ben stays with her despite everything, and after coming very close to breaking up they attend couples counseling, led by Andie's friend Michelle. Ben then confronts Frank over Maria Gonzalez, believing him to be a hypocrite. Ben then starts to call Will "Dewey" (just as other students did at his old school), which stands for "DWI" ("Driving While Intoxicated"). Ben works at Fort Lebanon, a larger Khaki Scout summer camp located on st Jack Wood Island and run by Commander Pierce, who is Ward's boss and views Ward as incompetent. Ben writes his vows on the sands of the beach to impress Sadie and they reconcile, and Frank marries them there. Benjamin discovers that his wife bequeathed him an investment account, with instructions to use the money wisely while listening to his heart. Benjamin gives his son advice using his favorite principle, that you only need 20 seconds of courage to achieve great things. Benjamin initially rebuffs her but a few days later after his scuba demonstration on his birthday, he clumsily organizes a tryst at the Taft hotel. Benjamin is coerced inside to have a drink and Mrs. Robinson attempts to seduce him. Benjamin manages to keep the guests at bay by using a large cross and jamming it into the doors of the church. Benjamin pursues her there and tries to talk to her. Benjamin realizes that instead of trying to start over by forgetting his wife, he should accept that she will always be a part of him. Benjamin spends the remainder of the summer drifting around in the pool by day, purposefully neglecting to select a graduate school, and seeing mrs Robinson at the hotel by night. Benjamin takes Elaine on a date but tries to sabotage it by ignoring her, driving recklessly and taking her to a strip club. Benjamin takes his children to the restaurant where he met their mother, explaining that it was the point where their existence became a possibility. Benjamin visits Carls fraternity brothers who tell him that the wedding is in Santa Barbara, California that very morning. Benjamin's brother, Duncan (Thomas Haden Church), tries to dissuade him from the purchase, but Benjamin buys it anyway. Benjamin, visibly uncomfortable as his parents deliver accolades and neighborhood friends ask him about his future plans, evades those who try to congratulate him. Benji and Zack continue to bond, including Zack choosing to be partners with Benji instead of Casey during a class taught by Tiffani (Rebekah Kochan), resulting in Zack and Casey beginning to drift from one another. Bennett (Gary Owen) and his wife Tish (Wendi McLendon-Covey) are trying to get a spark back in their marriage. Bennett arrives and reveals that Emilio Lopez, Preston Blake's longtime butler is his illegitimate son and the true heir as a result of a younger Preston having an amorous affair with his maid in 1958 (at one point he had told Deeds that Blake treated him "like a son"). Bennett proceeds to write a series of enormously popular articles mocking Longfellow's hick ways and odd behavior, giving him the nickname "Cinderella Man". Bennett then wins $100,000 on a slot machine. Bernadine "Bernie" Harris abandons her own career dreams and desire of having a catering business to raise a family, and support her husband, who leaves her for a white woman. Bernadine gets a large divorce settlement from her ex-husband and moved on to a single father who lost his wife. Bernard Chanticleer (Peter Kastner), called "Big Boy" by his parents, is 19 but still lives with his overbearing, clinging mother (Geraldine Page) and his commanding, disapproving father (Rip Torn), who is Curator of Incunabula at the New York Public Library. Bernard also works as a low-level assistant at the library, where his father is constantly monitoring and admonishing him. Bernard finally rebels against his parents, telling them he's leaving and wants to get away from them, and then grabbing and running away with his father's most prized library item, the Gutenberg Bible. Bernard is jailed, but Amy bails him out and he realizes she's the girl for him, and they go off happily together. Bernard writes Barbara a gushing fan letter, to which she responds inviting him to visit her at the theater where she's appearing in a play. Bernard's father has also made a pass at Amy, who gets upset and tells Bernard. Bernard's mother also constantly mails locks of her hair to Bernard at his new residence. Bernard's mother blames Amy, calling her a tramp and forbidding Bernard from seeing her again. Bernard's worldly co-worker Raef Del Grado (Tony Bill) encourages him to date Amy because she's a "sure thing" a girl that will sleep with him but discourages him from trying to pursue Barbara. Bernard, followed by Raef and Barbara, returns to the library where his parents and Amy are waiting for him. Bernardo is dumped by his girlfriend and begins a period of meetings with his psychologist. Bernhard (Gregor Bloéb) had spotted them earlier and had alerted Johnny's mother. Bernice assumes different names and personalities whenever the mood hits her. Bert Harris works for a hotel as a bellboy. Bertani, Foussard, and the others blame Robie, because they are currently all under suspicion while the new Cat is active. Bertram, meanwhile, unaware of Sugarpuss' love for him, prepares to resume his research, sadder but wiser, until he discovers her true feelings. Beth and the Trinity help Denis and Rich get away. Beth breaks off before they go too far and Kevin and his gang show up again. Beth explains that she had just never been with a fat guy. Beth goes out with Denis for a smoke and to watch the moon. Beth in the meantime has become obsessive about her upcoming wedding plans, causing friction with Andrew and Sarah. Beth is dropped off at an empty house. Beth is making plans for her wedding with Andrew. Beth is meant to be a dream girl, but has glaring imperfections that shatter Denis' fantasy. Beth later notices that Kate is starting to fall for John. Beth lends him a poncho. Beth meets Sarah over there and Sarah decides to drop the idea. Beth shows up in her tiny blue car with her friends Cammy and Treece (the group of three is known as "The Trinity") at Denis' house that evening. Beth takes his shirt and holds it out the window to "air it off"; the shirt then flies out the window. Beth then crashes Kevin's Humvee into the house itself and the group escapes. Beth tries to reason with the divorcing couple of the weirdness, but Celeste rationalizes that it is better for her and Jesse to maintain their friendship. Beth's parents are reluctant to let her leave the house, especially during daytime, and refuse to tell her that she died. Betrayed, Claire turns away from John and the Secretary tells them to leave. Betrayed, John spirals into depression, crashing weddings alone and becoming nihilistic and suicidal. Betsy deceives Cynthia into thinking that Andy's car is an absolute wreck; Cynthia haughtily refuses to go to the Christmas Eve dance with Andy. Betsy decides she cannot go through with the wedding and escapes from Tommy. Betsy expresses her gratitude to Andy for a wonderful evening and leaves. Betsy gives Andy a handsome new radiator cap for his anticipated car, and after he leaves she sadly sings In-Between. Betsy is obviously taken with Andy but he does not reciprocate her admiration; he leaves as quickly as possible. Betsy's wedding ultimately goes on as scheduled, but is disrupted by a torrential downpour of rain. Betsy, from a moneyed family, offers to help Andy pay for his car, but he refuses her aid. Betsy's grandmother has been effusive about Andy Hardy and Betsy is thrilled to learn he will be her next door neighbor during her stay. Betty Compson and Mary Duncan play the objects of his attention. Betty being very impulsive, she wants to marry Art in two weeks. Betty is excited about helping the handsome stranger, and the two end up shortly thereafter making love. Betty secretly loved Boris, but could not fight her father's wishes, so she was married off to a gold digger. Betty seems to gently explain she is getting married to a man she very much loves, and Frank pensively accepts this news. Betty sees Barney wipe cream from Roxie's chest and misinterprets the move as a pass. Betty sets the backyard on fire, then commits suicide by taking sleeping pills. Between his day job and moonlighting as a chemist, Scott is run ragged, but he manages to (hopefully) fix Goop's major flaw: losing its strength in water. Between the religious conflict and their desire to spare the feelings of their mutual friend, the relationship is kept mostly secret, resulting in both humorous and harmful complications. Beverly Calhoun (Davies) impersonates the Prince of Graustark to claim his birthright while he recovers from a skiing injury. Beverly Hills banker/workaholic Jennifer (Tatyana Ali) comes home to her small Northern California town just before Christmas when her dad, Ted (Bill Cobbs), takes a bad fall while putting up decorations. Beverly decides to give up her lucrative career and return to her "philandering" husband and her life as a rich doctor's housewife. Beverly is offered the opportunity to star in a television commercial advertising Happy Soap. Bianca and Cameron share another kiss. Bianca and Ellen request divorces before the judge sends them all away. Bianca insists that she can make her own choices, so Kat agrees to go to the prom with Patrick, and Bianca decides to go with Cameron instead of Joey. Bianca is irritated that Cameron hasn't asked her to the prom, and so accepts Joey's invitation, but Walter won't allow it unless Kat goes too. Bianca leaves Nick, while Ellen storms out, still married to Nick, declared alive again. Bianca responds by kissing him. Bianca soon realizes, however, that Joey is shallow and self-absorbed, and asks Cameron for a ride home. Bianca wishes to date affluent senior Joey Donner, but Walter, an obstetrician worrisome of teenage pregnancy, will not allow his daughters to date until they graduate. Big Ain't Bad is a romantic comedy that redefines the measure of love. Big and Carrie combine their interests; Charlotte's nanny, Erin, turns out to be a lesbian and is no threat to her marriage; Miranda finds a new job at a more laid back and diverse law firm where she is appreciated, and Samantha stays the same, even meeting up with the Danish architect she met in Abu Dhabi for sex on the beach, this time a beach on The Hamptons. Big is silent upon hearing the news, and after saying a few words, hangs up. Big tells her that although he was "pretty torn up", he realizes that what she needs is something to remind her at all times that she is married. Bigfoot, who has evidently been using Doc to investigate Vincent's death, picks Doc up, but sets him up with a huge quantity of stolen heroin. Biggs' secretary, Beverly (Loretta Devine), becomes comically defensive and aggressive, believing Dudley is there to take her job. Bill (Buster Crabbe), takes her home, to live with his Mom, (Maidel Turner); and gives her a job at his drive-in restaurant. Bill Bowers (Jack Webb), a Hollywood screenwriter in civilian life, becomes his sidekick. Bill Dancer and his young companion Curly Sue are the archetypal homeless folks with hearts of gold. Bill and Connie flee the scene, and think each one is the one who shot Steve. Bill and Doreen argue, but are eventually reunited and get married. Bill and Lucia find Dedee and Matt, only to discover Dedee has stolen Tom's ashes and is holding them for ransom. Bill and Petronilla are a young couple on a yachting holiday. Bill arranges to return to America from England on the same ocean liner as Connie and her father (Walter Connolly). Bill arranges with the police for the charges to disappear and takes Muriel's mother home where he announces his intention to divorce Betty and marry his mistress, Deidre Chambers. Bill arrives, in the morning, to confront the drunken Jack, and take Sally home; but, when Jack is so drunk, he trips, and smashes his head, killing himself; Bill is under investigation for murder of the wealthy socialite. Bill asks Muriel to stay and help raise the kids; she refuses and returns to Sydney. Bill attempts to convince her to stay, proposing to her. Bill deserts the film and goes with Lili to Tijuana where, drinking heavily, he receives a telephone call from the Studio with the ultimatum that if he does not return they will get a replacement. Bill encourages her to talk to Sam, who pretends not to know her when signing Erica's copy of her novel. Bill eventually tracks down Matt and Dedee. Bill finds his love in New York and they have a long talk during a Central Park coach ride, and it seems the couple will be able to let bygones be bygones. Bill gets a reprieve from the governor, and Ann and the boys see him off as he reports for active military duty. Bill gets himself bailed out and catches up with Sheila. Bill gives up drinking and hanging out with his mate, Ginger Mick, and becomes a family man. Bill has regular sexual liaisons with his married neighbor, Tricia (Kristen Bell), with whom he occasionally jogs. Bill is a

Woolloomooloo larrikin, who vows to abandon his life of gambling (playing Two-up) and drinking after a spell in gaol following a raid on a two up game. Bill is arrested, because he never actually had custody of the child. Bill is given a tour of the school by Barnes's secretary, Ann Mitchell (Joan Barclay), and later takes her out to dinner. Bill is outraged and leaves Suzanne alone with the three men. Bill is shown hard at work in his tiny office at a film studio; Archie has somehow become his boss, and has just been promoted to head of the studio. Bill isn't worried at first because Mitch is obviously too old for Janet, but he comes to realize that she is indeed falling for Mitch a little more every day. Bill jokes about seeing him in the White House. Bill maintains a friendship with Tom's younger sister, Lucia (Lisa Kudrow), who idolized her brother. Bill offers her a ride home in a rainstorm, but is a little too attentive to her liking. Bill prefers Mayme over Janie and constantly shows his affection for her. Bill prepares to expose Connie when he learns that Grace plans to change her will to include Connie and baby Hughie. Bill proposes to her, but she declines, as she says she doesn't feel right about the decision without knowing her family. Bill reads Rusty's journal, which he has paid both Sam and Rusty to keep over the years. Bill reveals that he found out that Gladys' Yucatán divorce was not valid, but Gladys states she got a second divorce in Reno, so she and Bill are actually man and wife. Bill reveals to Sam that he walked out on Erica when Sam was a baby, and that when he came back six months later she accepted him, having waited the whole time. Bill shows Charles damning photographs. Bill takes Sylvia to dinner and the party but a quarrel ensues and she accuses him of insincerity. Bill's daughter Sam (Lily Collins) is a cynical college student who prefers one-night stands and hook-ups with people she knows are less intelligent than herself, in order to shield herself from love. Bill's relatives, upset about Tom's indifference towards Bill, forcefully relieve him of his duty as a pallbearer. Bill's son Rusty (Nat Wolff) is a high school student in love with a classmate named Kate (Liana Liberato) but lacks the courage to talk to her. Bill, a bit wary of Connie, questions her identity, believing she is after the family's money. Bill, having raised his children to be writers from birth, is thrilled, but becomes annoyed when she admits the book is not the one he had been helping her write. Billy carries a Polaroid camera with him everywhere, and his reminiscences are illustrated with Polaroid photographs. Billy crashes Rex Webster's (Paul Bartel) underwear shoot looking for Gabriel, but does not find him. Billy demurs, saying he needs some time away. Billy eventually tracks Gabriel down at Rex's party later that night and the two talk on the beach. Billy feels hurt and humiliated and even wonders if Gabriel used him to get his modeling career off the ground. Billy follows after him to Catalina with Georgiana, who, on the rebound from her boyfriend, Andrew (Christopher Bradley), hooks up with drug-addled island resident "Gundy" (Carmine Giovinazzo). Billy grows distraught and reverts to his carefree lifestyle. Billy instantly realizes that the two of them are in some kind of relationship with each other and Gabriel tells Billy straightforwardly, "Billy, I'm pretty sure what I'm supposed to want". Billy intervenes and challenges Eric to an academic decathlon to finally settle their feud. Billy is a successful entrepreneur in Malibu, California, who lives with his 31-year-old girlfriend Lisa. Billy mentions the Kinsey scale, on which Billy describes himself as a "perfect six," but Gabriel admits he does not know where on the scale he falls. Billy quickly becomes infatuated with Gabriel, but cannot figure out if Gabriel is really straight; Gabriel does little to help, continually sending ambiguous signals. Billy recruits him to model and the two develop a friendship (although Gabriel says that he has a girlfriend in San Francisco). Billy relates to Gabriel how confused he was when he came out, saying, "I swore to myself that if I could ever be there for somebody, I would, so that that person wouldn't have to go through all the shit I went through. Billy shoots his first setup with Gabriel, the Lancaster-Kerr kiss. Billy shows up at the lounge where Diana is singing and reveals his feelings for her. Billy stumbles on the opening question in the event, and Eric is given the chance to win the contest by answering a question about business ethics. Bruce agrees and gives him Orbit gum, to add to the alibi that he forgot something. Bruce also finds ways of using the powers to cause miraculous events to occur at otherwise mundane events that he covers, such as discovering Jimmy Hoffa's body or causing a meteor to harmlessly land near a cook-off, earning him his job back. Bruce and Grace announce their engagement on live television. Bruce creates a computerized system to receive the prayers and respond, but finds that the influx is far too great for him to handle even though God had stated that he is only receiving prayers from the Buffalo area and sets the program to automatically answer Yes to every prayer. Bruce gave up dancing after he was brutally bullied by older boys. Bruce ignores God and is initially jubilant with the powers, using them for personal gain such as potty training his dog, getting revenge on a street gang that assaulted him earlier, exposing a woman's underwear by blowing up her dress, transforming his beat up car into a Saleen S7, and sexually impressing Grace. Bruce is suddenly struck by a truck and regains consciousness in a white void. Bruce later receives a message on his pager directing him to an empty warehouse, where he meets God. Bruce returns to God, who explains that despite how chaotic things seem, there is always a way to make things right, and that Bruce must figure out a way to solve it himself. Bruce returns to his computer system, having briefly unplugged it, and goes about answering prayers manually as best he can. Bruce somehow convinces Eric that Polly isn't really interested in him, and that she only led him on so that Bruce could sell him the insurance. Bruce then begins to solve his problems in life practically, such as helping a man whose car has broken down, training his dog normally, and allowing Evan to have his job back. Bruce then uses his powers to cause Evan to humiliate himself on air, causing Evan to be fired in favor of Bruce as the new anchor. Bruce, however, suffers from constant bad luck, and reaches breaking point when he is passed over for promotion by his rival, Evan Baxter (Steve Carell), who then steals dialogue from Bruce's segment while accepting the promotion on air. Bruno amuses himself by continually asking Janet about her relationship with the millionaire. Bruno wakes up in bed next to Caroline, his long-time crush. Bruno, the hotel valet, is determined to get back to America after being deported and has compromising photographs of Wendell's father and Pamela's mother swimming nude in the bay. Brushing past Pamela, Scott kisses Boof as his father comes down and hugs the two of them. Bryan and Masha crash the jeep, which erupts into flames, and make an escape on foot. Bryan appears in the waves, unharmed, and they are reunited with Masha's family. Bryan barely escapes, while Brick calls Masha's father back in the USA and informs him of Masha's kidnapping, making it sound as if Bryan had been the kidnapper. Bryan searches for Masha back at the hotel, unaware she has been kidnapped. Bryce begins to see that Juli is smart, spirited and "iridescent", as Grandpa Chet calls her. Bryce is disgruntled from this seat change, because Juli had initially sat next to him where he could see her answers and copy off of them. Bryce looks over his shoulder for Julianna every time he's with Shelly, which causes Julianna to think he's being forced to date her. Bryce wants to punch him (to be exact "slug him"), but doesn't want to lose his friend, so he pretends to laugh. Bryce's family, however, has a new concern, salmonella. Bryce's father immediately expresses concern that the eggs might be fertilized, so Bryce and his best friend, Garrett, sneak over to her house and try to spy on the chickens in her backyard in search of a rooster (The chickens are a result of Juli's winning science fair project, which Bryce is a bit bitter about but means a lot to Juli) And Bryce doesn't know about the difference between chickens, hens, and roosters, so they head home without answers.

Bryce's father tells him to just say no to Juli about the eggs, but Bryce ends up just throwing the eggs away before his parents come down for breakfast. Bryce, being incredibly cute, gets auctioned off to Shelly and Miranda, the prettiest girls in his school, and Juli buys Jon out of pity, a boy who didn't get any offers. Bryce, being unbelievably shy and annoyed by all the attention, asks out Juli's arch enemy, Shelly Stalls, to get rid of his admirer. Bryce, in his relief, takes her hands, leans in and tries to kiss her, but she yanks back and runs away. Bryce, torn between feeling grateful and awkwardly guilty for hating her so much when she's helping him, follows the answers anyway until the end of the year. Bubba assures Phil they made a mistake, that "they don't know everything". Bubba tells Justine to meet him at his house. Bubba then begs Justine not to tell Phil about their sexual encounter. Buckley's parents, Doris (Billie Burke) and Herbert (Moroni Olsen), are delighted, as is Ellie, but Stanley broods that he is too young and vibrant to be a grandfather. Bucky is a regular at a local diner, where he has befriended Ruby, a 20ish waitress who is unsettled. Bud Nesbitt (Beau Bridges), who Wick claims is the cause of the Apollo 13 accident, tells Fred about the three commemorative coins given to him by President Johnson. Bud has been packing for a move to another job and city. Bud tells Wick about the situation but Wick ignores him. Bud, holding a bottle of overflowing champagne, finally opens the door, surprised and delighted that Fran is there. Buddy also doctors the remainder with fertilizer, which causes chaos at a demonstration the next day when a hamster Sherman uses to demonstrate the youth finding effects instead mutates and becomes an aggressive monster who violates Dean Richmond in front of a live television audience. Buddy then climbs onto the back of her motorcycle, and both couples happily drive away as the film closes. Buddy wows the crowd with his jazzy, breezy musical delivery and poised demeanor at the Purple Pit, a nightclub where the students hang out. Buddy, who is trying to sell the formula to a different company, quickly realizes where it is and steals some of it. Bulworth and Nina embrace and begin to kiss as people cheer. Bulworth emerges from the bedroom looking rested and, as he steps outside, he invites Nina to go with him; she eventually joins him, after some hesitation. Bulworth eventually makes it to a television appearance arranged earlier by his campaign manager, during which he raps and repeats verbatim statements Nina and D. Bulworth sleeps deeply for over 36 hours (with Nina tenderly watching over him), during which time the media is abuzz about his mysterious absence on election day. Bulworth wins the primary election by a landslide. Bulworth's fate is left ambiguous. Bulworth's socialist views, formed in the 1960s and 1970s, have lost favor with voters, so he has conceded to more conservative politics and to accepting donations from big corporations. Bunmi had stolen Pride's phone and sent Alan the message luring him to where Ina was being held. Bunny gets her revenge when she cuts in on Helen's dance and takes her partner. Burdett, still wanting the diamond for himself, pretends to work with Mooré, and gives him a fake plan as to how he would steal the diamond (which he had earlier related to Stan), having no trouble keeping ahead of his nemesis in the meantime. Burke Ryan (Aaron Eckhart), is a successful PhD. Burke and Nan are pleased to discover that they no longer need to behave like brother and sister. Burke dyes his hair and affects the voice and manner of the somewhat scatterbrained millionaire the best he can. Burke goes to Eloise, telling her that she had spent the last few days getting to know the part of him that was not available and wondered was she interested in getting to know the part of him that was available. Burke is pursued by the Master-at-Arms (Freddie Jones) who correctly suspects that he does not have a ticket. Burke is transferred to that ship to perform an operation. Burke overhears a scheme for Nicky to marry Nan and get his hands on her money. Burke tries various ruses to try to escape him, including dressing up as a doctor. Burly and his players concoct a plan to have another woman, hidden by shadows, pretend to be Darryl's wife, telling him everything he wants to hear. Burman. Burt and Verona bring a stroller as a gift, greatly angering LN as she and her husband Roderick (Josh Hamilton) are a "continuum home". Burt and Verona fly to Miami, where Courtney worries about his young daughter and the potential effects of a divorce on her. But then Ty Parker (Sterling Knight), a famous pop singer extraordinaire, shows up at Spunn, saying that he needs something different, even if it means his fans shunning him. But then it is she who reveals the truth: she knew he was really Catcher from the beginning, but she also lied as she is not Barbara Novak but Nancy

Brown, once one of Catcher's many secretaries, who fell in love with him while working at Know, but who turned him down when he asked her out because she did not want to be just another one in his long list of romances. But then, out of jealousy, informs the convent's Holy Mother of his deception, that he is actually neither deaf nor dumb. But there is a complication, asking Lucia if she can borrow her boyfriend, to accomplish her dream. But there is a deeper problem with their relationship, just hinted at under the opening credits in the prologue, and only disclosed at the end. But things get better for the Bellas when the Footnotes are later disqualified from the national competition because the lead singer was actually not in college yet, calling the Bellas to take part instead. But things get complicated when Russ pops in with a proposal and a mistaken assumption. But this simple transaction will bring problems after Uma gets pregnant, and the feelings that no one was waiting for appear, transforming the lives of each of the characters. But tomorrow she's off for school in France, and maybe she only granted this miracle as a parting gift for her long-time friend. But trouble erupts when he tries to integrate Mary Tate into his country-club scene. But trouble starts already when Rip overhears a conversation between a woman named Mary Peterman (Jane Wyman) trying to convince the mayor (Harry Holman) to expand the town and build a number of new buildings: a civic center. But unfortunately the show attracted not only good people, but also a gang of evil bandits trying to steal the money raised from the show. But what Marina fails to grasp about her powers is that she can see the future of strangers far more clearly than her own, and love is unpredictable no matter how many ways you have to look for it. But what began as a one-night stand turns into love as when her vacation is done, she flies to Hawaii every chance she gets to meet with her latest love interest, which soon gets disapproval from her ex-husband, her kids, and even her close friends. Calvin Weir-Fields (Paul Dano) is a young novelist who is struggling to recreate the early success of his first novel but unable to commit to any of his ideas. Calvin complains about Ruby's singing while she cooks and he reads. Calvin explains that he feels overwhelmed, and they make up. Calvin feels miserable and fearful Ruby will soon break up with him. Calvin finds

Ruby just as she is stepping into the pool with Langdon. Calvin hangs his head in anguish, before gently attempting to approach Ruby. Calvin has a dream in which he meets an attractive young woman, who draws a picture of Scotty and says she likes him. Calvin introduces Ruby to Harry, who is incredulous at first and suggests alternate explanations. Calvin replies, "I promise". Calvin tires of this and writes that Ruby is instead "filled with effervescent joy," at which point she becomes constantly happy. Calvin wakes and is inspired to write about her. Calvin writes a final page, which states that as soon as Ruby leaves the house she is no longer his creation, no longer subject to his will, and she is free. Calvin's brother Harry (Chris Messina) and sister-in-law Susie (Toni Trucks) come to visit and find several articles of women's clothing around the house. Cameron James, a new student at Padua High School in the Seattle area, becomes instantly smitten with popular sophomore Bianca Stratford. Cameron admits his feelings for her and his frustration with how she has treated him. Cameron begins to fall in love with her but is crushed after discovering her list and realizing he was just part of her "mission". Cameron leaves in a huff and Brandy cries. Cameron selects "bad boy" Patrick Verona, but Patrick scares him off. Camille and Jesse arrive at Britney's to offer their condolences, and when they see Britney and Brad (Jake McDorman) dressed up for the dance, Camille kicks her off the squad. Camille finds out and follows as well. Camille is nervous because she still has feelings over leaving her lover Pierre, who she tracks down in a park. Camille turns up with the ring and offers it back to Sonia, who says Camille has earned it and must keep it. Camille, after being persuaded by her friends to "do it for the squad," reluctantly invites her onto the squad. Camille, impressed by this, lets Britney cheer with them again. Cammy grabs a condom and they have sex, where it's revealed that he isn't gay but the two girls might be as the sex is mostly Cammy and Treece having sex with Rich just being a bystander. Cammy, Treece, and Rich try to tip over a cow but fail miserably. Can Terris and Sommers put aside their mutual animosity long enough to make a go of this production. Candace and Michael are married, and everybody, including Loretta, cheers and celebrates. Candace disagrees with Michael, saying that he needs to apologize to Loretta, because as a mother herself, she would be heartbroken if her own son did not let her go to his wedding. Candace tells Julian she regrets that one time she ever gave "extra favors" to a client and they reconcile. Cantankerous tycoon John Merrick (Charles Coburn) goes undercover as a shoe clerk at his own New York department store to identify agitators trying to form a union, after seeing a newspaper picture of his employees hanging him in effigy. Capt. Captain Barton learns that he is being transferred to Panama and asks Sheila to marry him and accompany him there. Captain Burke is sure he kidnapped and possibly murdered Diane, and is frustrated when the alleged victim shows up looking for her husband. Captain Spratt orders him to serve as an orderly, scrubbing the ship. Captain Tom Barton (John Hubbard), an old friend and potential suitor, invites Sheila and her Aunt Louise (Marjorie Gateson) to visit him and his mother (Ann Shoemaker) on his Army base. Cardinal Richelieu, who wants war between France and England, plans to expose the tryst and persuades the King to demand the Queen wear the diamonds to a soirée that the Cardinal is sponsoring. Carefree and true to her name, Breezy steals the show with both her charm and her lack of self-awareness. Carefree vagabond Johnny Rutledge (William Holden) is stuck in a small town when his medicine show employer and friend Professor Mordecai Ford (Charles Winninger) is put in jail. Carefully pursuing a relationship, they attend the Christmas pageant (involving David and Natalie, Harry and Karen's children, Daniel and Sam, et al) at the local school with John's brother. protect it from being stolen. Carface comes out of hiding and attempts to downplay his involvement. Carface then kidnaps David and demands that Charlie bring Gabriel's horn to Alcatraz Island and give it to Red in exchange for David's life. Carl and Dupree later make up on the beach, as Dupree apologizes for laughing at Molly's father's jokes. Carl and Molly get married. Carl and Molly take Dupree into their home, though clearly they are frustrated as he is disruptive and messy. Carl and mr Thompson finally reach an understanding and Thompson admits to his agenda of insulting Carl. Carl does his best to secure his client's freedom, but only succeeds in annoying the police lieutenant (Harry Morgan). Carl is a man of integrity and does not want to ruin Sarah's young dreams. Carl is enraged and strikes the military man. Carl is entertaining at the party ("The Last Dance"), and when she sees the depth of his love for her, she agrees to run away with him to Vienna. Carl kicks Dupree out, suspecting an affair, which shocks Dupree. Carl observes a woman (Penelope) in a stereo store who is being pressured by an overzealous sales clerk. Carl's earlier love, Manon, is another entertainer at the cafe, who has mixed feelings about Sarah ("If Love Were All"). Carl's fury boils over as he then imagines Dupree hanging out with mr Thompson and engaging in sex with Molly, causing Carl to jump across the table and attempting to strangle Dupree; mr Thompson hits Carl over the head with a candlestick shortly after. Carla Perez (portrayed by Carla Fabianny as a child and by herself as an adult) lives with her father Raimundo (Armindo Bião) and unnamed tuberculous mother (Juliana Calil) in a small, poor shack located somewhere in the middle of the sertão of Bahia. Carla is forced into a series of comic slapstick situations as she tries to keep them each one anxious to meet his daughter (Janet Margolin) for the first time from discovering her secret, while at the same time trying to keep Gia from running off to Paris to be with a much older married man who will take her to Brazil. Carla's ambition is to seek more independence from her family by earning a diploma from a trade school. Carla's father Radley (Tom Skerritt) is a dentist and recovering alcoholic. Carla, having an innate talent for dancing, soon is spotted by eccentric talent manager Pierre (Perry Salles) and his personal assistant Beto (Josevaldo Oliveira); she is initially enthusiastic about her newly acquired fame, but soon discovers Pierre is an unscrupulous man that is only interested into the profits of exploiting her. Carlson chases her home, and unknowingly starts a fire while trying to persuade her to come out. Carlson immediately falls for mr Schmidt's niece, Louise, but she resists him. Carlson wants to take Louise, so Ted hatches a plan to take Louise, and have himself and Carlson dressed alike, then switch places at the ball. Carmelo doesn't correct this impression and finds the ruse as a way to open up to her. Carmelo, is 30 years old and extremely shy. Carmen (America Ferrara) auditions for Perdita in a Vermont acting workshop. Carmen asks Tibby to help after she and her stepfather (Paul Coughlan) cannot get to the hospital in time. Carmen attends an actor workshop in Vermont, prompted by fellow Yale student, Julia (Rachel Nichols). Carmen believes Ian would prefer to be with Julia, so she declines his offers to practice and falters in rehearsals. Carmen is offered a high-profile job in Barcelona, and half-heartedly agrees to accept it, although soon after her father drives her to the airport she returns home, determined to follow in her father's footsteps and open a restaurant of her own. Carmen overhears Julia tell director Bill to replace Carmen, but he does not. Carmen talks about how she connects with Perdita, winning her the part, while Julia, though clearly jealous, promises to help Carmen. Carnegie Mellon English Professor Lawrence Wetherhold (Dennis Quaid) is a widowed parent of his alienated college son, James (Ashton Holmes), overachieving high school daughter, Vanessa (Ellen Page), and sibling to his adopted ne'er-do-well brother, Chuck (Thomas Haden Church) that he cannot evade enough. Carol leaves

Andrew and returns to America, and after a year of sobriety Andrew returns to the bottle. Carol leaves in a huff. Carol reveals she set up an ad for Sarah on an online dating site, perfectmatch.com, using a picture from Sarah's high school graduation. Carol, a super agent and star-maker, has just scooped her competition by selling the movie rights to the romance novel Whirlwind and is spending a fortune to find the perfect actor to play the male lead. Carole, meanwhile, decides to make Michael jealous by flirting with his nervous wreck of a friend, Victor Shakapopolis (Woody Allen). Caroline (Tomei) is a young woman in the Minneapolis/St Paul area working as a waitress and attending beauty school part-time who is always unlucky in love. Caroline agrees, but during the evening, Steve convinces her of his innocence, and as they drive back to school, the newlyweds make plans to return to California together. Caroline blithely tells Mason that she cannot decide now between Del Valle and Martindale, forcing Anthony into a new set of situations where he has to work overtime to win her back. Caroline blurts out the truth to the hotel management and Marisa is fired in front of Chris in Lanes hotel suite. Caroline feigns an accident, which leaves her confined to a wheelchair for a few weeks and gets nurse Carey to attend to Miranda. Caroline flirts with Paco Del Valle (Gilbert Roland) while at a charity ball in Alpine Lodge, Idaho, and Paco then asks mr Bliss (Charles Winninger), her father, for permission to marry his daughter. Caroline is a young woman who dreams of finding her prince charming. Caroline is engaged to Ronald Baker, but when he shows up, Miranda does not like him at all. Caroline reads about the forthcoming concert during her holiday, guesses what Barbara intends, and rushes back to take Miranda's place, foiling Barbara's scheme. Caroline, visibly upset, begins to doubt their relationship and almost runs into the hiding Cecil a few times, though Eliot manages to cover. Carrie arrives, tells her friends about the kiss, and asks them whether she should tell Big, as they have no secrets between them. Carrie lists her more than thirty sexual partners. Carrie observes that they may have missed an opportunity and then returns to America. Carrie opts to call Big to tell him. Carrie pretends that, now they have slept together, they will have to get married, to which Charles endeavours to respond before realising she is joking. Carrie runs away in panic and returns to the hotel. Carrie runs into her former lover, Aidan. Carrie visits Charles to apologise for attending the wedding. Carrie's marriage to mr Big has settled down, though they differ on how to spend their spare time. Carrie, Heather and Beth begin fighting. Carrie, Samantha, Charlotte, and Miranda meet up with each other. Carrie, however, is disappointed, as she had hoped for jewelry as a gift. Carried away by the emotion of the wedding, the two couples decide that they will also be married that day. Carrol Naish), the forger, and retrieves his money. Carter confesses that the surrender of the Germans was a lucky accident and that his role in it was more foolish than heroic. Carter confesses the truth. Carter had introduced the two, in an attempt to further endear himself to Helene, since he found out that Lita dreamed of being a stage performer. Carter is distraught, thinking he has lost the woman he loves. Carter is entranced with the sensible, earnest Helene. Carter is ordered to simply say he got too much credit for his war actions, but must give a hefty part of his paycheck to the American Legion. Carter mentions to Dodge that he is finished playing football, based on the threat the commissioner had made. Carter soon discovers Lexie's agenda and is doubly hurt when he learns that Dodge and Lexie are starting to show affections for each other and even shared a kiss. Carter's conniving manager is banned from football as well. Carter's manager resorts to shady dealing to cover it up, even bribing the original witness to change his story. Carter. Cas and Isabel decide to give it another try. Cas decides to ask Madge to marry him, even though her fatherJ. Cas disguises himself as a doctor and kidnaps the kid. Cas leaves town because of a letter from a dr Zernerke summoning him to Chicago, but promises to be back in time for the wedding. Casey

Carlyle (Michelle Trachtenberg), a very smart and talented science student, plans to pursue a scholarship to Harvard University. Casey agrees and all three pairs stumble on stage together before the curtain closes on the show. Casey asks Tina to be her personal coach and help her train for sectionals. Casey becomes suspicious of Benji's sexuality when he refuses to kiss Genevieve in a class, and so enlists the help of Penny to help. Casey declines the Harvard scholarship competition to devote herself to skating to her mother's dismay. Casey stands in for Zack, and is shocked to find Benji becomes sexually aroused during their kiss. Cash explains that Jack is experiencing a glimpse of an alternate universe in order to learn a lesson. Cash tells Jack that actions have consequence and that Jack has brought whatever is coming on himself. Cassandra and Rose soon become intrigued by the unmarried brothers Simon and Neil Cotton. Cassandra becomes obsessed with Simon, but suffers feelings of guilt since he is Rose's fiancé. Cassandra concludes that she must tactfully deflect Stephen's offer of love, and encourage him in his emerging career as a model and a film actor; join forces with Thomas to help their father overcome his writer's block by the drastic expedient of imprisoning him in a medieval tower; cope with her own increasing attraction to Simon; and record everything in her journal. Cassandra's father is a writer suffering from writer's block who has not published anything since his first book, Jacob Wrestling (a reference to Jacob wrestling with the angel), an innovative and "difficult" novel that sold well and made his name, including in the United States. Cassandra, the younger daughter and the first-person narrator of the novel, has literary ambitions and spends a lot of time developing her writing talent by "capturing" everything around her in her journal. Cassidy breaks down, tearfully telling Sutter that she can no longer avoid her future and that she needs to grow up, even if he does not. Catcher realizes he can do something and writes a new exposé "How Falling In Love With Barbara Novak Made Me A New Man". Catcher swears revenge on

Barbara and to undo the damage (as he sees it) done by her book by writing the "exposé of the Century" - he will prove to the world that, deep down, all women are the same, they all want love and marriage. Catcher's boss and best friend, Peter MacMannus, and Vikki take a liking to one another. Catching a taxi, where a couple leave, he recognises them as his wife and Strothers who have evidently just returned from their holiday in Tenerife. Catching on to this habit, Spike substitutes himself on the third pass, and gets wooed in a Charles Boyer voice (his lines recycled from The Zoot Cat). Catherine manages to straighten out the situation, and they finally have some privacy - in the ship's brig. Cathy Timberlake, a New York City career woman, meets Philip Shayne after his Rolls Royce splashes her dress with mud while she is on her way to a job interview. Cathy and Michael are distraught, and spend several days searching for Lina. Cathy goes to Lina's home to confront her. Cathy is naturally disturbed by this, but tells him to get it out of his system, which he takes as permission to return to Lina. Cathy knows Michael is still sleeping with Lina from time to time, but seems to accept it, although she says it would be difficult for her to see them in bed together. Cathy reads a book of sexual techniques, then ties Michael to the bed and drips candle wax on his chest. Cathy tells her mother she's never been happier in her life. Cathy then goes to a local bar intending to sleep with another man as a way to get revenge against Michael for cheating on her. Cathy's complaints about the umpire while seated alongside Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Yogi Berra (playing themselves) cause umpire Art Passarella to throw all of them out of the game. Caught between the pressure from Kranski and the demands of the art world, Vince has to cleverly maneuver his way out to become his own man and his own artist. Cecil and Edith leave together and return married - though the ceremony involved the Beadle giving away the bride. Cecil annoys everyone by pacing around and reading aloud from a light romance novel that contains a scene suspiciously reminiscent of when George kissed

Lucy in Florence. Cecil is a sophisticated and "superior" Londoner who is desirable in terms of rank and class, even though he despises country society; he is also somewhat of a comic figure in the novel, as he gives himself airs and is quite pretentious. Cecil proposes to Lucy twice in Italy; she rejects him both times. Cecil proposes yet again at Windy Corner, and this time she accepts. Cecil wakes up Eliot, and he rushes to get ready in time for their arrival, and even though the night before had been completely innocent, he panics while getting ready and accidentally puts on Cecil's underwear instead of his own. Cecilia must choose between them and she decides to choose the real person of Gil rather than the fantasy figure of Tom. Cedar calls an expert who diagnoses manic depression based on Babe's articles and Deeds' current behavior; he gets Deeds' Mandrake Falls tenants, eccentric elderly sisters Jane and Amy Faulkner (Margaret Seddon and Margaret McWade), to testify that Deeds is "pixilated". Cedar gives his cynical troubleshooter, ex-newspaperman Cornelius Cobb (Lionel Stander), the task of keeping reporters away from Deeds. Cedar tries to get Deeds' power of attorney in order to keep his own financial misdeeds secret. Cedric (Kevin Hart) begins by saying how Las Vegas has always been a place for casinos and showgirls, and is the perfect place for couples to get married. Cedric and his friends are all in Las Vegas for the wedding of Michael (Terrence J) and Candace (Regina Hall), with her son Duke (Caleel Harris) and mother (Angela Gibbs) joining them. Cedric books himself a lavish suite and intends to go all out for a wild weekend. Cedric finds himself in trouble when Gail finds out that he's been using her card to pay for his expenses, running her up to $40,000 in charges. Cedric tries to claim the prize as it was his dollar, though everybody else tries to hold him back from fighting Bennett. Cedric, feeling like a failure as a best man, packs his bags to leave Vegas; however, with the help of his personal butler, Declan (Jim Piddock), he finds another venue. Ceghe (Cremonini) and Berni (Fasolo) are close friends who are both uneasily transitioning into their adult lives. Celeste (Kim Basinger) is an alien sent on a secret mission to Earth and Steven Mills (Dan Aykroyd) is a widowed scientist who is working on different ways to send radio waves into deep space. Celeste (Rashida Jones) and Jesse (Andy Samberg) are best friends who start dating in high school and eventually marry young. Celeste Talbert (Sally Field), the long-time star of the daytime drama The Sun Also Sets, is targeted by her ambitious co-star Montana Moorehead (Cathy Moriarty); Montana connives to supplant Celeste as the show's star by promising sexual favors to its producer, David Seton Barnes (Robert Downey, Jr). Celeste and Jesse still get along well. Celeste and Jesse's continuing closeness after their separation and in the process of divorcing becomes increasingly annoying to their mutual engaged best friends, Beth (Ari Graynor) and Tucker (Eric Christian Olsen). Celeste begins to finally move on with her life and with Paul. Celeste believes that Riley is angry over the logo she designed for her that unintentionally resembles a penis going into a butt. Celeste crashes a party hosted by Steven's brother Ron (Jon Lovitz), where she immediately draws attention to herself by making dated references to old TV shows and political slogans under the mistaken belief that it was current (her superiors had just collected the information, which had taken 92 years to get from Earth to her home world). Celeste decides to separate but promises to stay friends and date other people. Celeste encounters new experiences such as sneezing, sexual intercourse, and love. Celeste encourages him to keep fighting for it and they have one last kiss. Celeste is a successful trend analyzer and runs her own media company with her partner, Scott (Elijah Wood). Celeste is at first content with her current situation until they spend a night together. Celeste later gets a call from Riley asking her to come over. Celeste plans to depart once she discovers the truth, but is put in a quandary by Jessie, who says it will devastate her father, for whom Celeste has now developed feelings. Celeste realizes that her decision to divorce Jesse was impulsive and selfish, and wants to reunite with him. Celeste wishes Jesse well. Celeste's inexperience almost results in her exposing herself as alien when she struggles with simple tasks like trying to kiss for the first time or cooking. Celeste's media company has just signed Riley Banks (Emma Roberts), a teen pop-star whom Celeste does not respect and had openly bashed during a previous television interview. Celia Amonte (Sofia Milos) is a Portuguese American widow who lives in New Bedford, Massachusetts with her daughter Vicky (Emmy Rossum). Celine Naville (Diaz) is the spoiled twenty-something daughter of a wealthy businessman. Celine easily slips free but decides to stick around. Celine hurriedly drives him back to the city, to be operated on by Elliot (the closest thing she can find to a discreet medical specialist). Celine shoots Robert and the bullet passes through, to hit Mayhew in the shoulder. Centuries pass. Certain that Augie is covering for Dick, the next day Isolde tells Alice, who promises to repay the money. Certain that he's facing an imminent demise, George confesses to Virginia that he's had an affair with her best friend Jane Richards (Catherine McLeod). Certain that their marriage is now imminent, Sagamore meets the terms of the will by purchasing Kabir's medical papers for £15,000. Chad asks Taylor out, and Sharpay makes peace with Gabriella. Chad then asks Taylor to go to prom with him with a cheesy pick-up line. Chadwick Gates (Elvis Presley) has just gotten out of the Army, and is happy to be back in Hawaii with his surfboard, his beach buddies, and his girlfriend Maile Duval (Joan Blackman). Chained to an engine block in Wayne's garage, Judith convinces D. Chalet Girl Georgie (Tamsin Egerton) is sent to help Kim out but doesn't seem to like her as she is anything but posh or glamorous and she can't ski or snowboard as she has never been to the Alps. Chalky tries to get the kids in trouble by informing Barnes of their plans to run away, but in an effort to establish a code of honor, Barnes punishes Chalky for being an informer. Chance realizes he has fallen in love with Delilah and they head out of the park. Chandler is not married, so Warren volunteers his long-suffering fiancée, Gladys Benton (Jean Harlow), over her loud protests. Changing his mind, Evan goes to Quincy's job and tells him that he thinks he's in love with Nicky, and that she's been seeing another man. Chaperoning the pair is Aunt Albertina (Jessie Royce Landis). Char unwittingly orders Ella to marry him, causing Ella to will herself to defy the order out of her desire to protect him and the kingdom from her curse. Charity decides to seek some cultural enlightenment from the YMHA on 92nd Street, where she gets stuck in a broken elevator with shy tax accountant Oscar Lindquist. Charity lies, saying she works for First National City, Williamsburg Branch. Charles Bonnet (Hugh Griffith) is a highly skilled art forger who pretends to be an art collector. Charles Lodge (William Powell), a free-spirited bohemian who lives in a cluttered car trailer, disrupts the well-ordered life of successful, hardworking businesswoman Margit Agnew (Myrna Loy) when he convinces her younger sister Irene (Florence Rice) that she should become an actress. Charles agrees to both terms. Charles agrees to meet with Lili that same night at the Oyster Bed Café, located down by the docks. Charles and Tom discuss whether hoping to find your "one true love" is just a futile effort and ponder that, while their clique have always viewed themselves as proud to be single, Gareth and Matthew were a "married" couple all the while. Charles and his single friends wonder whether they will ever get married. Charles arranges for a wedding, ostensibly to marry Irene, but actually as a ploy to simultaneously reconcile Irene and Waldo and win Margit's hand. Charles attends, depressed at the prospect of Carrie marrying Hamish. Charles brings Zolotov and Bellows to the restaurant, and demands that Lili leave town never to return - he doesn't wish to be associated with the kind of woman she is. Charles confesses that he is married, and Jean replies tenderly, "So am I, darling". Charles confesses that, while standing at the altar, he realised that for the first time in his life he totally and utterly loved one person, "and it wasn't the person standing next to me in the veil".

Charles encounters Carrie again, but she introduces him to her fiancé, Sir Hamish Banks, a wealthy politician. Charles finds Lili and Robert talking, and promises to settle Robert's loan debt if he takes Lili out of New Orleans. Charles has a crisis of confidence, which he reveals to his deaf brother David and Matthew. Charles has decided to marry Henrietta. Charles hears of the stories and is upset, challenging Zolotov to a duel. Charles hopes to start over with Helen, but during a family dinner, she gives him her wedding ring and signed divorce papers and tells him she will always be his friend. Charles is appreciative and empathetic but does not requite her love. Charles is cautioned against this infatuation by his buddy Arthur. Compulsive gambler Charlie Gordon, cons his close friend and brother-in-law, widower Herb Sullivan, whose recently deceased wife, Susie Gordon-Sullivan, was Charlie's sister, into an all expenses-paid luxury Holland America Mexican cruise. Concerned about the approaching Parents Day, Dean Clinton, meanwhile, commands Steve's professors, who have penalized him with only fifty-five demerits, to bear down on him. Concerned about their relationship, Annette uses her influence to get Jonathan's work turned into a musical comedy. Concerned, Kabir hurries to the reception where Epifania is to bid farewell to her previous existence. Concert pianist Eric Phillips (David Niven) has been on the road touring for twenty-one years when he finally returns home. Concluding that Lucy remembers him, he returns home. Confirmed bachelor Jud Parker (Larry Parks) likes his life the way it is. Confronted by them, Deion declares defeat and runs off, effectively ending the marriage. Confronting Jeremy about abandoning him, he learns that Jeremy has secretly continued his relationship with Gloria. Confronting him in the grocery store below Daniels Chinatown office, Audrey asks Daniel if he is willing to fight to save their relationship. Confused and angry, Jjaks throws the manager outside and threatens to kill him. Confused and distraught, Rosemary calls Hal a "psycho" over the phone and effectively breaks up with him. Confused and relieved Raymond leaves the bank and intends to return to Rio. Confused at first, Larry sees Mike back behind the bar and realizes he's back in his old life. Confused over who she prefers, she retracts her acceptance of both proposals and becomes engaged to a bank teller. Confused, he goes to their house and sees Beth through a window. Confused, he questions Maude as to her meaning and she reveals that she has taken an overdose of sleeping pills and will be dead by morning. Confused, she visits her grandparents for her birthday. Confusion abounds when Nancy later visits Paul at his office and tries to accept the marriage proposal she thought he had made. Connie (Nia Vardalos) and Carla (Toni Collette) are two performers whose lifelong friendship and co-obsession with musical theater have brought nothing but career dead ends. Connie accepts a lucrative settlement and leaves for Europe, thus leaving Dill free to marry Mary. Connie allows Joe to remain in the apartment as he has only a few days before being shipped out to Africa. Connie and Carl drive to Steve's hotel to give him the money. Connie and Jim argue about the building and Bobbie, of whom Connie is still jealous, and Jim storms out of their apartment to sleep in a hammock in the back yard. Connie bonds with Grace. Connie confesses the whole story to Grace, who says she'll get over it, adding that she'd like more grandchildren. Connie decides to run away anyway. Connie explains about Steve and the bum, to the discomfort of Carl and the amusement of the lieutenant, and Steve is released, because her story corroborates in every detail the story Steve had already told the lieutenant. Connie grows angry when Pendergast thinks only of himself. Connie leaves Nick, and his performance at work suffers; the once cocky, boastful controller is sent home after being responsible for two deals (near mid-air collisions) in one shift. Connie pursues an affair with David Jardine (Raymond Hackett), son of the department store owner. Connie returns home to find Grace has had a heart attack because of her absence. Connie reveals herself to Jeff, who arrives after the chaos. Connie then reveals she is marrying Carl on New Year's Day; Steve lets her know he thinks her decision is a mistake. Connie then sees Steve, but when he insists that she stop grieving for her dead husband, she leaves. Connie there meets Bill (also played by Fraser), Hugh's identical twin brother. Connie's anger is deflected by a newspaper story concerning mrs Frazier, a woman she and Jim saw in a nightclub with Charley, who has been cheated by an "elderly Casanova" named Charley Price. Connie's mother married for love, not security, and Connie is determined not to repeat her mistake. Connie's protests make Grace want to include them even more. Connie, realizing her old companion met someone, takes Rover back to the farm to stay. Connor Mead (Matthew McConaughey) is a famous photographer and confirmed womanizer. Connor also sees that Jenny is being comforted by Brad (Daniel Sunjata), and is upset that his own actions and attitude are bringing the two closer. Connor attempts to mend the situation but only makes things worse, and Paul tells him to leave. Connor awakens in the Mead home and learns that Sandra has called off the wedding and is on her way to the airport. Connor helps Jenny to restart the wedding, which he photographs, and afterwards he reconciles with Jenny by showing her the picture he still carries of her as a child and by promising to always be there when she wakes up. Connors is employed by a SPECTRE type organization named ERIS led by dr Brinkman, and his henchman François Molay. Conrad apologizes to Audrey for her bad day, and informs her that he could see himself going to Middleton; Audrey tells him she no longer wants to go there. Conrad realizes his interest is in radio. Conrad says he's keeping his options open. Conrado teaches Tati the correct behavior of a woman and how to seduce her mate. Consequent to their mutual discoveries, Maurey becomes pregnant. Consequently, he must write everything down; who he knows, where he should be, even where he works. Consequently, her boyfriend Copee (Louis Gossett, Jr), a black activist with an identity crisis, is enraged when he finds out about the pregnancy, and tries to kill Elgar with an axe. Consequently, troubadour is ushered to tell the audience the story at the very last minute. Considering it as "simple donation" in which each person would later follow their own lives. Constance tries to send her husband to London but the man is manipulated by Richelieu and does not go, so d'Artagnan and his friends intercede. Consuelo insists she no longer has any interest in Tony and offers to cancel the rest of Terry's debt so he can join Chappie. Contemplating suicide, Epifania melodramatically plunges into the Thames, and when dr Ahmed el Kabir, a self-effacing, selfless Indian physician who runs an inadequately equipped clinic for the poor, ignores her plight and paddles past in his rowboat, she swims to shore and accuses him of being an assassin. Continuing pre ballet he decides to invest the money (Imagine Reprise 2). Continuing to fall to Earth, he sees that the horn ended up somewhere in San Francisco. Contrary to the stereotype of his social standing, Ah Loong is an incurable romantic with an unlikely hobby: He loves to read and write poetry. Conversation between Tom and Julie is stilted and awkward, while Scott slips up and reveals that Tom still lives with his mother. Convinced it was marriage that disrupted their relationship, Helen suggests they live apart but remain lovers. Convinced not to kill himself, Willoughby leaves, carrying a fainted Mitchell in his arms, and Connell turns to Norton and says, "There you are, Norton. Convinced of her worth by the quality of her cooking and her insistence on finishing her chores before she would leave with him, he proposes and she accepts despite knowing each other for only a few hours. Convinced that Don wants to be with Lyda, Prudence plans to return to the States, with a chaotic good-bye in the train station from all the friends she has made in Rome. Convinced that Lady Rockburn can only be Leslie, Logan tries to back out from the case, until Lord Rockburn produces his chief witness the maid, who shows no sign of recognising Logan after their brief encounter in the hotel corridor. Convinced that he truly loves Jill, Lucy admits that Jill is catching a Greyhound bus cross-country to Hollywood. Convinced that they came through, Showboat pays what he owed them just as Sex as a Weapon arrives. Convinced the zombies may be treatable, Deb traps Ruby in the car's trunk. Convinced, Patrizio makes a parlay with his gambling friend: if the Eagles win their next game and Tiffany and Pat score 5 out of 10 in their dance competition, he will win back double the money he lost on the first bet. Convinced, he gives Toto permission to marry Diane. Cookie is horrified that she has been trying to reunite them, and Lauren admits that she was ashamed to tell her mother-with-a-perfect-marriage about her own failure. Cookie says that she always has been and always will be proud of Lauren. Cookie tells Lauren that the magazine article praises Junior Wedding Planners like Lauren - G is not even mentioned. Coop (Michael Showalter) has a crush on Katie (Marguerite Moreau), his fellow counselor, but has to pry her away from her rebellious, obnoxious, and obviously unfaithful boyfriend, Andy (Paul Rudd). Cooper discovers him, and Drake manages to find the necklace even though Cooper tries to disguise him. Coping with his loneliness, Barry calls a phone-sex line, but the operator attempts to extort money and sends her four henchmen, who are brothers, to collect. Corey meets up with a dejectedJ on the roof and confesses that she does love him. Corey, however, refuses to go down without a fight, and the ensuing mayhem that follows pits brother against brother and forces the Colorado wild boys to finally grow up and decide what kind of men they really want to be. Corie and Paul Bratter are a newlywed couple. Corkle explains about Joe, mr Jordan and the body-switching, but of course the police detective (Donald MacBride) thinks he is a nut. Corkle has hired a private investigator to find him. Corkle races down to the dressing room. Corkle tells the detective, who promptly has mrs Farnsworth and the secretary arrested. Cormack gets into a brawl with Michael over Paula, posing as Clarice. Cormack's solicitor visits Paula as Clarice is asleep and unseen. Corrie wants Paul to become more easy-going: for example, to run "barefoot in the park". Cosmo and his father emerge from upstairs, and the older man cajoles Cosmo into agreeing to pay for Loretta's wedding. Cosmo dislikes Johnny and is reluctant to commit to paying for the "real" wedding Loretta insists on, while Rose is pleased that Loretta likes Johnny but does not love him; she believes that one can easily be driven crazy by a partner whom one loves. Cosmo, inspired by a scene in The Duelling Cavalier where Lina's voice was out of sync, suggests that they dub Lina's voice with Kathy's. Costikyan enters the hotel room and suffocates Sam by holding his hand against his mouth. Counselors have one last chance to have a romantic encounter with another person at Camp Firewood. Count Basie's orchestra is playing at the ball when Fella makes his grand entrance. Count Dzerzhinsky is Pampinea's fiance who she has never met. Count Sandor is pleased with this peculiar arrangement, as he has found Johann to be the perfect butler and does not wish to break in a new man. Courtney arranges for her and Christina to travel to Somerset where Peter's brother's wedding is to take place and they meet Jane's boyfriend as a recurring gag they indicate he is well endowed causing misery and enjoyment from Jane. Courtney ignores Taylor in every possible way. Courtney rejects Royce, who tauntingly tells Nikko that Ta-Da will beat Spectacular. Courtney's mother tells Nikko that he can bring some good and change to the "Spectacular. Courtney, instead of being impressed, is upset, accusing Nikko to have betrayed her by practicing another routine behind her back, and then leaves. Craig Blake (Jeff Bridges) is a young Southern man born of a wealthy family, but left lonely and idle after his parents died in a plane crash. Craig answers the door, reads the note, sees her at the bottom of the steps and closes the door on her. Craig asks Megan to go out drinking and they later have sex. Craig has finally "found himself" and discovered a true place in the sun, and true friendships, and he mocks his former boss Jabo with an exaggerated bodybuilding pose - acting as a final burning of the bridge between his old life and his new one. Craig reluctantly allows her to stay and gradually begins to trust her. Craig, with Mary Tate as his guest (dressed inappropriately in a garish and revealing pink dress), is enthusiastic about Joe Santo's upcoming musical performance for the night. Crash also talks about the pleasure of life in "The Show" (Major League Baseball), which he briefly lived for "the 21 greatest days of my life" and to which he has tried for years to return. Crash forces Nuke to learn "not to think" by letting the catcher make the pitching calls (memorably at two points telling the batters what pitch is coming after Nuke rejects his calls), and lectures him about the pressure of facing major league hitters who can hit his "heat" (fastballs). Crash immediately begins calling Ebby by the degrading nickname of "Meat", and they get off to a rocky start. Crash joins another team, the Asheville Tourists, and breaks the minor-league record for career home runs. Crash tells her that he is thinking about becoming a manager for a minor-league team in Visalia. Crash then leaves Annie's house to seek a further minor-league position. Crash then presents himself at Annie's house and the two consummate their attraction with a weekend-long lovemaking session. Crash then retires as a player and returns to Durham, where Annie tells him she's ready to give up her annual affairs with "boys". Crawl leaves to head back to A. Crawl rebounds though, and begins to prove himself an avid farmer, quickly learning how to perform each task he's given. Crestfallen, he goes to the bank to close his account. Crick is the epitome of the macho man stereotype, with his big pectorals, conceited attitude, and abusiveness. Crick leaves, and Patty tries to help Matthew, but Matthew can't help but think of Patty's reputation as a "slut". Crick makes a pass at Matthew in drag while he fights with Patty. Crick sees that Matthew wants Patty, but Matthew has him arrested for sexually assaulting him (when he was dressed as Francesca). Crises abound. Cristabel jogs on the beach every day with many suitors trying to catch her eye, including an albino stalker. Cristina is won over by the offer almost at once, but Vicky is unimpressed and reluctant; she however eventually decides to accompany her friend anyway, mainly to watch over her. Cristina realizes that the ex-spouses are still in love, and María Elena suggests that Cristina may be the element that can give balance and stability to their relationship. Cristina then moves in with Juan Antonio and begins to discover more about his past. Crosby is also heard singing 'Our Big Love Scene' on the radio when Jill is showing Sylvia her apartment. Crosby sings 'After Sundown' at the party. Crowchild, who has similar emotions, reveals to her that he was adopted by Aucoin's father and that he himself is rich, but posing as a poor artist to be better received by the community. Crushed, Elle moves in with her uncle Allen (Thomas Calabro), who runs a small, independent record company called Spunn Records. Crushed, Jamie withdraws to his French cottage where he meets Portuguese housekeeper Aurélia (Lúcia Moniz), who does not speak English. Cry-Baby invites Allison to a party at Turkey Point, a local hangout spot for the drapes. Cry-Baby is blamed for the fight and sent to a penitentiary, outraging all his friends and even Allison's grandmother, who is impressed by Cry-Baby's posture, manners, and musical talent. Cry-Baby is released, but immediately insulted by Baldwin, who after revealing that his grandfather is the one who electrocuted Cry-Baby's father, challenges him to a chicken race. Cry-Baby wins, as Baldwin chickens out, and is reunited with Allison. Crystal and her sole remaining servant, Clara (Greenwood), have him take the place of the departed butler. Crystal does not correct Clara's incredulous assumption that it was Claude who ripped it. Crystal has carefully kept the news of her engagement from him. Cuba Gooding, Jr. Cugats band has a contract to perform at the Grand Hotel, and Dick goes with them. Cummings shows his badge and reveals himself as "The Hawk", a well-known Federal agent, as he arrests Gus and Sergei. Cummings then takes Lou away in an open horse-drawn carriage instead of the paddywagon into which all the other criminals have been loaded. Curious, Brad opens the envelope to find a great deal of money. Curious, he asks Ed about it and is given the history and tactics of men who have successfully committed adultery. Curt accompanies Steve, last year's high school student class president, and Laurie, the current head cheerleader, to the back-to-high-school sock hop. Curt and Steve are scheduled to travel the next morning to Northeastern United States to start college. Curt replies probably not, intimating that he decided to go to college and will be leaving that morning. Curt waits by the telephone booth and early the next morning, he is awakened by the phone ringing. Curtis arranges for a genuine Justice of the Peace to participate in a wedding scene, resulting in (unknown to her) their actual marriage on stage. Curtis finds himself imprisoned in the guardhouse, where he encounters the visiting Sheila and quickly spins his own web of lies (including a fictitious promotion to Captain) in an attempt to impress her and win her heart. Curtis flies in to deliver the news about the Toy Santa's coal binge. Curtis' friends hold a demonstration to convince Sheila to return to the show. Cut back to present day, the marriage counselor has finished the story and Lisa wonders how the story ends. Cut to a surprisingly long ballet dream sequence of his travels (Peters Ballet). Cynthia Pilgrim (Betty Grable) is the top typewriting (Typewriter) student of the first graduating class of the Packard Business College in New York City, and as such she is offered a position with the Pritchard Shipping Company in Boston. Cynthia and Jason share drinks and end up becoming intimate. Cynthia asks for an opportunity to prove she's as efficient as her male counterparts, but John refuses and offers her train fare back to New York. Cynthia finds lodgings at Catherine Dennison's (Elizabeth Patterson) boarding house, where she meets an eclectic group of tenants, including poet Leander Woolsey (Allyn Joslyn), artist Michael Michael (Arthur Shields), and musician Herbert Jothan (Charles Kemper). Cynthia is delighted to discover their efforts were unnecessary, because mrs Pritchard proves to be down-to-earth and a supporter of Cynthia's desire to be treated equally in the workplace. Cynthia shows off her newly found martial art abilities, and ms Stern learns a valuable lesson on gender equality, as Matthew stands up to her in front of the class, to an ovation. Cynthia sues him for breach of contract, but in court Anthony argues he refused to sing for her because she does not appreciate his talent, and the case is dismissed. Cécile arrives home and has another fight with Louise. Cécile comes back home and finds that Louise has moved back in, when she discovers the reason (Louise had cheated on her boyfriend and he dumped her) she is so angry that she slaps her daughter and also draws a conclusion that Agnès is the one having an affair with

Alain. Cécile confronts Georges about the truth related to her husband's whereabouts but he does not betray anything and acts surprised when she tells him that Alain is not in Paris. Cécile goes to the school and finds that everyone is celebrating Jeanne's release from prison. D represents Distraction. D'Artagnan and his friends, now recovered from their injuries, return to Paris. D'Artagnan hires a servant (Planchet), finds lodgings, and reports to Monsieur des Essart. D'Artagnan is thus able to return a complete set of jewels to Queen Anne just in time to save her honour. D'Artagnan meets Milady de Winter officially, and recognizes her as one of the Cardinal's agents, but becomes infatuated with her until her maid reveals that Milady is indifferent toward him. D'Artagnan offers the letter to Athos, Porthos, and Aramis in turn but each refuses it, Athos because it is below him, Porthos because he is retiring to marry his wealthy mistress and Aramis because he is joining the priesthood. D'Artagnan resolves to avenge himself upon the man (who is later revealed to be the Comte de Rochefort, an agent of Cardinal Richelieu, who is passing orders from the Cardinal to his spy Lady de Winter, usually called Milady de Winter or simply Milady). D'Artagnan seriously wounds Jussac, one of the Cardinal's officers and a renowned fighter. D'Artagnan, though heartbroken and full of regrets, gets the promotion he coveted. DJ Heidee receives a call from a girl named Melissa (Megan Young) who is asking advice on how to break up with her boyfriend Andrew (Gerald Anderson). DJ, Karan, Aslam, Sukhi, and Laxman decide that they must emulate the early freedom fighters and resort to violence to achieve justice. Dado Tagalog and Manuel dela Cruz are two Overseas Filipino workers employed with Giant Bicycles in Taiwan. Dado calls Anna and asks for forgiveness. Dado foolishly decides to break up with Anna on her birthday, which he had forgotten all along. Daisy and Ally's friends worry she is falling for Colin and warn her off him, reminding her of his promiscuous nature. Daisy and Kat bond when Kat is devastated after Tim's and her evening together and

Daisy comforts her baby sister. Daisy breaks up with him, believing that his family's remarks were harmless and that he was simply using her to show up his parents. Daisy is sad so she goes and sees Nana and takes her anger out on her. Daisy just wants to find love through lust while trying to get out of Mystic. Daisy meets a handsome young man named Charles (Adam Storke) at a bar, and the two are immediately attracted to each other, and begin a relationship, much to her mother's dismay, believing that the relationship will prevent her making something of herself like Kat. Daisy says that she must marry someone who is of royal blood, and Minnie insists that she cannot marry someone she does not love. Daisy tells Nana of her strong and blossoming romance with a young man named Ethan and her problems at school because she's Jewish. Dal is the main suspect, but Inspector Doremus does not believe him to be guilty, and gives the resourceful lawyer the freedom to investigate on his own. Dal negotiates with gangster Kindland to retrieve letters embarrassing to Donna. Dal runs into an old flame, Jerry, now wed to a lawyer named Clas- son. Dal sets up a trap in a Greenwich Village apartment, pretending to have located the missing Mary there and notifying each of the suspects that she is leaving there to meet him at his suite. Dale mistakes Jerry for Horace, who is married to her friend Madge (Helen Broderick). Daljit manages to crawl to the recording room, where Karan is still on air. Dallas is immediately attracted to Sean, and (she thinks) he to her, but he treats her brusquely. Dallas makes some progress with Sean, but friction between them continues, especially after Dallas adopts first one, then two, and finally three orphaned elephant calves. Dallas quickly makes friends with the others, especially Pockets. Dame Olga discovers that Sir Peter is now impoverished, but because of the gift, is unable to hate him. Dan Burns is a newspaper advice columnist, a widower, and single-parent to his three girls. Dan Hardesty (William Powell) is an escaped murderer, sentenced to hang. Dan and Bradley (now revealed that Bradley's girlfriend is an old friend of

Dan) insist that the groups spend some time together and chat, much to Eliot's chagrin. Dan and Joan fall in love on the month-long cruise, neither knowing that the other is under the shadow of death. Dan carries her aboard for medical help, forfeiting his chance. Dan has a soft spot for Helen Riley (Joan Bennett), a sharp-tongued waitress at a cheap diner, while her scatter-brained sister Kate (Marion Burns) is in love with Duke Castage (George Walsh), a sleazy low-level mobster. Dan immediately discovers the joys of a swinging bachelor life, cavorting with Ernie's sexy playmates and even with a young friend of daughter Tracy's. Dan informs her that she will be hired back at $10 more per week and that a gift will be delivered to her apartment later that night. Dan is disheartened and resists his father's relationship advice about finding someone of his own. Dan reluctantly agrees to a foursome dinner with their once unattractive childhood friend, "pig-faced" Ruthie. Dan returns to his parents' house and announces that he has 'met someone'. Dan reveals that he was not speaking of a girl, but in fact he meant his dog. Dan, fed up with both of them, decides he's not exactly broken-hearted, either. Dana soon proves to be too egoistical and ambitious for Smokey's taste. Dana's father then bans Dana from seeing Nathan. Danaher, who had wanted the farm himself, is angry that the Widow Tillane (herself angered by Danaher's admission that he had discussed her in the local pub) accepts Sean's bid, and retaliates by refusing consent for his sister to marry. Dancer Paula McFadden (Marsha Mason) and her ten-year-old daughter Lucy (Quinn Cummings) live in a Manhattan apartment with her married boyfriend, Tony DeForrest, until one day, he deserts her to go act in a movie in Italy. Daniel (Duncan), the owner of one of the two hotels, is trying to stay afloat. Daniel (Liam Neeson), Karen's friend, mourns the recent death of his wife Joanna, as he tries to raise his stepson Sam (Thomas Sangster) alone. Daniel Michon (Thelonious Bernard) is a street-wise 13-year-old French boy who lives in La Garenne with his father, a cabbie. Daniel Miller (Albert Brooks), a

Los Angeles advertising executive, dies in a car accident on his 39th birthday and is sent to the afterlife. Daniel and the rest of the recently deceased are offered many Earth-like amenities and activities in the city while they undergo their judgment processes from all-you-can-eat restaurants (which cause no weight gain and serve the best food), to bowling alleys and comedy clubs. Daniel finds himself strapped to a seat on a tram poised to return to Earth, when he spots Julia on a different tram. Daniel follows the retreating car down the street, watching Lauren wave through the rear window. Daniel hates all Wooleys and tries to prevent his daughter from helping one of them. Daniel pushes him into the canal and as the Campanile begins chiming, pulls the gondola towards the bridge hand over hand using the pilings. Daniel remains disappointed. Daniel returns immediately to New York, alone, but with Audrey fast on his heels, as she realizes that she has fallen in love with him. Daniel says that he is still going to Venice, and Lauren and Julius join him. Daniel worms his background out of Julius, who also confesses that he both picked Bob's pocket and stole the money for their train tickets, disappointing Lauren. Daniel's judgment process is presided over by two judges (played by Lillian Lehman and George Wallace). Danielle and Henry are ambushed by gypsies after stumbling upon each other by a river. Danielle is introduced as Henry's wife and wishes Rodmilla and Marguerite the same courtesy they had shown her. Danielle resolves the issue and they share their first kiss. Danielle returns her mother's slippers to Rodmilla in exchange for the book, but Marguerite burns it in the fire anyway. Danielle sees a man stealing her father's horse and unseats him with an apple until she recognizes he is Prince Henry (Dougray Scott). Daniels persuades him to help others in every way he can, including his wife Lu's good-for-nothing brother, Claude, who's been living with them rent-free for six months, and their neighbors the Butlers, who need a car for a vacation when theirs breaks down. Danilo (Daniel Tavares) is about to move out of his parents' house to go live with his boyfriend,

Marcos (Diego Torracca), when his parents die unexpectedly in an accident. Danni pursues another love interest, in part to get back at Mia. Danny (Bryan Burke), is a young student in middle school. Danny Miller (Frank Sinatra) is with a group of GIs awaiting transportation home to the US. Danny O'Neill (Fred Astaire), and Hank Taylor (Burgess Meredith) are friends and rival trumpeters, with "O'Neill's Perennials", a college band. Danny Valdeseccchi (Chris Pine) is an intelligent, handsome, charming boy who happens to be blind. Danny and Julie end up together at a school dance and Hubbie re-connects with his former love with the help of Danny. Danny and Katherine are both surprised by her proposition, but Danny ultimately agrees. Danny asks Katherine to pose as "Devlin" and they go shopping on Rodeo Drive for new clothes to dress like a trophy wife. Danny becomes enthusiastic of turning himself into a grown man with the same machine, in order to break up Miss Noble's engagement, as well as convincing her to give him a chance. Danny begins to realize that the independence he enjoyed comes with a staggering cost. Danny encourages Harold to ask Amanda for an autograph. Danny encourages Harold to pursue Amanda romantically, even though she has a movie-star boyfriend, Rich Adams (Costas Mandylor). Danny flees to the graveyard where his father is buried and talks to him about his problems. Danny gets drunk, then seeks solace and insight (and a joyride in a vintage Ford Mustang convertible) from his landlord and friend, Ernie (Hector Elizondo). Danny informs Rover of his trip back to Las Vegas and leaves. Danny is awarded $200 for capturing the criminals and plans to buy baseball uniforms for his friends. Danny is eventually released from the clinic, and teaches Pat and Tiffany some new dance moves for their routine. Danny is notably Jewish, and among the issues the movie raises is his temptation to assimilate into the larger culture. Danny later calls Katherine regarding his confusion, but Katherine says that she will be taking a job in New York City (which she had mentioned to him earlier) to get a fresh start to her life. Danny soon learns that Hubbie once had a former lover before dying in an accident. Danny teaches Michael how to swim, and Katherine and Palmer look on in admiration. Danny tells Palmer that they are getting divorced because she cheated on him with a man named "Dolph Lundgren" (not the actor). Danny then privately meets with Katherine's kids, Maggie (Bailee Madison) and Michael (Griffin Gluck), to get them to play along with the ruse and gives them the aliases of "Kiki Dee" and "Bart" respectively. Danny's body count mounts while his willpower deteriorates as quickly as his decomposing flesh. Danny's family, his eccentric psychotherapist dr Evans (Jane Seymour) and eye doctor dr Perkins (Stephen Tobolowsky) advise him to continue because it is his only chance of seeing, and soon Danny is successfully operated on. Danny's independence is financially compromised when his wealthy and emotionally detached father abruptly stops sending subsistence money. Danny's sister Ruth (Gale Storm) calls Joe, who is her boyfriend, and he has the Kids arrested for thievery. Danny, an acclaimed singer and songwriter, falls in love with a socialite girl who is just playing around. Daphne becomes pregnant. Darcy and Bingley return to the countryside, and Bingley resumes courting Jane. Darcy and Elizabeth go for a walk together and they become engaged. Darcy apologises for hurting Jane and Elizabeth begins to rejudge Mr Darcy on a clearer basis. Darcy is touched by this gesture and returns to Elizabeth. Darcy realizes that his demeanor encourages people to believe the rumors about him and resolves to act more appropriately. Darcy resists his attraction to Lalita, who considers him conceited, arrogant, and intolerant toward India and Indian culture. Darcy's changed attitude and manners impress Elizabeth and lead her to consider reconciling their relationship. Darius Britt (Aubrey Plaza) is a disillusioned college graduate who lives at home with her widower father (Jeff Garlin) and interns at Seattle Magazine. Darius apologizes for lying to Kenneth, tells him everything else they shared was real, and joins him on the time machine. Darius discovers that the person behind the ad is Kenneth Calloway (Mark Duplass), a stock clerk at a local grocery store. Darius follows him and finds Kenneth has boarded his time machine, which has been integrated into a small boat. Darius returns to Kenneth's house to confront him about Belinda, but Kenneth rationalizes that his time traveling must have worked. Darius' disaffected attitude serves her well, and she quickly endears herself to Kenneth as she poses as a candidate to accompany him on his mission. Darla turns out to be a "Bridezilla", a controlling, egotistical child of privilege who has lost perspective about her wedding day. Darnell quickly learns the hard way that when you "play", you have to "pay". Darren Silverman, Wayne LeFessier, and D. Darren begins to play well but then gets suspended for the next two games after beating up Le Cocq and hitting Coach Cherkov with a hockey puck. Darren freezes and Pitka realizes he needs to distract Darren from whatever is troubling him. Darren has Wayne and D. Darren meets a beautiful but domineering psychologist who is showing signs of being emotionally abusive, Judith Fessbegger, through a chance encounter in a local bar after a band gig. Darrin quits his job and returns to Monte Carlo to reconcile with Lilly. Darrin returns to his hometown of Monte Carlo, Georgia, and on the way, looks back on both comical and heartwarming memories of MaryAnn (who is later revealed to have died in a car accident when Darrin was a teenager) and the experiences they had together. Darryl Palmer is a baseball player for the Atlanta Braves. Darryl Walker (Damon Wayans) is a clumsy nerdy repairman, who is a genius and Batman fan. Darryl Witherspoon (Marlon Wayans) is a college economics student, who does not have the advantages of his wealthy nemesis, Scott Thorpe (David Spade), or his best friend Tim LaFlour (Matthew Lillard), who has a hockey scholarship. Darryl demands an audience with the police commissioner, but the police are not impressed with his actions, ridicule him, and arrest him for disturbing the peace. Darryl does indeed hit his record-breaking home run, but it remains uncertain whether the couple's relationship can ever be what it once was. Darryl falls to the ground after getting the same embarrassing reaction he had the first time while Kevin and Kimberly laugh at him. Darryl has a pure heart and an optimistic Pollyannish personality. Darryl is released on orders to see a psychiatrist. Darryl is so broke he donates four pints of blood in one day (playing a different character each time) and four vials of sperm in one day. Darryl just stares, and Kevin replies, "He's gone blank, ma'am". Darryl then gives up his heroic works for a normal life, getting a job at a McDonald's. Darryl uses it to his advantage and he impresses the competition's supervisor, mr Tyson (Rip Torn) and he even joins the hockey team as a goalie. Darryl was so pure and shielded from reality presumably because of his interest in inventing, that he does not even realize that there is a "crackhouse in front of [their] flat". Darryl's big break comes when he enters a competition, where the winner gets a high-paying Wall Street job. Darryl's luck then starts going down the drain as he loses the hockey game because his sense of sight is lost. Dashiell invites Lester to come over to his house for a drink, and he agrees. Dat tried to convince Jimmy as an accomplice to a new bank heist of which Jimmy needed little persuasion. Date with an Angel tells the story of Jim Sanders (Michael Knight), an executive at a cosmetics company, about to marry Patty Winston (Phoebe Cates), the spoiled daughter of Jim's boss. Dave (Vince Vaughn), a dealer for Guitar Hero, and Ronnie (Malin Åkerman), a stay-at-home mom, are a typical couple raising two young children in the suburbs of Chicago. Dylan (Dan Futterman) and Jez (Stuart Townsend) are two orphans who meet in their twenties and vow to achieve their shared childhood dream of living in a stately home. Dylan Schoenfield is a snobby, rich and self-centered 16-year-old girl who goes to Woodlands Academy. Dylan accuses Josh of publicly humiliating her and undoing all her efforts to be rid of her old self, and walks off after telling him to leave her alone. Dylan allows Josh to enter "the ramp," or the place in the cafeteria where the popular students sit, as a friend rather than a filmmaker. Dylan befriends Kelly's 13-year-old homeschooled cousin, Lily Miska (Elle Fanning), who develops a romantic interest that Dylan is oblivious to. Dylan then proceeds with a tearful impromptu apology for much of what she said in the film, and declares her feelings for Josh. Dylan walks in and sits down. Dylan walks off again silently crying. Dylan, delighted to be in a movie, takes the opportunity; believing that with "her" movie, she could be crowned Blossom Queen. Dylan, following his father's advice, confesses to Lily that he loves her and she forgives him. Dylan, however, hates the idea of moving away from his friends and retreats into his artwork which has grown more macabre since the death of his mother. Each boy proceeds to pursue sex in different ways, with both tragic and comedic results. Each couple represents a specific archetype. Each girl, incognito, is given a chaperone of an army officer, and an itinerary to be back at Buckingham Palace by 1am. Each is involved with someone else. Each learns to appreciate the other as only together can they make this enforced predicament work out. Each meets a lady of interest. Each of the fantasies is inspired by some detail of Mitty's mundane surroundings:. Each plot backfires horribly, until the boys finally begin to change their attitudes towards sex at the end of the film. Each plot follows similar "arcs" in the story line in which Keaton's character works for his beloved's attention and eventually wins her over. Each sibling telephones the respective partner to see if they would be willing to be married before the big prize day. Each time, Bill tells his friend he will meet him on the next floor up. Each turns him down. Each utilizes video-like footage from select days in the defendants' lives, shown to the judges to illustrate their case. Ed Malloy, a tough bouncer from Portland, Oregon, is dragged into a twisted web of lies, magic and kung fu. Ed agrees to move out. Ed and Alice are in love, but not passionate, ripping-clothes-off in love. Ed attempts to have sex with an actress at work, but cannot perform. Ed challenges Jimmy and Doug to a football game with some of his old college teammates who will be at the wedding. Ed ends up stranded when Sandy runs off with his car after stealing a bag of crack. Ed has a date at a restaurant and turns out to be seated next to Alice and Donald; it is uncomfortable. Ed has enough trouble with personal issues, realizing that he has fallen for Smokey, while she has already received a proposal from Dana. Ed is getting tired of meaningless sex. Ed is off the hook, and follows Smokey home to propose to her. Ed is unaware that the same room is reserved by Elizabeth "Smokey" Allard (Olivia de Havilland), for her friend May (Anne Shirley) who is getting married to an army sergeant, Joe Bates (James Dunn), that very night. Ed is upset that Alice is seeing Donald, and she is upset that Ed has slept with so many women. Ed never thought she would actually go that far. Ed says they are supposed to be sleeping with other people, but she is just sleeping with one, as if it is a relationship. Ed shouts out that he was engaged to Kat, proving he was still in the wrong for what he did to Kat. Ed tells her that she is right and that he overreacted, but he says that they should continue the deal until she is completely satisfied so they have no regrets. Ed's college friends make peace with Doug and Jimmy and tell them they were good players. Ed, however, has feelings for Sandy at this point, but she is not quite what she seems. Ed, initially resistant to the idea of seeing other people, decides to go along with it. Ed, upset, chases Jeffrey out of the church and down the road. Eddie goes out on stage alone. Eddie immediately becomes jealous. Eddie is married with daughters, but treats Dixie's son as if he were his own. Eddie is the only cast member pleased with Weidmann's direction and wants to work with him again. Eddie mentions their relationship was a mistake and declares his love for Kiki. Eddie tries to get an audience with the prince of Belavia, but fails, so he and Paige go to the Holiday Ball. Eddie uses his earlier education to help Paige gain a better understanding of William Shakespeare, and Paige instructs Edvard in common household chores like laundry. Eddie wins her over, particularly by reuniting Dixie with her soldier husband on stage. Eddie, however, finds an interest in Gidget, who is still in a foul mood. Edgar hears this through a speaking tube, and plots to eliminate the cats. Edgar returns to the country to retrieve his possessions from Napoleon and Lafayette, as the only evidence that could incriminate him. Edgar, persuaded by his socially conscious family's concern, and tiring of his young lover, casually ends his affair with Isabel with a Chanel scarf and a lunch. Edith (Dove) is a girl who has loved Jim Carter (Withers) since childhood. Edith Martin (Vera Farmiga) and her highly strung daughter Audrey (Taissa Farmiga), and George Hartman (Andy García) and his unmotivated son Conrad (Spencer Lofranco), arrive for a campus tour of the quaint Middleton College led by junior "dingleberry" Justin (Nicholas Braun). Edith and George discuss their relationship, unsure of what it is since they are both married. Edith and George go back to the belltower, where they spend an intimate moment. Edith and George then get high with Daphne and her boyfriend Travis (Stephen Borrello), and discuss their relationships with their children. Edith marries Larrison and then go to Europe on their honeymoon. Edith tells Audrey that they're going to be okay, and George requests Conrad take the long way home. Edvard proposes and Paige accepts. Edward apologizes, and admits to feeling jealous of a business associate to whom Vivian paid attention at the match. Edward arrives and gives Mary and Nora stuff from their old home, offering Nora a job in his law office - which she declines. Edward arrives at the party, and he and a drunk Nora kiss. Edward arrives with moving truck full of new home and office furniture. Edward arrives, punches him in the face, and throws him out. Edward takes Vivian to a polo match in hopes of networking for his business deal. Edward tells him that all he has to do is pay her for the idea, but Viktor knows that for this artist the idea is more important than money. Edy guns the engine but the rear bumper comes off and he crashes into a parked car, injuring himself. Edy is about to give a toast to everyone but gets a call, it seems that Edy has been getting a lot of calls, and often runs out when he does which gets Anna suspicious that he is having an affair, and cheating on her again (there was one previous incident in the past). Edy is now alone in the kitchen, drinking. Edy makes her promise to not tell anyone, since he doesn't want anyone to worry so they can enjoy the holidays. Edy offers to give her a ride to the bar where everyone is. Edy reacts with little emotion, saying that if it is what Anna wants then he can't really do anything about it. Edy then travels to his store, a small neighborhood supermarket, called Bodega. Edy, decides to do one last thing for Anna and finally cut down that tree so the three go outside and secure the tree to a chain that is connected to the rear bumper of Edy's car. Effie explains to him that the marriage, called "hufi", is followed by a prolonged period of celebration called "bruchah". Effie has overheard the gossip spread amongst her party guests; and seeing Henry come home with one of the mannequin's shoes and blonde hair on his clothes fears the worst. Effie, upset with Brian breaking up with her and how Lena seems to love her friends more than her own sister, steals the Pants and loses them in Greece while visiting her grandmother. Eleanor has flown in but stays in an airport bar rather than going straight to her parent's house. Eleanor, alas, is enjoying her improved sex life and brags about it openly to Clair and Veronica. Elgar Enders (Beau Bridges), a man who lives off his parents' wealth, buys himself an inner-city tenement, in the transitional neighborhood of 1970 Park Slope, Brooklyn, planning to evict all the occupants and construct a luxury home for himself. Elgar falls for Lanie (Marki Bey), a dancer at a local black club. Eli "Big Daddy" La Bouff, a rich sugar baron and Charlotte's father, is hosting a masquerade ball in Naveen's honor. Eli tells Tom he loves him and Tom, terrified, lashes out at him the next day and drives him away. Eli's parents are both Jewish psychiatrists who raised him to be emotionally open but ended up making him neurotic. Eliot decides to take more risks, though he is unsure on when and how to do so due to his reserved habits. Eliot feels awkward because of Bradley's personal connections to the owner and patrons, while Eliot's refined tastes clash with the blue-collar atmosphere. Eliot is a dependable and reliable though thoroughly average young man with a streak of bad luck, terminally typecast as a nice guy in a life that mimics the clichés of typical romantic comedies. Eliot tries to keep himself composed, but even Caroline's reassurances do not convince him that her feelings for Bradley are buried. Eliot, having been stood up for a dinner with his parents, goes out to a bar with his friends from work where he accidentally runs into Cecil's boyfriend, Dan (Paul Rudd), and Bradley with his current girlfriend. Eliot, refusing to let history repeat itself, simply chases him off rather than let him get started with another speech. Elise (Goldie Hawn), whose husband also left her for a younger woman, is now an aging alcoholic movie actress who has become a plastic-surgery addict to keep her career afloat. Elise and Hubbell also arrive, Elise tries to bribe Mary, and a protective cabdriver, Fritzie (Guinn Williams), punches Hubbell, mistaking him for Jack. Elise, feeling sorry for herself, gets drunk which only results in her and Brenda hurling vicious insults at each other, and the women drift apart. Eliza Doolittle, a Cockney flower girl, runs into a young man called Freddy. Eliza accuses him of wanting her only to fetch and carry for him, saying that she will marry Freddy because he loves her. Eliza cries as she prepares to leave ("Just You Wait" [Reprise]). Eliza explains that Higgins has always treated her as a flower girl, but she learned to be a lady because Pickering treated her as one. Eliza makes a good impression at first with her polite manners but later shocks everyone with her vulgar Cockney attitudes and slang. Eliza sees that she no longer belongs in Covent Garden, and she and Freddy depart. Eliza then dances with Higgins. Eliza's father, Alfred Doolittle, and his drinking companions, Harry and Jamie, all dustmen, stop by the next morning. Eliza's final test requires her to pass as a lady at the Embassy Ball, and after weeks of preparation, she is ready. Elizabeth (Jane Powell) accompanies her wealthy Texas rancher father (Wendell Corey) on a visit to Paris, where her mother (Danielle Darrieux) lives; while in Paris, she meets Andre (Vic Damone), an eager young Frenchman. Elizabeth Fimple, Deborah Ann's mother, discovers the letter. Elizabeth Montgomery owned a second home in Patterson. Elizabeth and Jefferson spend the night in jail, mistakenly charged with stealing a neighbor's horse and sleigh, and return to the farm early the next morning. Elizabeth and John plan to be married immediately by Judge Crothers (Dick Elliott), but the ceremony is interrupted when Jefferson arrives and it is love at first sight. Elizabeth and her airman have their own adventures trying to catch up with Margaret, which take them far beyond the 1am deadline into the early hours of the following morning. Elizabeth and her family meet the dashing and charming Mr Wickham who singles out Elizabeth and tells her a story of the hardship that Mr Darcy has caused him by depriving him of a living (position as clergyman in a prosperous parish with good revenue that once granted, is for life) promised to him by Mr Darcy's late father. Elizabeth and her hosts are frequently invited to Rosings Park, the imposing home of Lady Catherine de Bourgh. Elizabeth attempts to raise money for the surgery by participating in her 7th grade class car wash in provocative clothing and by manipulating parents to give her money for more school supplies and tutoring, but her efforts are not enough. Elizabeth embarks on a trip around the country with her aunt and uncle, fighting zombies along the way. Elizabeth eventually discovers that it was Darcy who engineered the union, thus saving the Bennet family from ruin. Elizabeth finally confesses all. Elizabeth gets Carl drunk and convinces him to take her to his office to have sex, but she spikes his drink and steals a copy of the answers. Elizabeth hopes to renew her relationship with Darcy, but his aunt, the Lady Catherine, interferes and insists that her daughter Anne is a better match for her nephew. Elizabeth is aghast at such pragmatism in matters of love. Elizabeth is horrified at Darcy's involvement in an affair which has caused her sister so much pain. Elizabeth is surprised and delighted by the kindness to herself and her aunt and uncle. Elizabeth later gives advice to one of her students who has an unrequited crush on the superficial Chase in class, which causes her to reflect on how she has been superficial as well. Elizabeth later learns from her best friend, Lynn Davies, that the teacher of the class with the highest state test scores will receive a $5,700 bonus. Elizabeth realizes that she has judged Darcy too harshly and is humbled. Elizabeth seems to act as if she is embarrassed about her youngest daughter's disability. Elizabeth spares Catherine's life. Elizabeth takes him aside, gives him her bra, and tells everyone she caught him having sex with a student from another school, which erases his image as a loser. Elizabeth then has to convince her father that she is not marrying for money, and it is only after she speaks about Mr Darcy's true worth that he is happy about the wedding. Elizabeth vows to avenge the separation of her family by killing Darcy, and she is afforded that opportunity when he appears unannounced at a cottage where she is visiting her newlywed friend Charlotte. Elizabeth's dislike for Darcy intensifies when she learns that he plotted to separate Bingley from her sister, Jane. Elizabeth's dislike of Mr Darcy is confirmed. Elizabeth's packing is interrupted, first by Yardley and then by Jefferson. Elizabeth, out of genuine concern for her sister's well being, visits her sister there. Ella and Char begin writing to each other frequently after Char leaves on a diplomatic mission to Ayortha. Ella eventually chooses to marry Buttons, an employee in the shop, instead of the prince. Ella is close to her mother and they share the same free-spirited nature, but when Ella is nearly fifteen, Eleanor dies. Ella renews her friendship with Char at the wedding. Ella, who still loves him, goes to the ball in disguise with help from Mandy and Lucinda, who make a coach and horses from household objects. Elle Daniels (Ashlee Hewitt) has dreamed of being a famous singer-songwriter for as long as she can remember. Elle graduated from Berklee, Ty's album went triple Platinum, Brenda (aka Kandi) was pretending to be a different pop star, Stephanie is a wig model, Jamie and Becky work for Lady Gaga, and Kit and Andy were happily together with their own detective agency. Elle swallows her pride and tries to forget about her dreams. Elle, being convinced by Kit to start singing again, gives herself a makeover, goes to the recording studio and sings "Love is with Me Now", which Ty hears, and mistakes her for the British Kandi Kane, awestruck by her voice. Emma and Fletcher are shown to undergo strains in their relationship because of Emma's new found opinionated and confident trait, a depart from her usual people-pleasing characteristics. Emma and Fletcher get into an argument regarding Emma's maniac behavior of sabotaging Liv's wedding and their friendship, including how Emma has changed since they first met. Emma and Liv also reveal to each other that they are pregnant and that their due dates are the same, March 3, and both friends get excited. Emma and the other guests have a good time there, and she sees a whole new side of Patrick, who had been repulsive to her so far. Emma begins her walk down the aisle but stops when the footage of her spring break is shown. Emma discovers Pete's presence and visits the gate-house to have it out with him. Emma finally has the signed and notarized annulment papers, but she considers calling off her wedding. Emma finds Patrick in a bar, and their initial meeting ends with her getting drunk. Emma goes to Joe and asks him to tell Will that she is sorry for what she had said to him and what had happened. Emma is arrested by police officer Percy Williams, after she attempts to steal a piece of jewelry as a gift for Charlotte. Emma is shaken with the news of her lover's death, and Will's implication, but then gets a letter from Will proving he wasn't in Los Angeles when the man was killed, referring her to the couple that had earlier given him the ride home. Emma questions Sophias concept of romantic love and advises her to break their engagement, which she swiftly does. Emma sets off the church's fire sprinklers in an attempt to get Patrick to the church. Emma sets out to find Patrick and give him annulment papers to sign so that she can marry Richard. Emma stands up and walks over to Fletcher who is upset at Emma's behavior. Emma struggles to make ends meet, but is helped by Murphy, an idiosyncratic widower who drives an otherwise immaculate antique automobile.

decorated with several political bumper slogan stickers Murphy terms his "causes". Emma tells him that she is not the same person he fell in love with ten years ago and that she has now changed, as it has been apparent that she learned to be more assertive. Emma then goes back to the honorable Richard, who still loves her and says that she wants to marry him. Emma's boyfriend Aaron follows her home because he wants to reconcile, staying at a local hotel. Emma's father dies. Emma's fiancé, Fletcher, begins to show signs of being controlling. Eric Wainwright (Van Johnson), a busy impresario, is besieged by hordes of wannabe concert stars, eager for their big break. Eric and the rest of the tenants agree to fix up the building together during the next few weeks. Eric apologizes for how he bullied him in high school, but Jarrod attacks him anyway with a set of nunchucks. Eric blackmails Billy's principal, Max Anderson, into claiming that Billy bribed him for passing grades. Eric blames the former owner and present manager, Horace Willoughby (Victor Moore), for the poor quality of the work, and fires him on the spot. Eric decides to go on a tour again, but before he has a chance to go, Horace locks him in with Polly in his apartment. Eric goes to visit the building and meets some of its tenants. Eric is unable to withstand the pressure and breaks down. Eric recovers from the attack and attempts to shoot Veronica, but he is shot by Danny McGrath, a rifle-wielding madman whom Billy apologized to earlier for bullying him. Eric takes advice from a musician friend, Madame Karina, and works less with his hands. Eric then leaves on the tour, bringing Polly along, and it becomes their honeymoon trip. Eric watches on and fumes in frustration over Billy's decision. Erica is invited by Lou, but is clearly uncomfortable and avoids conversation. Erica subsequently believes Matt dishonored his vow and was unfaithful to her, but Matt wins Erica back by reminding her of the special moments they shared during their relationship. Erik Stifler (John White) has a difficult time living up to his family name. Erik loudly pounds on the closed bedroom door, proclaiming his love for her. Erik's dad later surmises that, as a Stifler, his son should be out having sex instead of masturbating. Erik's friends Cooze (Jake Siegel) and Ryan (Ross Thomas) plan a road trip to visit Erik's cousin Dwight Stifler (Steve Talley) in Michigan during an event known as the Naked Mile. Erik's girlfriend of two years, Tracy (Jessy Schram), loves him, but is not ready for intercourse. Erika is arrested and sentenced to serve time in a labor camp, and Phoebe and John are re-united. Erika then meets with Diego (Jason Day), a much younger bicycle messenger whom she meets for weekly sexual trysts in a Harlem apartment, where Diego confides in her that he is in love with another woman and Erika gives him advice on how to court her. Frumpy and cynical, she fears that she is doomed to be stuck with her life. Frustrated by Bianca's insistence and Kat's rebelliousness, Walter declares that Bianca may date only when Kat does, knowing that Kat's antisocial attitude makes this unlikely. Frustrated by Isabelle's failure to tell him about her upcoming wedding and about the repercussions of being known by the public as that "schmuck" who wouldn't marry his girlfriend. Frustrated by her financial constraints and at being treated like a child by the dean, Amelia decides to leave the academy and join a jazz group led by her fellow student and swing bandleader Dusty Rhodes (Eddie Albert). Frustrated with Gloria and Jerry's selfishness and careless attitude, Burt and Verona decide this is an opportunity to find somewhere else to raise their family, since they are both employed in situations where they can work from home and live wherever they choose. Frustrated with the fact that he cannot give his wife Priscilla (Parker Posey) an orgasm, Jack (Paul Rudd) moves out of the house and starts a relationship with Kristen (Mischa Barton), his student. Frustrated, Madea tells Karen to stop worrying about Byron and Rose, stop using her baby to make Byron's life miserable, and keep moving forward. Frustrated, she dreams of different ways to kill Higgins, from sickness to drowning to a firing squad ("Just

You Wait"). Frustrated, she falls for the most unsuitable male possible. Full of regret, he then tells Sallys friend Johnny about his mistake, and that he wants his wife back. Fulton attempts to intimidate the group, but Troy rebuilds their confidence and convinces them that they can persevere ("Work This Out"). Furious and humiliated, Calvin drives Ruby home. Furious at Chuck losing all their money, 'Fearless' ends their partnership. Furious at Don's teasing, she throws a real cake at him, only to hit Lina right in the face. Furious at being scorned, she re-enters his life masquerading as the posh "Lady Eve Sidwich", niece of Sir Alfred McGlennan Keith (Eric Blore), another con man who's been swindling the rich folk of Connecticut. Furious that their plans are ruined, the Latimore brothers attempt to kill Norbit before finding the townspeople rallying up against them. Furious with Charlotte for betraying her secret, Lucy forces her cousin to watch as she tells George to leave and never return. Furious, Bruce aggressively and profanely criticizes the station during his first live report, and is promptly fired. Furious, Michael admits to being a fool. Furious, Sara kicks Joe out. Furious, he tears up his contract, refusing to work with Mimi. Furious, he tells her that he will fight to get the company back, but later, to his valet, Butch (Eric Blore), he admits he is beaten, as nobody will lend him the money he needs to make the attempt. Furious, mr Yardley fires her. Furious, she drives off. Furious, she shoots him, but he survives and refuses to have her charged with attempted murder. Furiously searching the upstairs, she discovers Evie and Randy, but only realizes Randy is a girl when she runs past her on her way out. Further attempts to convince mrs Kilbourne to get rid of this latest tramp are blissfully ignored. Further attempts to rouse the maid are futile. Further complicating the situation is the presence of his former high-school crush Dean Stewart, who moved back in town a week earlier. Further complications arise when Jay Ray, Ray Jay, andR. Further complications arise when Stewart returns from his trip with Don Fernando (Steven Geray) and the genuine painting.

Further complications ensue when an insurance adjuster (Hugh O'Connell) mentions to Nick a rumor that Ellen was not alone on the island, but had the company of a Stephen Burkett (Randolph Scott) and that they called each other "Adam" and "Eve". Further exacerbating the situation is Sarah's obvious jealousy of the budding relationship between Peter and Rachel, while Peter (through observing Sarah's relationship with Aldous) begins to realize that his relationship with her wasn't as great as he remembered. Further in the future, Paul is the only mourner at Connor's funeral. Furthermore he promises to deliver the result the same day as Stringer's company, even though the rival has been working on the project for quite some time. Furthermore, John is forced to reveal that he had not yet told his parents of his intention to marry a white girl. Furthermore, Naomi hasn't accepted that Ely is gay because she had always fantasized him falling in love with and marrying her one day. Furthermore, because there is a new moon on the night of the ball, Odette remains a swan that night. Furthermore, the gathering need not be a ball; several variants on Cinderella, such as Katie Woodencloak and The Golden Slipper have her attend church. Furthermore, the mother proclaims that the impending wedding of her daughter Twinky (Rishma Malik) and Bobby will not take place until Rahul has found himself a bride first. Future Olympic gold medalist Gretchen Fraser was the skiing stand-in for Sonja Henie. Fuzzy22 has asked Jen to meet him in person, to which she reluctantly agrees, though Jen is very nervous—she and Fuzzy22 had agreed to not exchange any identifying information, so she has no idea how old he is, what he looks like, or if he is male or female. Gabe finds out and the two split. Gabe goes to Rain's 21st birthday party, and gives her a music box as a present. Gabe is instantly jealous of Rosemary's new partner: a taller blonde boy named Tim Staples, who's much better at self-defense than he is. Gabe is living alone because he says he is not dating for the time being, as he does not want to hurt anyone. Gabe is pleased and surprised when his father says he "cleared out some old stuff" and his parents appear to have reconciled. Gabe is shocked, but Judy takes the news personally and is very hurt. Gabe seems too busy for intimacy and Marshall is feeling the pressure of a frustrating dead-end job. Gabe visits his half-sisters at the hospital and reveals, without sadness, that he and the shrewish Olivia split up. Gabriel gets the underwear modeling job and goes to Catalina. Gabriel is being pressed for results, so he introduces a radical new incentive: if their latest case isn't "cracked" meaning, if the pair in question do not fall, and stay, in love, O'Reilly and Jackson must stay on Earth forever, which does not appeal to them. Gabriel tries to soften the blow, but Billy rebuffs him. Gabriella and Troy go to the musical auditions where Sharpay and her twin brother Ryan Evans (Lucas Grabeel) perform ("What I've Been Looking For"), but both are too shy to audition. Gabriella angrily confronts Sharpay about her interference and quits her job at Lava Springs. Gabriella expresses her loss of trust with Troy ("Gotta Go My Own Way") and leaves Lava Springs, and gives him the necklace back. Gabriella gets extremely upset by his betrayal ("When There Was Me and You") and decides not to audition for the musical. Gabrielle Simpson (Audrey Hepburn), a temp secretary hired by Benson to type the script, comes to Richard's hotel room where they are to work on the script, only then finding out about their tight deadline and that not one page or line of script had yet been written. Gail Carson Levine wrote Ella Enchanted, a story about how "Ella" is under a fairy curse of obedience (she does whatever someone tells her to). Gail apologizes for being insensitive, but reveals that she is proud of Ramona, and that her loving family is her accomplishment. Gail has a surprise for Ramona, it's Richie Phillips (Patrick Duffy), the boy from high school that Ramona wanted to go to the prom with. Ganja and Hess dispose of the body, even though, like the prostitute from before, the "corpse" reawakens. Ganja is initially horrified by her new existence, but Green teaches her how to survive. Ganja seduces and then strangles the woman.

Ganja, though saddened by his death, lives on, presumably continuing her vampire-esque lifestyle. Garfield agrees, but specifies that Coles will get only half as much if his shares fail to make up the margin of victory. Garfield concedes to Jorgy's offer to let the matter be settled at the annual shareholder's meeting. Garfield is instantly smitten with the beautiful Kate, although he is on to her tactics and does not waver from his goal of becoming the majority stockholder of New England Wire & Cable. Garfield tactlessly and unsuccessfully tries to seduce her. Garp becomes a devoted parent, wrestling with anxiety for the safety of his children and a desire to keep them safe from the dangers of the world. Garp grows up, becoming interested in sex, wrestling, and writing fiction—three topics in which his mother has little interest. Garp learns (often painfully) from the women in his life (including transsexual ex-football player Roberta Muldoon), who are struggling to become more tolerant in the face of intolerance. Garrick believes she is one of the actresses (and not a very good one), when she is actually fleeing a marriage arranged by her father. Garrick graciously accepts. Gary Blake (Dick Powell) stars in a new show, On the Avenue, with Mona Merrick (Alice Faye). Gary Coleman stars as a homeless shoeshine boy named Lester who is living in a locker at Union Station, Chicago. Gary Grobowski (Vince Vaughn) and Brooke Meyers (Jennifer Aniston) meet at Wrigley Field during a Chicago Cubs game and begin dating, eventually buying a condominium together. Gary Shaller (Freeman), who gained commercial success in previous years as the keyboard player in the fictional band "On The One". Gary Starke (Garcia) is a New York City ticket scalper who, in the old traditional style of scalping "works the street", known as "the walk", as opposed to the plethora of modern-day ticket brokers who ply the Internet for sales. Gary agrees to meet her there, but misses the hidden agenda, and misses the concertunwittingly breaking Brooke's heart. Gary angrily leaves the party without saying a word to either of them, taking Karen's gift with him. Gary begins taking a more active role in his tour guide business, while Brooke travels the world, eventually returning to Chicago. Gary buys a pool table, litters the condo with food and trash, and even has a strip poker party with Lupus and a few women. Gary decides to help Karen pay for her abortion by selling most of his possessions and borrowing money from his boss. Gary eventually discovers that he is having lucid dreams about a glamorous woman named Anna (Penélope Cruz), with whom he is deeply infatuated. Gary eventually discovers that the girl he dreams about does, in fact, exist. Gary is frustrated by Brookes perceived controlling, perfectionistic attitude, and expresses his desire to have a little more independence (particularly when arriving home from work, wanting to unwind). Gary replies that curses are only true if one believes in them and reveals that he also wished for her, before returning to Tucson. Gary scrapes up a few more dollars and buys Karen a gold locket for her birthday. Gary seems to understand and kisses her before leaving. Gary works as a tour guide in a family business with his brothers, Lupus (Cole Hauser) and Dennis (Vincent D'Onofrio). Gary, whose ego has driven away all of the people who once helped him, cannot find anyone who will hire or even represent him. Gathering a group of acquaintances and hired help as the cast and crew, they decide to film a pornographic Star Wars parody, entitled Star Whores. Gavin comes home very drunk and confronts Patricia. Gavin's doctor shows up and informs them that he has died. Gay party planner Shel (Stamos) is organizing the wedding of his straight brother Ben (Dane) to Maggie (Somerville). Gaylord "Greg" Focker (Ben Stiller) is a male nurse living in Chicago, who intends to propose to his girlfriend Pam Byrnes (Teri Polo), a schoolteacher. Gazoo reveals that Chip is in severe debt to the mob, and hoped to solve both his problems by framing Fred for the robbery and plans to marry Wilma to get the Slaghooples' money. Gazoo witnesses the entire conversation. Geek Hlynur is approaching 30 years old, still lives with his mother who is divorced from his alcoholic father, downloads porn and wanders around Reykjavík half-heartedly searching for a job while spending lots of time in Kaffibarinn, the central Reykjavík bar (the bar is owned in real life by writer/director Baltasar Kormákur and his soundtrack composer Damon Albarn, a long-standing Icelandophile). Geeky Michael Eckman warns him that Bianca is vapid and conceited, and that her overprotective father does not allow Bianca or her older sister, the shrewish Kat, to date. Gen's brother, Teddy (Trevor Blumas), gives Casey flowers to congratulate her, and they kiss. Gen. Gene and Betty elope. General Barclay is furious at first, having gone to great lengths to arrange the wedding, until Carr reminds him that this was what they had hoped for. General Pandemonium (Yosemite Sam as Major Strasser) gets a frantic call from Foghorn Leghorn saying that a secret German document has been stolen, and immediately heads for the Carrotblanca nightclub —the Cafe Au Lait Americain. General Pandemonium suspects Sylvester may know about the document and binds him in his office. General Rosewater hopes to test the new rangefinder in war games with a rival general. Generation after generation, Wooley men - all played by March - marry cruel, shrewish women. Geneva gives the story of Sabrina's father. Geneva is called by Sabrina who is at the docks in a boat. Geoffrey Clarke is a poor poet, who has his eyes on the fortune of a rich widow, Alice Frayne, in order to keep him in the lifestyle he feels he deserves. Geoffrey is pursued, however, by the young and lovely, yet poor, Monica Grey. Geoffrey meanwhile is strongly attracted to the feisty Elma, and his interest is apparently reciprocated. Geoffrey sees this as the perfect opportunity to achieve his aims without any blame attaching to himself or Elma. Geoffrey's old college friend Ernest Melton (Stewart) and his French wife Elma (Arnaud) arrive at the Lymes' country home for a weekend visit. George (Bing Crosby) and Harold (Bob Hope), American song-and-dance men performing in Melbourne, Australia, leave in a hurry to avoid various marriage proposals. George (Freddie Highmore) is a loner high school student with a penchant for drawing and skipping class. George (Jason Mantzoukas), who works at the bookstore, soothes her and the two begin a relationship. George Emerson happens to be nearby and catches her when she faints. George V will be crowned king on 22 June and in the preceding days many important dignitaries arrive. George Wade (Hugh Grant) is an arrogant billionaire real estate tycoon who has almost everything and knows almost nothing. George accepts Nina's offer and moves into her apartment. George agrees, and after Maria is finally able to tell Caroline the truth, Caroline happily reunites with Steve, who then gives George a thrashing. George agrees, on the condition that he can choose the two people, to which Jimmy also agrees. George also reads the letter (although by mistake) because Lou's wife is his night school teacher and it somehow ends up in his book. George and Edith then meet film student Daphne (Daniella García), who offers George her computer so he can help out a heart patient. George and Mary get married. George and Robert do not re-establish their relationship, but George meets Paul James (Amo Gulinello), a young actor, and the two fall in love and have sex. George and Tess meet again and a hope for a second chance shows. George argues with her, saying that Cecil only sees her as an "object for the shelf" and will never love her enough to grant her independence, while George loves her for who she is. George arrives at work, despondent, gazing at the lipstick-marked paper on his desk. George attempts to win back Kay's affections while simultaneously trying to sell the worthless land to several greedy leading citizens of the town. George became a conscientious objector, lost his government job but was given non-combatant duties to avoid prison, leaving Mrs Honeychurch deeply upset with her son-in-law. George breaks off the engagement. George calls out of politeness because he wants to explain that his relationship with his girlfriend has just become more serious. George catches Lucy alone in the garden and kisses her again. George consoles her and begins to rethink his situation with Sally. George convinces the board of directors to vote against Potter. George desperately appeals to Potter for a loan. George does not believe Clarence's subsequent claim to be his guardian angel. George files a writ of execution to force payment and take possession of the train, Old 97, in lieu of payment. George follows her and gets a job as a busboy at the faculty residence. George freezes. George gets drunk at a local bar and is involved in a fight before he leaves and goes to a nearby bridge, thinking of suicide. George has learned how to tie a knot, Jeremy is finally coming out of his shell, and Terrence has become a millionaire because of his theory (He sold his theory {the predictive analytic probability theory that he finally perfected and can predict anything from the behavior of amino acids in a stable isotope peptide bond to the outcome of sporting events} to ibetcom for $10 million). George is a passive individual who does not seem troubled by the idea of marrying someone he does not love. George is clearly smitten with her, but Matty pleads for another chance and she accepts. George is confronted by his mother and stepfather at home, and he responds by telling his mother that his stepfather has been lying about work. George is confused but agrees to go. George is evasive, and she asks him if he'll have sex with her. George is fired from his job and abandoned by the company, with the exception of his father and his pregnant secretary, Annie. George is indicted and could face prison time. George is overcome by Lucy's beauty among a field of violets and kisses her, but they are interrupted by Lucy's cousin, who is outraged. George kisses Jane in front of Larry, and she agrees to marry George and remain in Cape Anne. George makes a proposition to his father: He will take one more shot at persuading Lisa to be with him; If she will, Charles must go to jail, and if she won't, George will take the rap for his dad. George meets Victoria in an art museum. George postpones his travel plans in order to sort out the family business, Bailey Brothers' Building and Loan, a longtime competitor to Henry Potter, the local banker and the richest man in town. George realizes Victoria is right, and they

kiss and make up. George recruits his uncle Otis, a retired E&P engineer, to engineer the train. George rose to the rank of corporal but was taken prisoner by the Italians in Africa. George runs home to await his arrest. George sits at the graduation ceremony with Sally's friends with his mother in the audience. George spots Alicia and her boyfriend at a gas station, and Gerard talks George into following them. George talks Doc (who is also a con artist) into masquerading as a physician treating him, partly out of curiosity, but mostly because of greed, after seeing the enormous balance in his checking account. George tells her he loves her and they go back to her apartment, where they kiss. George turns in all his assignments and the principal tells him he'll know he's passed if his name is called at graduation. George who is troubled by this stops doing homework and is again sent to the principal's office. George works on his assignments and takes his final exams. George's art teacher applauds him on his project. George's father then drops one last bombshell on his son: It was he who committed the illegal act for which George is being charged. George's last memory is of going to place a large bet in 1931. George's mother does not recognize him; she reveals that Uncle Billy was institutionalized after the collapse of the Building and Loan. George's name is called and his mother applauds. George, not knowing about Robert's plans, is taken aback and heartbroken, and after the party the two split up. George, now convinced that Clarence is really his guardian angel, runs back to the bridge and begs for his life back; the alternate timeline changes back to the original reality. George, out of confusion, throws her photographs into the river because they were spotted with blood. George, who loves Nina as his best friend, tells her that he wants to be with Paul. Georges assures him that nothing is wrong with him and gives him back his keys to a chalet Alain owns in the nearby mountains, which he used for a romantic escapade. Georgette starts her gay life anew and Horace goes back to his family where he is forgiven. Georgia and Peter are attracted to each other and gradually fall in love, which causes conflict for both of them. Georgia decides that she will marry him, and then she tells the producers that she will not be performing at Anne, for she wants a real honeymoon. Georgia is an older Broadway actress who was once very famous. Georgia is unaware of what has happened, as she is in Honolulu to prepare herself. Georgia, following the instructions of the real Elvira, keeps up the ruse by pretending to be Elvira to everyone, including Peter. Georgie and Kim then proceed to clean the house and pay back for any damage that was done to the house. Georgie and Mikki continue to hook up. Georgie begins to become friends with Kim and later finds out it is her birthday. Georgie, Kim, Mikki and Georgie's friend, Jules (Georgia King) are in the hot tub and they are naked. Georgina Salt (Heather Graham) is a young English contractor living in London who longs to have a baby, which she sees as the one thing missing from her life. Georgina and Clem purchase sperm from the Internet and go out to buy a turkey baster. Georgina asks about Alexandra, who Zach admits is beautiful, but says that isn't all he looks for in a person. Georgina comes out to find the lights off and him gone. Georgina is an extremely driven, smart, but bossy alpha female who will do everything to close a very important deal with foreign investors. Georgina is obviously more interested in the baby than Zach. Georgina is taken away by the baby items around her and is saddened by it. Georgina jumps to the conclusion that he does hate babies and demands that he pull over and lets her out. Georgina kicks the man out and talks to Zach, but then hears a woman's voice saying, "Zach, darling, will you zip me up. Georgina runs after him, but loses him. Georgina, seeming desperate at this point, turns to one of her employees who reveals that he is infertile just before the two of them can have sex. Gerald accepts this arrangement grudgingly, but before meeting with Hewitt, he happens to see Liz while driving through town, and she tells him she is going to have his baby. Gerald later returns, only to enact psychological warfare, making Beverly jealous by pretending that he is drinking and carousing with multiple women. Gerald resents the fact that the appearances are taking up an increasing amount of her time, and becomes jealous of the level of attention that her new-found stardom has brought her. Gerald, Tess' ultra-competent secretary (Dan Tobin), arrives with a bottle of champagne and reminds Tess of her commitment to launch a ship. Gerard advises George to gain Alicia's attention by making her jealous. Gerard and George catch up to Alicia and her fiancé at the border of Canada, and George finally expresses his love for her. Gerard and George leave for the wedding. Gerard finds himself attracted to Alicia's mother, a widow. Gerard spends the night with Alicia's mother, but in the morning she rebuffs him for moving too fast with their relationship. Gerbino De Ratta is the head of the local thugs who robs anyone or steals anything that he sees stealable. Gerbino himself dies falling into a large deep well inside the mansion. Gerry continues to juggle the two women in his life. Gerry decides that Tom would be better off if they split up. Gerry finds her and goes to Tony in order to force David to leave his reception to visit Connie. Gerry is suspicious, especially when she finds them both drunk and has to lead Franky out. Gerry, who believes that virtue will be her only reward, rebuffs Tony and intimates that he is childish. Gertrude continues to try and ruin the marriage. Gertrude even believes that Kevin's father had died years ago of "terminal disappointment", for which Gerturde holds Viola responsible. Gertrude is not happy, and insists the marriage will not last. Gertrude's resentment of Viola bears a strong resemblance to Viola's feelings of animosity toward Charlie. Gertrude, satisfied she got her last word in, leaves; showing she still favors Charlie. Getting inside the circle, Sally and the townswomen reenact her oath with Gillian. Giambattista Basile's Cenerentola combined them; the Cinderella figure, Zezolla, asks her father to command her to the Dove of Fairies and ask her to send her something, and she receives a tree that will provide her clothing. Giambattista Basile, an Italian soldier and government official, assembled a set of oral folk tales into a written collection titled Lo cunto de li cunti (The Story of Stories), or Pentamerone. Gideon invites Scott to his venue, the Chaos Theater, where Sex Bob-Omb is playing. Gideon rides to the cabin to inform Adam of his daughter's arrival and asks him to come home. Gidget accepts. Gidget declines at first, then agrees after her mother convinces her that she should enjoy her time there and have fun with Abby and the boys. Gidget finally arrives, all dressed up, and joins the group. Gidget refuses to go and leave Jeff alone; Gidget's mother Dorothy (Jean Donnell) explains to Russ that Jeff is all that matters to Gidget. Gidget runs after him, the two argue and finally decide to go their separate ways with Jeff threatening to "get a game of his own going". Gidget tells her father that Mom is asleep but she fixed it so his bed looks slept in; she suggests that he stay in Jeff's room for the night and come back in the morning so she won't suspect anything. Gidget tells her mother the same thing she just told her father, but Dorothy goes into the bedroom anyway. Gigli and Ricki go back to Gigli's apartment, where Gigli confesses his love and the two sleep together. Gigli convinces Ricki to take his car, but at the last minute, Ricki returns and picks up Gigli, and they leave town together. Gigli is further annoyed when his mother (Lainie Kazan) takes an immediate liking to Ricki and when the two women team up to needle him. Gigli successfully convinces the young man, Brian Dorf (Justin Bartha), to go off with him by promising to take him "to the Baywatch", apparently a reference to the television show of that name, which seems to be Brian's singular obsession. Gigolos Christopher Tracy and his brother, Tricky, swindle wealthy French women. Gil abandons Cecilia and is seen quietly racked with guilt on his flight back to Hollywood. Gil and Adriana go first to Maxim's Paris, then to the Moulin Rouge where they meet Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec, Paul Gauguin, and Edgar Degas. Gil asks what they thought the best era was, and the three determine that the greatest era was the Renaissance. Gil attempts to bring Inez to the past with him the following night, but she becomes impatient and peevishly returns to the hotel. Gil breaks up with her and decides to move to Paris. Gil buys earrings for Adriana. Gil gets drunk one night when Inez has gone off dancing with Paul and his wife, and becomes lost in the back streets of Paris. Gil is considering moving to Paris (which he notes, much to the dismay of his fiancée, is at its most beautiful in the rain). Gil is struggling to finish his first novel, centered on a man who works in a nostalgia shop. Gil realizes (but doesn't draw attention to) that he has been transported back to the 1920s, an era he idolizes. Gil realizes he is falling in love with her, leaving him in conflict. Gil returns to 2010 and confronts Inez. Gil rewrites the first two chapters of his novel and retrieves his draft from Stein, who praises his progress as a writer and tells him that Hemingway likes it, but questions why the main character has not realized that his fiancée (based on Inez) is having an affair with a pedantic character (based on Paul). Gil spends more and more time with Adriana, who leaves Picasso for a brief dalliance with Hemingway. Gilbert (Robert Coote), Trent's assistant, dislikes Michael. Gilda is an interior designer who lives with the painter Otto, who was previously attached to Leo, an author. Gilda says that Otto is in bed, ill, and cannot be disturbed. Gilda, however, has not been there. Gilhooley also finally marries his longtime girlfriend, Miss Lafleur (Dorothy Lamour). Gillian and Sally Owens, two descendants of the Owens family, are taken in by their aunts Frances and Jet after the death of their parents. Gillian feels that Sally needs her and drugs Jimmy to return to Massachusetts. Gillian returns to Sally after Jimmy becomes abusive, but the sisters are kidnapped. Gillian threatens to cast various spells on Merle, such as making her fall in love with the first man who walks into her apartment, but she finds that she has lost her powers because of her love for Shep. Gillian uses her magic to make Shep lose interest in Nicky and Redlitch's book, and then confesses her identity as a witch to Shep. Gilly Hayden (Douglas Fairbanks, Jr). Gilly, not wanting to force Ann into marriage, jumps out the window with nothing on but a woman's robe. Gina grabs his gun and fires a warning shot into the ceiling, which ricochets and accidentally kills Johnny. Gina tearfully explains that her father Frank and most of her cousins and uncles are gangsters deeply involved in a Mafia crime family, and she is worried that Michael may be sucked into their world. Gina then apologizes to Corey. Ginger tries to take Peter to him and they are seen again by Marsha, who is furious. Gioachino Rossini, having agreed to do an opera based on Cinderella if he could omit all magical elements, wrote La Cenerentola, in which she was aided by Alidoro, a philosopher and formerly the Prince's tutor. Girlfriend of the died: Lucia, gets angry with Willy, accusing him of being a murderer. Giselle advises him to follow his heart. Gish plays Janice, a wealthy girl whose fortune has been entrusted to two trust company vice presidents (the "official fathers" of the title). Given a crash course in royal protocol by a representative of the State Department, Eddie becomes increasingly uncomfortable with becoming a prince consort, financially supported by his wife, with no career other than fathering an heir. Given a view of the facility, including being shown the triple combination-lock vault, Vic then goes to work on practicing his safecracking skills for the big day. Given some of the men Jessica is shown to be test-dating at the start of the film, it's no surprise she'd want to fan out her prospects a little. Given the fact that she is engaged to the cold-tempered and vicious gym teacher, Roy Kelton (Rick Rossovich), who is nicknamed Jackjaw for his constant threat of breaking his pupils' jaws, Danny goes through his school days somewhat uninspired and suffers in silence. Giving up, Molly goes home to New York and her waiting suitors, who are astounded when a tall cowboy suddenly shows up and carries Molly away. Glad that he did his job, Dupree celebrates by leaping into the air with joy, until he falls to ground. Glade has a daughter, while Sears has a son. Gladstone" (the name he uses during his rendezvous with mrs Robinson) Elaine correctly guesses that he has been having an affair with a married woman and accepts his assurances that the affair is now over. Gladys Glade and Charlie Sears meet on the train while they are returning home and start a flirtation. Gladys asks for "Mr. Gladys explains she obtained the signs simply in order to, "Make a name for herself," but does not seem to be aware she is being treated as a figure of fun. Gladys is discouraged at having gotten nowhere in two years and she wants to make a name for herself. Gladys is not interested. Gladys looks to be pondering the possibilities; seeing this a concerned Pete says "What are you looking at. Gladys pays $630 in cash and arranges to have her name put on the billboard. Gladys says, "I don't mind the way you're acting, exactly. Gladys shops in a department store (Macy's), and when she gives her name, the word spreads quickly and dozens of people flock around to get the autograph of the famous Gladys Glover. Gladys spots an empty billboard with a message, "THIS SPACE FOR RENT. Gladys' advertising career continues, but she finds its emptiness more and more frustrating. Gleason helps Armstrong become reconciled with Kent and they marry with the blessings of the family. Gleefully pondering his revenge, he and Hooks snap pictures of them and leave, unseen. Glendon Wasey (Sean Penn) is a sleazy, down-on-his-luck con man struggling to sell glow-in-the-dark neckties in Shanghai. Glenn Miller vocalist Pat Friday provided the pre-recorded vocal tracks that Lynn Bari lip synced in the film. Gloria "Glo" Matthews is a beauty salon owner and single mother. Gloria Fay (Joan Blondell) and Mae O'Brien (Glenda Farrell) are two former showgirls working in an amusement park. Gloria and Mae now have enough money to return home to New York. Gloria is naturally upset. Gloria is possessive and quickly becomes obsessed with Jeremy, and Jeremy urges John to escape the reception with him. Gloria lets her son go on the "Up With People" trip to Spain and apologizes to her neighbor for snapping at him when he suggested that she should let her son grow up and experience the world. Gloria's hostile drunken brother starts a fistfight and a news reporter takes photographs that cause a scandal. Gloria/Marsha doesn't plan on ever calling him back, but when she calls her soon-to-be groom and a woman whom he presumably slept with answers, Gloria/Marsha feeling betrayed by her soon-to-be-groom decides to call Phillip. Glory Eden (Ginger Rogers) is the "Purity Girl" of the Ippsie Wippsie Hour radio program. Glory does become jealous, as he intended, but O'Connor is present, and she signs his contract. God agrees and Bruce finds himself in the hospital, shortly after being revived near miraculously by the doctors. God appears and asks Bruce what he really wants; Bruce admits that he only wants to make sure Grace finds a man that would make her happy. God gives Bruce two rules that he must follow: firstly, Bruce cannot tell anyone else that he has God's powers; and secondly, Bruce cannot use the powers to interfere with free will. God offers to give Bruce His powers, to prove that He is doing His job correctly. Godfrey arrives and is authenticated as a "forgotten man". Godfrey declines and Cornelia leaves in a huff. Godfrey explains that a broken love affair had left him considering suicide, but the undaunted attitude of the men living at the dump rekindled his spirits. Godfrey interrupts with good news: he had sold short, using money raised by pawning Cornelia's necklace, and bought the stock that Bullock had sold. Godfrey quickly ad-libs that he was Tommy's valet at Harvard. Godfrey resigns as the Bullocks' butler. Godfrey tells Tommy he quit the Bullocks because "he felt that foolish feeling coming along again". Godfrey then leaves. Going back to his own, Izzy meets his father, who sternly confronts him about missing his curfew and a practice match that day. Going to the address provided, Brad finds Paula already there. Good night". Goodwin is publicly cleared of wrongdoing and recognized as a bigger hero than ever. Goodwin is unable to get permission to speak about Yvette through the usual channels. Goodwin rescues her, leading to a night of romance. Goofy and Clarabelle accidentally fall off the crumbling bridge and accidentally land into Donald (who is riding in a small boat In the river). Goofy and Donald are excited about eating again and begin to sing about delicious dishes until Mickey comes back and reveals that he traded their beloved bovine for a container of beans, which he claims to be magical. Goofy fails to convince Donald to help him save Mickey, but thanks to an insulting song from Troubadour, The duo save Mickey and the trio eventually escape and reconcile with each other and set off to rescue Daisy and Princess Minnie. Goofy is tied in chains by Clarabelle and is about to be thrown off a bridge over a river to drown to death, but Goofy falls in love with Clarabelle and flirts with her and wins her heart with his "numbskull charm". Gordo and Isabella find her backstage preparing for the show, and warn her about Paolo's scheme. Gordo and Isabella rush to the concert to stop him. Gordo takes the blame, and is sent back home as punishment. Gordon arranges for her to stay somewhere Dick can't find her. Gordon finds the engagement announcement in the newspaper and shows it to Ferdi. Gordon hires a bodyguard (Terry Crews) to protect himself, and Joe, expecting Tony to tail him, leaves a set of bogus clues that lead Tony to Miami, Florida, Bangor, Maine, and then Amarillo, Texas, where Tony is shot in the back as he attempts to get on the grounds of the wrong ranch to try to serve the papers. Gordon offers Amarilly a job with his wealthy and snobbish aunt, mrs Phillips (Ida Waterman). Gordon trains the team for the upcoming bonspiel. Gordon was very successful, winning many ribbons, especially in running. Gordon's fiancee, Tracy, comes over. Gordon, under pressure from his wife Grace, reveals to Kathy the secret of his pasthe was once a police officer. Goring takes the brooch and asks that Mabel inform him if anyone comes to retrieve it. Goring then reveals how the item came into her possession. Gossip columnist Tommy Tennant claims to have discovered a vital clue to the mystery, but before he can reveal it, he is shot in Dal's suite. Grace (Danielle Cormack), on the same tour bus, also has a troubled life. Grace Hayes, as herself essentially, has been content to play the vaudeville circuit, and support her son, and the wealthy family who shunned her. Grace Herbert (Kay Francis) is a 30-something woman who has made her living from seducing wealthy men and suing them for breach of promise. Grace Tang (Fay Ann Lee) is an ambitious Wall Street investment banker raised in New York's Chinatown. Grace and Bob are happily dancing. Grace arrives and the two rekindle their relationship, later becoming engaged. Grace buys the local diner, turns it into a version of her real-life club, encouraging the kids to give it the old college try, and put on a show to raise the funds and spirit the college needs to survive. Grace decides that since Ellen is gone, she's going to try to run her old game on Tom. Grace finds herself secretly caught in the middle. When her brother Ming (Ken Leung) inadvertently reveals the truth to Andrew, Andrew leaves the budding romance, of which Kay is unaware. Grace introduces Ellen to Bill Vincent (Nigel Bruce), a vain man who likes young women, and who coaches Ellen on exactly how to lead a man on enough to get expensive presents from him, including a fat settlement to avoid a lawsuit. Grace returned to Azalea Springs because her husband found out about an affair she was having with another woman and is now in prison for assaulting Grace. Grace set up a support system for both Henry and Sam. Grace, on the other hand, has sex with Gerry, but tells him it will be just that one time. Grace, unable to extricate herself gracefully from what she saw initially as an innocuous white lie, finds herself pretending that her parents are an old couple whom she visits as a volunteer. Gradually both men change their attitudes as they vainly struggle to win her affections. Gradually, Peter discovers that in the world of theater the normal rules do not apply — but in the end there is a role for everyone. Gradually, Susan begins to understand the pain she has caused her family and determines to put her own house in order before meddling in the lives of others. Gradually, he develops genuine feelings for her. Graham (Noriega) suffers from severe amnesia and cannot remember what he has done hours after he has done it. Graham and Antoine are approached on the beach by the police who are concerned that a young boy is with a naked man. Graham asks Amanda to let him spend the night despite the fact that he is a stranger, as he has been drinking at the pub and doesn't want to drive. Graham assures him that walking would warm himself, and that was the reasoning for him walking around the room. Graham doesn't notice this due to his condition, but it is clear to the viewer that the child is of significance. Graham enters the pub and looks for her but cannot see her until he meets his friends and then sees Amanda. Graham meets a temp called Irène and begins a relationship with her, which is difficult as he never remembers who she is. Graham remembers Antoine as being his son. Graham stops her though and tells her that they could not continue this in the parking garage due to a security camera being close by. Graham tells her that he cries all the time: movies, books, and birthday cards. Graham then tells his therapist that he is feeling really cold, and asks to have a blanket to warm himself. Graham walks past Irène to go to his car, not remembering who she is. Graham's therapist is concerned at his behavior and tell him that they cannot allow him to leave. Graham, afraid to defy her father, remains at the camp. Graham, knowing that Amanda is planning to return home imminently, says to Amanda that "if the flight gets cancelled, [he is] having dinner at the pub" with friends. Gramoo, Vada's grandmother, has since died; and she still wears the mood ring that her late best friend Thomas died while retrieving for her. Granger bravely attempts to win the approval of Priya's father by promising to honor her and her culture in phonetic but crude Hindi. Granger formally repeats his commitment to respect and care for her. Granger struggles with himself mentally for having abandoned Jennifer David for Priya instead, but still doesn't know that the Priya and Jennifer are the same person. Granger, too, feels something is missing. Grant Withers is a conceited dancer who spends all his free time dancing. Grant then confesses he loves her and proposes to her. Grant's courtship of the Princess, which he attempts to conduct by "American" customs, must be adjusted to Bukistanian tradition, to protect the proposed oil deal. Grant) a primary concern. Grateful to Pepi for saving his life, mr Matuschek promotes the errand boy to clerk. Gravely injured, she is rushed to the hospital. Graves decides to use Miranda to embarrass Ralph and remove him from the throne. Graves has photos of Miranda and Ralph passed around at the royal ball, which, along with Ralph's wild rendition of "Good Golly Miss Molly" on a harpsichord, ruin any chances of a Royal marriage and causes a Finnish company to award a coveted contract to the Japanese. Graves is opposed to having an American on the throne, and proposes to declare the ruling family line at an end and replace it with the serene House of Stuart. Gray Baldwin (Heather Graham), a family oriented and quiet bachelorette, lives a close-knit life with her brother, Sam (Tom Cavanagh). Gray agrees and the three make their way to Vegas. Gray and Sam's relationship has never been thought of as strange, but once a dinner party guest mistakes the siblings as a couple, Gray and Sam decide to venture outside of one another. Gray introduces herself, then Charlie to Sam, and they instantly bond, agreeing to see each other again. Gray is a little hesitant, but agrees when Charlie says they can have a "mini bachelorette party". Graynamore needs bubaru, a mineral essential for manufacturing superconductors. Graynamore offers to pay for whatever Joe wants to enjoy his final days, as long as he is willing to jump into the volcano within 20 days. Green and Ganja quickly become lovers, and she moves into Green's expansive mansion. Green dies in her arms, glad to be at peace. Green successfully talks him down, but later that night Hightower attacks and stabs Green with the Ashanti ceremonial dagger, killing him. Greg Nolan (Elvis) is a newspaper photographer who lives a carefree life that is, until he encounters an eccentric, lovelorn woman named Bernice (Michele Carey) on the beach. Greg admits that he loves Pam, and everything he did before was out of desperation to win Jack's approval. Greg and Claudine reconcile and she reveals she has secret funds, and that they are still wealthy. Greg and Pam travel to Pam's parents' house in Oyster Bay, Long Island to attend the wedding. Greg becomes even more uncomfortable after receiving an impromptu lie detector test from Jack, and Pam later reveals that Jack is actually a recently retired CIA counterintelligence officer. Greg goes to the airport but, devastated by his break-up with Pam and still upset about the luggage mix-up, gets so angry that he eventually finds himself detained by airport security for causing a scene on the plane while frustratingly trying to get his luggage into the overhead storage hold and for saying the word "bomb". Greg hopes to propose to Pam in front of her family after receiving her father's permission, but this plan is put on hold when the airline loses his luggage, including the engagement ring. Greg overhears this, and desperately tries to beat Jack home to erase the evidence, but ultimately fails after Jack takes a shortcut. Greg presents the Byrnes family with a bottle of Mumm's champagne he bought from the drug store, but as soon as Jack reveals that Pam had a previous fiancé, the cork suddenly pops off by itself and accidentally smashes an urn which holds the remains of Jack's mother, giving Jinx the opportunity to urinate in the ashes. Greg proposes to Pam. Greg reveals to Claudine that he is not having an affair, but has made some bad investments and lost most of his money. Greg's attempts to impress Jack either go unnoticed or backfire: He inadvertently leads Jack to think he does drugs, while mentioning the possible subtle drug references in "Puff, the Magic Dragon" while listening to the song on the car stereo on the way to the drug store, and Jack later finds a marijuana pipe that he believes belongs to Greg (it actually belongs to Pam's younger brother, Denny). Gregory Underwood (John Gordon Sinclair) is an awkward teenager who plays in his school football team. Gregory accompanies Frances to Rio, while Nancy, who is about to star in a small stock company play, goes to Connecticut. Gregory immediately recognizes Nancy's supposed predicament from the story of the play that Frances was reading, and explains the situation to Frances. Gregory initially confides in his best friend Steve (William Greenlees), the most mature of Gregory's circle of friends, and asks him for help in attracting Dorothy. Gregory is all for her making the team, as he finds her very attractive. Gregory's friends, Andy and Charlie (Graham Thompson), are even more inept with girls but see Gregory at various times with three apparent dates, and are envious of his new success. Greta later comes to Emma's book launch because her husband, Herr Karl Bollenbecker, (Keir Dullea) is planning to liquidate Richard's publishing house. Greta meets Emma during the banquet and tells her of the same. Gretchen came as the guest of Becca's sister, Lindsay, who is Gretchen's best friend and enabler of her sex, drugs and rock-and-roll lifestyle. Gretchen insists that Bic comes to a family brunch. Gretchen is the publicist for a rap trio and lives in a chaotic apartment, while Jimmy can support himself in upscale Silver Lake and drive a BMW, despite having published only one novel, written during his post-breakup depression, that has sold little and been remaindered at the local bookstore. Gretchen is upset that her wedding is ruined. Grey, thinking Bill has been neglecting and abusing Sue by using her in his cons and scams, suggests Sue stay with her when he leaves, but this only angers Bill, who says that after all the years he looked after her, if he gave up Sue now, people would make fun of her for being on welfare. Grieving, Vladimir goes to a Russian nightclub to ease his mind. Griff (Mitch Morris) is a nerdy, well-dressed guy who is secretly in love with Jarod. Griff again makes an invisibility cloak but this time his boss sees his face on camera he gets fired from his job. Griff enters unseen into the room, and when Melody holds up the device to her eyes, she can see him standing there again. Griff hears this and realizes the fact that everything is his imagination. Griff is a socially awkward person who gets bullied by co-worker Tony by day. Griff runs into his room to put on his invisible suit, and Melody opens the box. Griff takes her into his arms and she utters, "You can believe it". Grigio tries to kill them, but one of his soldiers intervenes, and Grigio nearly falls off the roof. Grimandi, who lives and works on the basis that he considers himself lucky "firstly because I am French, secondly because I make movies, and thirdly because I understand love" is shown regularly to give us the benefit of his advice. Grimes then seeks to rekindle his old romance. Grocer decides to kill Bart himself to impress Martin's client. Grosvenor (Alan Mowbray), the Kilbournes' butler, discovers at breakfast that the family silver has been stolen by the latest tramp, Ambrose, whom Emily Kilbourne (Billie Burke) had taken under her wing as the chauffeur, in her latest attempt to reform fallen and destitute men, much to the exasperation of the rest of the family. Growing up in New York, he vexed his mother with impossible questions about the emptiness of existence, but he was precocious about his innocent sexual curiosity. Guiding them is restaurant owner Jack (John Mahoney) who provides them with advice and jobs for some of them who work part-time as servers at his restaurant. Guilt-ridden, however, he asks her to leave. Gump cannot resist. Guru Tugginmypudha taught him the lesson of distraction with the use of his own urine. Gus Kubicek (played by Guttenberg) is a depressed and overweight cartoonist who recently won a battle against Hodgkins disease. Gus asks if he would still like to have the party scheduled for the coming Friday, and Jonah allows them to keep the date, not wanting to explain his condition to party-goers. Gus gives counterfeit money to Rita and Sergei to spend. Gus is hurt and infuriated, feeling that his daughter has betrayed him. Gus refers to anybody who is non-Greek as "Xenos". Gus refuses. Gus suspects nothing; he worries only that Cummings will reform his bar and scare away his customers. Gus works with two other crooked entertainer-assistants, Russian Rita (Rafaela Ottiano) and Rita's lover, the suave Sergei Stanieff (Gilbert Roland). Gus' brother, Panos (Mark Margolis), flies over from Greece for the ceremony as a surprise Paris has been accepted by Northwestern University in Chicago and NYU in New York City. Guy Stone

(Matt Letscher) is blissfully closeted, picking up tricks for one-night-stands, while capturing the country's heart as "America's most eligible bachelor" (starring in such films as The Love Barrel and I Married the Ghost). Guy and Faye start a family in Washington, where Guy teaches jazz composition at a music conservatory that he and Faye open. Guy and Josie attend the prom as Rosalind and Orlando from Shakespeare's As You Like It. Guy asks her to dinner and Nat declines. Guy chases after Nat and they bump into Chloe and Josh on the street. Guy explains that he basically grew up in the factory during his childhood summers. Guy is sorry to see the end of the band. Guy shows Nat around one of the factories he owns, where one of his longest-serving workers expresses approval of her as a potential wife for him. Gwen Moss (Jeanne Tripplehorn) has spent the better part of her life waiting for the man of her dreams, unaware she briefly bumped into him at school as children and has had several close encounters ever since. Gwen also meets Newton's parents, who are heartbroken that Newton got "married" without telling them, but Gwen manages to smooth things over with them with her charm. Gwen and Hector are the antagonists, Eddie is the protagonist and Kiki is his love interest in the story. Gwen and Marc come over for dinner and Caleb is chagrined to see that Kyle's invited Caleb's family as well. Gwen and Marc storm into Kyle's house after witnessing the debacle, and Troy scolds the group for being so sex-crazy. Gwen encourages Kiki to be her go-between with Eddie so she can have some alone time with Hector. Gwen goes to the town's general store, where she charges her groceries to the "Newton Davis" account. Gwen hangs up to come home and Marc masturbates next to Caleb. Gwen is hired to ghostwrite the autobiography of former child star Francesca Lanfield (Sarah Jessica Parker), whose career virtually ended following her stint on a long-running Partridge Family-Brady Bunch hybrid sitcom. Gwen meets Becky, and spins a lengthy romantic story about how they fell in love, which surprises and impresses Becky. Gwen moves into La Fortuna and finds herself surrounded by an assortment of odd but lovable neighbors who have created a family of their own. Gwen starts creating all sorts of opportunities for Newton: mending his relationship with his parents, helping out with his career by befriending Newton's boss and highlighting his long- ignored talent, and making Becky jealous. Gwen starts to date a girl experimentally. Gwen storms out of the house in tears, and Newton follows her, thinking it is still part of the plan. Gwen takes it upon herself to out Caleb to his parents (Murph Michaels and Mattie van der Voort). Gwen tries to salvage the situation by announcing that she is reconciling with Eddie. Gwen's sister and personal assistant, Kiki (Julia Roberts), and Gwen's lover (Hector) are also involved. Gwenn is suspicious of Flame's motives, as Beauregard is suspicious of Hogan's motives in suddenly taking piano lessons with her. Gwyn Marcus (Sarah Jessica Parker) has always wanted a marriage like her parents. Gyeon-woo convinces him to release her, and she in turn convinces the soldier to free Gyeon-woo and go on with his life and pursue another love. Gyeon-woo just cannot seem to catch a romantic break. Gyeon-woo, completely flustered, carries her all the way to the nearest hotel. Hadley, for her part, announces immediately following her graduation that she is engaged to her boyfriend of three years, and pregnant. Hal Larson (Jack Black) is a superficial man whose fixation on the physical beauty of women gets in the way of seeing their inner beauty. Hal and Rosemary reconcile, cheered by the crowd as they kiss. Hal and his equally shallow friend, Mauricio Wilson (Jason Alexander), spend their nights obnoxiously hitting on beautiful women at nightclubs. Hal arrives at the home of Rosemary's parents, where a bon voyage party for Rosemary is underway. Hal attempts to find Rosemary, but instead encounters a young patient named Cadence at the hospital where Rosemary volunteers. Hal becomes trapped in an elevator with famous American life coach Tony Robbins. Hal begins to avoid Rosemary, who becomes melancholic without him around. Hal convinces Mauricio to accept his abnormality, with confidence. Hal does not realize he's been hypnotized and later meets Rosemary (Gwyneth Paltrow), daughter of the president of the company where he is employed. Hal makes up with Mauricio and decides to reconcile with Rosemary. Hal realizes his true feelings for Rosemary who has, coincidentally, arrived at the same restaurant with her family and sees Hal and Jill seated together. Hal says he is coming, too, having just been sworn into the Peace Corps right before arriving to the Shanahan's home. Hal soon marries an exceedingly vain, and selfish woman named Fiona, who has socially-awkward fraternal twin daughters, Brianna and Gabriella. Hal's work life is steady, but he is dismayed after being passed over for a long-sought promotion. Hal, during his search for Rosemary, finds that Mauricio had his own reason for stopping Hal's hypnosis: He has a vestigial tail, which has prevented him from ever getting close to a woman. Hale states that Ralph has royal blood, and that the country will have to accept him unless Ralph commits a grievous error. Hallerton and Riley view Valentine as a "hick", while Riley and Valentine think Hallerton is a "snob", and Hallerton and Valentine think Riley is a "punk". Hallerton, meanwhile, has misgivings about the corporate life ("Situation-Wise"). Hallerton, who had planned to become a painter, has gone into a high-stress job in advertising, and his marriage is crumbling. Halley Marie Martin (Mandy Moore) is a 17-year-old high school student who is disillusioned with love after seeing many dysfunctional relationships around her. Halley and Macon eventually start a relationship. Halley and her mother get into an argument and on New Year's Eve, Halley sneaks out with Macon to a party. Halley gets a broken arm, but otherwise they both walk away from it unharmed, but Halley breaks up with Macon saying that she can't wait around for him to grow up. Halley playfully uses Macon's 'Jedi Mind Trick' and they kiss and dance briefly in the hallway. Halley's father, Len Martin, marries his mistress, Lorna, in a beach-side ceremony, with guests from all over the world, or "within his radio frequency", as Halley puts it. Hallie and Duncan are able to pursue a real relationship and happily go on a second date with the President's approval and the Secret Service SUVs and Marine One accompanying them. Handy believes that, by becoming mayor, he can show Sally he is a mature decision maker and win her heart. Hank Salko (Gabriel Dell), a member of the Eastside youth gang in New York, is initiated into the world of adult crime when two gangsters, Mike (Joe Kirk) and Butch Brocalli (Maxie Rosenbloom), hire him to stand watch while they rob a bank. Hank comforts Ruby, signifying their budding relationship. Hank is instrumental in knocking Mike out, and after the gangsters are arrested, Hank is released from his sentence. Hank, already struggling through his recent divorce from Angie, loses his job as a family holiday photographer when replaced by a machine. Hanley (William Powell) whose worth is irreproachably large. Hanlon suggests that Susan stay with Mark until her arraignment the day after Christmas. Hannah Lewis (Anna Faris), Matt's co-worker, has a crush on him despite the fact that she is going out with a handsome but shallow underwear model. Hannah and Tom eventually get married. Hannah and Tom go on their honeymoon. Hannah arrives to see Jenny sitting on Matt's lap. Hannah asks Tom to be her maid of honor for her wedding. Hannah intervenes just as Jenny grabs the meteorite, which explodes in a burst of power. Hannah leaves and Tom runs after her. Hannah plays Harry, a very shy young gay man who has a birthmark in the shape of Madagascar across much of the left-hand side of his face. Hannah serves as the stalwart hub of the narrative; most of the events of the film connect to her. Hannah tells Colin that she is very sorry and that he is the perfect guy, just not the perfect guy for her. Hannah's ex-husband Mickey (Woody Allen), a television writer, is present mostly in scenes outside of the primary story. Happy and Flame each come up with excuses for not marrying Gwenn and Beauregard before the last prize show, which deflates both siblings. Happy romance. Happy stars. Happy then asks a very simple question about Beauregard himself, and not about any subject in a book, namely, what is Beauregard's Social Security number. Happy-go-lucky advertising executive David Basner, who recently got a promotion at his Chicago ad agency, returns to work from a vacation. Hardys senseless namedropping gets him into trouble when his father, the honorable judge James Hardy (Lewis Stone), decides to move to New York with the whole family, to work on a case involving an orphanage. Hare-brained schemes keep interrupting the honeymoon plans of newlyweds Bill (Franchot Tone) and Margaret Weldon (Lucille Ball). Harley appears and notes her change in appearance – the flowers are actually from him. Harley claims he is willing to do anything to be near her. Harley knocks Sarah down and forces Judith to leave. Harley says Judith's sex life is boring. Harley, a wealthy Internet entrepreneur who wants to invest in Janice's business, attempts to seduce Judith as they work late on matchmaking surveys. Harold "Handy" Harrison is a commoner working as the local plumber of Mooseport, who also owns a hardware store. Harold (Harold Goodwin), an MGM cameraman who has designs on Sally himself, mocks his ambition. Harold Chasen (Bud Cort) is a young man obsessed with death. Harold Hall, a young man with little or no acting ability, desperately wants to be in the movies. Harold McMurphy (Piven) is a single, 30-year-old, Hollywood-obsessed tour bus driver in Beverly Hills who works for his father's struggling tour company. Harold Meadows (Lloyd) is a tailor's apprentice for his uncle in Little Bend, California. Harold and Sidney set out to stop Harold's budding relationship with Amanda before it embarrasses them both. Harold appears and after sending Scott home, tells Thorne to back off. Harold arrives and Madea repeats what she told Tammy, and now that they're both here she tells them both that if her car isn't fixed when she's ready to leave, they'll have to run like hell. Harold arrives at Amanda's house and she tells him that his father already explained everything. Harold considers the trip a revelation and begins renouncing aspects of "straight" society. Harold embarks on a frenzied headlong dash, involving bootleggers, car chases and multiple changes of vehicle (from missing the train to various cars to a trolley to a police motorcycle to a horse-drawn wagon to horseback), through the countryside and along the crowded streets of Culver City and Los Angeles. Harold goes to meet them and overhears a conversation in which a man hits on a woman by telling her that he is a writer represented by Arthur Blake (Shawn). Harold meets with Amanda to discuss the script and is the only person who sees the same problems with the screenplay that she sees. Harold races with Rich to get to Amanda's house first so he can finally explain why he lied about being a writer. Harold rescues her dog and helps Mary hide it from the conductor. Harold rushes Maude to the hospital, where she is treated unsuccessfully and dies. Harold saves himself, but Sally is trapped by the circling boat. Harold tells Scott he is responsible for vice principal Rusty Thorne breathing down his neck, due to a scare he'd given him when he was in high school, and advises him to be himself and not the wolf. Harold then spots up-and-coming actress Amanda Clark (Fenn) arguing with her agent, Sidney Stone (Williams). Harold tries to tell Amanda the truth about himself, but can't bring himself to. Harold's father answers, thinking he's talking to Lulu, and tells her to forget about Harold because he's only interested in Hollywood floozies. Harold's father finds out that Amanda accused him of being obsessed with floozies and realizes that he is the reason they broke up. Harper and Lance seem to be as close as they were in the old days. Harper gets a phone call from Q and puts it on speakerphone to share the call with Lance. Harper goes down to the kitchen, and as he heads back to bed, he finds Mia throwing up blood. Harper reluctantly agrees, but keeps the biography a secret. Harper witnesses this from a distance and rushes to Lance's aid, comforting him. Harriet arranges for Alfred to meet the sheikh (Amr Waked) at his estate in the Scottish Highlands. Harriet asks if he will need a partner and Alfred realizes she is talking about herself. Harris Telemacher

(Steve Martin) is a TV meteorologist living in Los Angeles. Harris finds Owen's manuscript interesting but ordinary, but believes Steve's manuscript to be not only worthy of publication but a serious candidate for literary prizes. Harris only has $40,000 on hand, so he tells Johnny he will send him the rest later. Harris then makes two more bets for Johnny, both winners. Harris, who now employs Elsie (Helen Walker), Owen's former secretary before Steve, also asks to see Steve's manuscript. Harrison becomes increasingly suspicious of his wife. Harrison keeps his promise, but Cole votes for himself anyway. Harrison later reveals to Sally that he conceded the election because Cole needs the mayorship more than he does and that all he really wanted was to propose marriage to her, which he does. Harry (Alan Rickman) is the managing director of a design agency; Mia (Heike Makatsch) is his new secretary. Harry Bliss (Nicholson) runs a guard dog service and is going through counseling with his wife, Adele (Lauren Tom). Harry Mork (Glenn Ford) is a womanizing former traveling salesman for a greeting card company, who now wishes to settle down. Harry Tasker leads a double life; while his wife Helen and daughter Dana believe him to be a run-of-the-mill computer salesman, he is actually a black operative for a covert counter-terrorism task force known as Omega Sector. Harry and Helen are called to embark on a new mission together at a formal party, where they encounter Simon attempting to seduce one of the female guests. Harry and his partners Albert "Gib" Gibson and Faisal infiltrate a private function in Switzerland, where they learn of the existence of a Palestinian terrorist group known as the Crimson Jihad, led by Salim Abu Aziz. Harry arrives and toasts George. Harry becomes a Navy pilot and shoots down a kamikaze plane that would have bombed an amphibious transport; he is awarded the Medal of Honor. Harry becomes increasingly aroused by Mia's overtly sexual behavior at the office and does nothing to dissuade her. Harry begs her forgiveness. Harry commandeers one of the jets to rescue his daughter. Harry considers himself a ladies' man, but his confidence is temporarily shaken when an Internet "dream date" turns out to be a prostitute (Janice Hamilton). Harry does not go along with the idea, believing Vada is too young to be traveling by herself, and fearing what might happen to her in A. Harry has accepted a promotion to an office job in New York City, and has gotten engaged to Phyllis (Angela Lansbury), a middle-aged widowed housewife from Altoona, Pennsylvania. Harry heads to Helen's office the next day to surprise her for lunch, but overhears her talking on the phone to a man named Simon. Harry is a natural-born liar who, because of his profession, feels that he lives by a code of honor even if he can't quite explain it as one thing after another spins out of his control. Harry is able to rescue Dana while he and Aziz struggle in the cockpit. Harry is comfortably married to his wife, Karen (Emma Thompson), who stays home to raise their children. Harry is mildly annoyed by Patrick's unexpected arrival and embarrassed by his casual attitude towards women, sex and nudity, particularly after Patrick moves into Harry's hotel room with his purportedly platonic female friend, Émile Zola Bernkrand (Joanna Crawford). Harry is staying alone in the same hotel as Evie while he starts his new job and finds an apartment, where Phyllis, who is still back in Altoona, will later join him. Harry is surprised to find that Patrick is not the young boy he had expected based on a photograph, but instead is an 18-year-old bohemian with a beard (which, it is later revealed, got him expelled from school). Harry kills two of Aziz's men and pursues the leader through the streets of Washington, C, but loses him on a rooftop. Harry realizes that he truly loves Evie, and that Patrick and Phyllis need to spend more time with each other rather than with him. Harry refuses to give Dawg his piece and escapes with Morgan's help, but not before being mortally wounded. Harry suspects that antiques dealer Juno Skinner has ties to Aziz, and visits her undercover as a corporate art consultant. Harry takes Evie back to the hotel and impulsively kisses her, but Phyllis unexpectedly arrives from Altoona.

Harry thus arranges for Helen to participate in a staged spy mission, where she is to seduce a mysterious figure in his hotel room and plant a bug on his phone. Harry, Helen, and Dana are then safely reunited. Harry, who wants to buy the store as part of a bootlegging operation, attempts to sell the duo an alcohol-laced drink, referring to it as "lemon-syrup". Harvester soon teams up with Dana, the senator, and powerful Washington socialite Adele Wright (Agnes Moorehead), threatening Ed with a Senate investigation. Harvey is dancing and appears to have forgotten Kate. Harvey is enjoying himself on the dance floor and Kate is left at the children's table, finding herself again in the same position as on the blind date. Harvey quits his job, deciding he prefers to remain in London and explore the possibility of a relationship with Kate. Harvey, feeling lonely and not wanting to stay in an hotel by the airport, follows Kate and joins her on the train to Paddington station. Harvey, now looking for Kate, goes into the corridor and seeing her waiting for the elevator, he disappears into a side room where there is a piano and begins to softly play one of his own jazz compositions. Hatari. Hathaway arrives home and in disbelief, assesses his ruined home. Hathaway has removed the laser from the lab. Hathaway is secretly developing the laser for the CIA, but instead of doing the work himself, he has his unpaid students do it, while misappropriating the project funding to remodel his house. Hathaway's sycophantic graduate assistant Kent becomes hostile when Hathaway puts Mitch in charge of the laser project. Hating her new job and only seeing Mickey a few days each month, Ellen becomes lonely and depressed. Hauled off to jail, but with Irma in love with him, Nestor is sentenced to 15 years' hard labor. Havel (Milo Forman). Havel, he keeps these thoughts mostly to himself. Having a special interest for trains, she is enthusiastic to do an article on rail transport. Having achieved his goals, Oberon releases Titania, orders Puck to remove the donkey's head from Bottom, and arranges everything so Helena, Hermia, Demetrius and Lysander will all believe they have been dreaming when they awaken. Having been blind from birth, he volunteers for a risky experimental visual prosthesis that may restore his sight having a microchip installed in the visual cortex of his brain that connects to a camera that would give him only, at best, fuzzy black and white images. Having been left without a lover, job, or home, Cecilia ends up immersing herself in the frothy escapism of Hollywood once again, sitting in a theater watching Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dancing to "Cheek-to-Cheek" in the film Top Hat, forgetting her dire situation and losing herself in the film. Having been the Prince of Darkness for ten thousand years, the Devil assembles his sons to decide which of them will succeed him, but instead he keeps the throne for himself. Having been told by Rafferty that Lenny will die just as Bobby did earlier, Bobby offers to trade his own chance to move Uptown (essentially, his own immortal soul) to save Lenny's life. Having been told by his manager that Mabel is going to marry crooner Ronny Caudwell (Robert Paige), an enraged Cain is waging an all-out fight against his opponent, until he hears Mabel's voice and is knocked down. Having both come from dysfunctional families, with divorced parents and siblings with out-of-control kids, the two disdain the idea of getting married or having kids. Having decided to make a self-financed documentary film about these revolutionaries, Sue travels to India, with the help of her friend, Sonia (Soha Ali Khan), from the Institute for International Studies at the University of Delhi. He comes by Lily's house later that night to apologize, saying he was depressed and needed to be alone. He comes home from a road trip to find Ellen gone. He comes into Lou's room and starts to strangle her, breaking off only because he still loves her and cannot harm her. He comes to Donna's comedy show, but she leaves with another man, Sam (David Cross). He comes to believe that the agricultural reforms of Europe will not work in Russia because of the unique culture and personality of the Russian peasant. He comes to confront her about the book because he thinks it only points out all the bad things in a relationship. He comes to her house at a party in which Kay has ordered her guests to appear in animal masks. He comes to know that for her research, Meeta has taken a heavy loan of from a Chinese investor by forging her father's signature. He comes to the last remaining memory of Clementine, the day he had first met her at a beach house in Montauk. He comes up with an idea. He comes up with the idea of recreating iconic screen kisses from Hollywood movies (such as Burt Lancaster and Deborah Kerr's in From Here to Eternity) using drag queens in the female roles. He completely transforms himself, yet when she sees him, all she talks about is Jason. He complements Connie's appearance and helps to bring her out of her shell for Walter. He concludes that the two are having an affair. He confesses to Nicole he is obsessed with owning the Cellini Venus, and arranged the dinner in order to convince her to sell it to him. He confesses to his friend dr Bob Davis (Tom Conway) that he may have married a woman in London. He confides his predicament to Salvador Dalí, Man Ray and Luis Buñuel, but being surrealists they see nothing strange about his claim to have come from the future, finding it to be perfectly normal. He confides his sexual problems to his brother, John (Adam Trese), who is training to become a Catholic priest. He confides in Q and shows him part of the video. He confides in the pair about the previous night's events before riding away, seemingly for good. He confides with Andy that his girlfriend Jill learned of his infidelity and broke up with him. He confides with his best friend Keenan (Dustin Seavey) about his partial transformations, who in turn contacts dr Sydney Catchadourian (Gina Bellman). He confronts Ernest in feigned outrage, expressing his shock and disgust at his friend's conduct, while slyly stressing that if Ernest and Anne wish to be together, he can do nothing to prevent it and will give Anne a divorce. He confronts Geenie and Maury with this and they explain that, after the funeral, Beth suddenly reappeared, seemingly alive and well. He confronts Joanna, calling her a bully and a liar and then scolds Marni for starting the mess behind his back. He cons Ridgeway into believing he bought Alexis off; Ridgeway writes him a check for a million francs. He contacts Bud in Houston and tells him about the storms that are forecast to hit the landing site. He contacts Paul to have an affair with her, to open up her mind to passion, rather than her career. He contacts Sybil's sister and offers to help with her murder defense. He continues to attend to his meaningless job as an insurance salesman, still employs his cleaning lady and spends his nights alone. He continues to deny he is. He convinces Carol to join him in a dance contest, but when she is unable to perform the dance steps of a new fox-trot, they fight. He convinces Dia to break off her engagement, and moves in with her. He convinces Nancy to fund the project, and he buys up all the outstanding shares in the mine, gaining total control. He convinces Princeton University's college football star, Carter "the Bullet" Rutherford, to join the Bulldogs, hoping to capitalize on Carter's fame as a decorated hero of the First World War (like Alvin York, he single-handedly captured a large group of German soldiers). He convinces a friend to cover for him and spread a fake story about a broken water faucet. He convinces her to accompany him to New York, where she indeed does become a Broadway star. He convinces the firm to hire Polly back, and she is summoned to a meeting with Dan Merlin (Fisher) the son of the titular owner. He convinces the panicked women to leave their rooms and then starts to look for a match. He convinces them when he offers them a free furnished apartment which the other couple forfeited by not showing up. He corrupts them and talks them into staying in Paris. He counters that he didn't plan to ask her. He crashes Baroque and Alix's wedding and promises to humiliate the designer by publicly revealing who his bride really is unless Baroque withdraws the charges. He crawls into his old room, only to find Dorothy there. He crosses paths with Peggy Brown (Reynolds), a model and dancer who has become jaded and cynical after years of struggling to survive in the city. He dances with each of the girls and appeals to their virtues, stressing the importance of chastity. He decides once more to prove she is a fraud. He decides that Joe would be a better match for his landlady. He decides that the only way to win her affection is to perform the Magic Pocket Slave Monsters theme he originally performed and failed at their high school dance, again. He decides there's nothing wrong with taking his son out to see the river once in a while. He decides to approach her but withdraws when he overhears she's living with Kevin. He decides to bring his girlfriend with him, Rachel Chu, who has no idea about the enormity of his wealth, and who is unprepared for immersion in an overwhelming world of wealth that doesn't welcome her. He decides to call Bottomley back for one question per show - and when they've reached a new high in soap sales, the show will drop him. He decides to cancel the plan to drain the oceans because it would destroy life on Earth. He decides to go after her, and the two reunite in Italy. He decides to hide until he can save enough money to return to America, and assumes the identity of a footman. He decides to interview her for a series of articles, then falls in love with her. He decides to marry her anyway. He decides to pretend having another amnesia episode and get Lois to call off the wedding because he doesn't remember that he loves her. He decides to provide fully equipped 10-acre farms free to thousands of homeless families if they will work the land for three years. He decides to show it at his school's science class presentation. He decides to stay in the house and join the team as Bob, despite his dislike of boats. He decides to surprise her on her birthday and takes her on a nighttime trip to an amusement park which ends up quite differently from how he planned: the pair encounter an AWOL soldier who holds them hostage and rants about his misery after being jilted. He decides to try to get Ann to marry him in order to get a part of her fortune. He decides to visit Logan immediately to tell him the good news, and is baffled by Logan's horrified reaction when he opens the door. He declares "only assholes get laid. He declares he will send the controversial environmental bill to Congress with a massive 20% cut in fossil fuels far more than the 10% originally envisioned and that he is withdrawing his support for the weak crime bill, promising to write a stronger one in due time. He declares that he will wait for her as long as necessary in the street outside Higgins's house ("On the Street Where You Live"). He declares that in six months he could turn Eliza into a lady by teaching her to speak properly. He declares to the cab driver that they're going back to the church. He declines to dance with Elizabeth suggesting that she is not pretty enough to tempt him. He defeats Ramona's fourth ex, Roxy Richter, by prodding the spot behind her knee, which Ramona tells him is her weak point. He defeats her third ex, vegan Todd Ingram, who is dating Scott's ex-girlfriend, Envy Adams, by tricking him into drinking dairy. He deliberately runs into another lamppost and knocks himself out. He demands again that Izzy gives him the rematch he had requested, and after some mocking, Izzy agrees to it. He demands that his father drop the story on the water supply (testing proves that the water is completely ordinary) and stop the negative coverage of Hope House. He demands that she leave Brice and offers to help with her business. He demonstrates this to her by making her perform various ever more frenzied and humiliating actions. He denies that there is an affair, questions her motives for marrying him, suggesting that perhaps she had only done so to boost her career and lend credibility to her marriage counseling business. He denies this, and unwittingly turns the tables and befriends the frustrated detective Lloyd, showing him the pleasures that Paradise Island has to offer, even paying for the most expensive suite, the bridge suite, for as long as Lloyd is there. He denounces Norton and tries to expose the plot at the rally, but Norton speaks first, exposing Doe as a fake and claiming to have been deceived, like everyone else, by the staff of the newspaper. He describes his opponent as a bluestocking. He despairs of her ridiculous affectations, social-climbing aspirations and constant embarrassing attempts in company to show herself as an elegant, cultured sophisticate. He destroys the costume and all computers he was using in his imaginary world. He develops his skills quickly, however, and the next day, demonstrates enough skill to leave the three girls astonished once more. He develops ideas relating to agriculture, and the unique relationship between the agricultural labourer and his native land and culture. He develops the Ulysses android (which looks exactly like him) for the purpose of space exploration, since an android would not be affected by the isolation. He dies as his car plummets over the cliff into a fiery wreck. He discovers it is the doing of a six-year-old boy, Grover Martin, whose Uncle Simon (Red Buttons), an airline pilot, gave the boy a blinker light as a gift. He discovers that Kitty is also being pursued by Count Alexei Kirillovich Vronsky, an army officer. He discovers that she has long been in love with her cousin Wilbur, but feels too socially awkward to pursue him. He discovers that the dandy's mask hides his aged appearance. He discreetly hides Irene's binoculars. He disguises her scent with zombie blood, and takes her home where he hides her in a 747 airplane. He disguises himself in drag, as Francesca, as a means to continue his search. He distractedly throws his change into Eliza's basket, and she and her friends wonder what it would be like to live a comfortable, proper life ("Wouldn't It Be Loverly. He distracts Le Cocq with his idol, Celine Dion, then lies to Prudence, telling her Darren stood up to his mom, getting her to go back to Darren. He does her a favor by buying mango ice drinks for Cecilia and her companions, only for them to flake out on him. He does not hear from her for quite some time and his life without her begins. He does not look where he is going and accidentally falls through a hole just as the show is about to begin. He does not realize she is the president's daughter, and at first believes Hallie was playing a joke on him. He does not say much, but he keeps leaving signs on his window about what he would do to each of them. He does so, and O'Malley returns to the mansion, instructing Roquefort to locate Scat Cat and his gang. He does so, and Red uses it to capture Heaven's canine angels and send them to Earth in the prison cells, including Anabelle. He does suggest to Delacro, however, that he feels a compulsion to defend his wife's honor, and therefore challenges the American to a duel. He does this and insults women to make himself feel better about the problem he has with his manhood; he suffers from hypospadias. He does this, leading to a touching and romantic scene where he arrives in disguise into a packed auditorium and watches her play the melody of George Winston's variations on Pachelbel's Canon in D on a piano onstage. He does, however, write a letter of introduction to an academy for young gentlemen which may prepare him for recruitment at a later time. He doesn't confront her, but tells what he has found out to Charles. He doesn't get much help from his roommate Rod (James DeBello), who keeps telling him to give up, and together they philosophize about men and women. He doesn't get to meet Claire, but is instead confronted by a woman named Lili - Claire's look-alike and illegitimate cousin from st Petersburg. He doesn't have much luck when he tracks the man down, but he and Pola become enamored with each other and eventually marry. He doesn't know what he wants. He doesn't realize that Julie's at his house. He doesn't realize that his girl-Friday is the one he really loves until it is almost too late. He doesn't realize that she is the story: a princess in exile, in danger of assassination; and, falling in love with "Scoops", while engaged to a prince. He doesn't want the kids to get married, so before the wedding he exposes the Bensons' secret. He dominates the game with a no hitter, and at one point he notices that Tenley has stopped by on her way to the airport. He double exposes or over exposes much of the footage, and the rest is simply no good. He drags a smitten Leahy off by the hair. He dreams of becoming a New York City playwright, and a small inheritance from his grandfather gives him his chance. He dreams of becoming a famous writer, but his previous novels have all been rejected by publishers. He dreams of deep space exploration, which would be difficult because of the lack of human contact for long periods of time. He dreams of finding a perfect woman will love him for who he is, despite his father's insistence that he lower his standards. He dresses in Fuzzy's late grandmother's clothes, adopting the name Carlotta and a conservative disposition. He goes to drink alone at a bar, where a young, beautiful woman (Minka Kelly) walks in. He goes to her room and gives her the corsage he had bought for the princess. He goes to look for her. He goes to pay for it, but the car has been found and the police inform the car's owner that Rawlins is assumed to be dead. He goes to see her one last time. He goes to the Hukilau Café to wait for the Coast Guard. He goes to the Oasis to talk to his brother for support, but also receives no support. He goes to the bank, but when he returns, Lana is gone, along with his mother's expensive Steuben glass egg. He goes to the party, where he sees his younger self having sex with Helena, after of which she tells him that she loves him. He goes to the room where she is staying to hug her, when Agnes and Chris suddenly come in. He goes to the wedding the same day, only to have an annoyed Bart tell him that he can't let him in. He goes with her to be alone at a waterfall. He graciously understands and agrees to call off the wedding. He gradually turns up the heat while watching Cathy intently for her reaction. He grins, the film cuts to Gladys and Pete driving in a car and discussing plans for the future. He grudgingly agrees to give her a lift out of town and encourages her to go back to her parents. He had been assigned by both Jackie's mother and the mayor of the town (who is also his father), to act as Jackie's escort and guide on the trip. He had been hinting throughout the movie that he was interested in her, but was frustrated because she seemed to never notice him and she was wasting her time with shallow relationships with guys she could manipulate, rather than seeking emotional intimacy. He had divorced her because she was always involving him in real-life murder cases, but she wants him back. He hails a policeman to have her put in a jail cell so that she's kept somewhere safe, but when the cop arrives, she tricks him into arresting Michael instead. He handcuffs the two together and disposes of the key, leaving the two stuck together until the handcuffs can be removed. He hands her a jewelry box, which reveals an engagement ring set with a black diamond. He hands her a letter, in which he admits that he knows she forged Nikki's letter and confesses that he loved her from the moment he met her, though it took him so long to come to terms with it.

He hands the baton to Danny, and he successfully dance-conducts his own composition. He happens to be passing by, as does Julia Wayne, when two halves of a ripped $1,000 bill float down to the street. He happily does so, and then all the guests join them on the dance floor. He happily goes back to Nita, and is last seen on stage in the new Broadway play. He happily offers to take her to Las Vegas. He has Jimmy look in the club's dining room; Jimmy knows seven women there (the chances of the title). He has Paul's car sent away and creates a fake rainstorm using a hose. He has a book published and becomes a best-selling author on the subject. He has a brief, quietly emotional conversation with Alyssa, and gives her a copy of Chasing Amy, his new comic based on their failed relationship. He has a fantasy that she is a femme fatale overcome by his playing of Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto. He has a frequent fantasy sequence involving a merman (Brent Corrigan). He has a group of tight-knit friends, which includes a wacky girl named Connie; Anita, an emotionally distraught young woman who constantly contemplates suicide; Robert, a young WASP who fancies himself a poet; and Bernstein, a gay man. He has a limited amount of magic to help him. He has a modest family life, where he is a car tire salesman for Kate's father and Kate is a non-profit lawyer. He has a nihilistic view of the world which is why he never does homework and skips school frequently. He has a reputation of womanizing female tourists and does not display any interest in committing to a serious relationship. He has a strained relationship with wife Penny, a plain and skittish woman who is startled by a noise Jonathan makes and dies from a heart attack. He has a suspicion that she has gone to a beach (Fire Island, New York) that she told him about, the only place that makes her feel truly happy. He has a tattoo on his abdomen that reads "The Legend" with an arrow pointing down. He has also been recently relieved of his faculty position at New York University, further complicating the couple's financial position. He has also been spending his time convincing the gullible townspeople that he is actually a European noblemen. He has also met and fallen in love with a colleague, Denise Gaines, who has developed a method to isolate genetic material and later becomes his fiancée. He has been told about the deception, and over dinner he explains that he was serving in World War II when his wife (Amelia's mother) died. He has cast a powerful spell that turns Odette into a swan during the day, and she is able to temporarily turn human at night if she is on the lake under moonlight. He has desired her ever since, and now that Pearl is a widow, Joe feels the time is right to make his move. He has done so to keep his fairy godparents. He has even pushed his own sons into learning the guitar and is seen riding them to become better. He has even signed over his stock to Amelia, as he intends to remain in the islands. He has everything figured out until he meets the acerbic Kristin Peralta (Nadine Velazquez), a talk show circuit therapist who is convinced that he is nothing but a charlatan. He has explanations for everything else and demonstrates that his conduct has been exemplary at all times. He has gone into business for himself running a limousine service and owns a whole fleet of limousines. He has him arrested, but Sherwood convinces the police to give him time to straighten out the situation. He has in essence become their butler, catering to their every whim. He has learned that he may be liable for his wife's debts. He has made a contract that his mother will not come to see him for at least two months. He has meanwhile dropped his bid to become department head and has become a more involved parent and professor. He has no intention of being insulting, and is in fact admiring Frank, but Franks facial expressions convey his own self-loathing. He has realised that Suzanne doesn't want to marry either of his sons, and takes her on a trip to look for Bill, in an effort to join them once and for all. He has seven overbearing sisters who ridicule and emotionally abuse him regularly and leads a lonely life punctuated by fits of rage and anguish. He has thousands of followers, including celebrities like Jessica Simpson, Val Kilmer and

Mariska Hargitay (Pitka's mantra is "Mariska Hargitay"). He has two X-Files-obsessed friends wait on the roof, while he goes into the party to drive Mike out. He has two dogs entered in the competition. He heads to the Peace Corps and confronts Ralph, believing he and Rosemary got back together. He hears a gunshot and, upon discovering that Hightower has killed himself, he instinctively drinks Hightower's blood. He hears his own harsh words: "She's so deliciously low. He hears that a friend, who is also a writer, has died in an accident, and of whom only Roy knows that he had just finished a manuscript that he had not shown to anyone else yet. He helps Jill move out of her place and the two move in together by week's end. He helps her and four other people board the moving train, but the train leaves the station before he can get off. He helps her piece together the truth about the deceased Charlie and deal with three menacing people who are now following her. He helps her succeed in getting the arrow to hit the bullseye, something she had been struggling with. He helps his dad with his landscaping business and takes care of Veteran's Field, where the Chatham A's play. He helps install a new system for Penelope and her son Jake. He helps the two couples by leaking the story of their engagements to the press, forcing the earl to (reluctantly) accept the situation. He hesitantly accepts, but he has a condition; if the plan backfires and she isn't in a show by the end of the month, Sharpay is forced to move back with her parents and work at Lava Springs. He hides Lenore by letting her soak in a suds-filled bathtub and then in the resorts fish pond. He himself originally purchased a swamp worth Rs. He hires John as the new CEO of Deeds. He hires a local actor to play the part of his grandfather, whom he calls Doo-Dah. He hitchhikes there and she says, with a smile: "what took you fing so long. He hits a three million dollar jackpot and Joy reminds Jack that they are married and hence, she is entitled to half of the money. He hopes that the introduction of excitement in her life will dissuade her from leaving the family. He however, lives with his mother and three younger siblings, acting as head of the family. He hurries back to his office and condo in New York, but his closest friends do not recognize him. He hypnotizes Hal into only seeing a person's inner beauty. He ignores her threat to jump from a window, and is so guilt-ridden when she does so immediately that he marries her. He ignores her warning, and goes ahead with his efficiency plan. He immediately accepts. He immediately confronts Izzy about it, and Karin, despite her brother's objections, tells their father that he had joined Mary's team. He immediately goes on a spending spree, doing good deeds for friends and strangers alike, worrying June Baylin, his fiancee. He immediately warns the police, who arrive quickly to arrest him. He inadvertently does so while Brendan is there too, and leaves Brendan to face Sally. He inadvertently offends her, so Lisa moves out and spends a pleasant, tipsy evening at George's modest new apartment. He informs Mitch that he has been admitted to Pacific Technical University, where he will room with physics "legend" Chris Knight. He informs Peter and Zooey that he is, in fact, a successful investor and returns the money he borrowed from Peter, stating that the billboards were the couple's wedding present. He initially approaches the gym representing himself as a businessman looking to buy it, and acts relatively impersonal with its staff, although he is strangely fascinated with the world he discovers there (reflecting the expansion of physical exercise to the mainstream which occurred in the 1970s). He initially believes Tess is pregnant when she announces they're having a child. He initially wants to do it, but ultimately rebuffs her, unable to cheat on Maggie. He initially works as a busboy, McDonald's cashier, sidewalk merchant, and limousine driver. He initiates conversation with a stranger and recalls his childhood in Greenbow, Alabama during the 1950s. He insists on a raise. He insists on using it that same night and, as compensation for such short notice, gives Baxter two company-sponsored tickets to the hit Broadway musical The Music Man. He inspires her to find her voice, which leads to some complications in his relationship with Kate, forcing Reed to reexamine every aspect of his safe, secure life. He instead brings Nick to a runway so that he too can experience being caught in a landing aircraft's turbulence. He instructs Jones to make a large deposit for Mannion's mother's benefit at the First National Bank, where police detectives are expecting Mannion to make another robbery attempt. He instructs Matt to lure Jenny to a meeting where she can be exposed to another meteorite that will draw away her powers, leaving her a mere mortal. He instructs Puck to retrieve the flower with the hope that he might make Titania fall in love with an animal of the forest and thereby shame her into giving up the little Indian boy. He instructs Sally to never let him be alone with Simone and to not let him weaken. He intends to tell the newspapers the real story about his "capture" of the German soldiers. He intercepts the bridal party and convinces Sandra to forgive Paul by sharing lessons learned from his own mistakes, particularly that the pain of heartbreak is outweighed by the regret of never risking one's heart in the first place, something he admits to always regretting having done. He interrupts her during the wedding reception she is attending and declares his love. He introduces Gloria and Mae to his friend SgtTom Foster (Warren Hull). He introduces her to a new approach to life; to live every moment of her life and to do whatever she always wanted to do. He introduces her to the finer things in life, while Breezy stays true to her humility and charm. He introduces himself to Jen and they happily hug. He introduces himself, explaining the family name was originally "Delacroix" but his grandfather tired of Americans pronouncing the "X" in the name. He invents a method of flinging a net over a tree full of monkeys, which the zoos want. He investigates, learning her real identity. He invites Christina and Courtney to an after-party at their hotel, but Christina goes home and later regrets not going. He invites a co-dependent, seemingly "perfect couple" to share his large apartment, only to see them completely disrupt his life when they insert themselves into his new romance.

He invites her back to his flat and she accepts. He invites her for coffee, his first step on the road to seduction. He invites her to dinner because Nat's going to a work party that night. He invites her to his birthday party, where she shows up with Morgan. He invites her to the boat he lives on, and the two end up kissing and beginning an affair. He invites Mr Herald to the island, where he apologizes to Grandmother Cambaretti for placing the announcement in the newspaper. He invites the four to his Rock Vegas resort as a peace offering. He invites them both over and tells Alyssa that he would like to get over her past and remain her boyfriend. He is John Prentice (Sidney Poitier): a widowed, black physician. He is Michael Sherwood's best friend. He is Steve and Matt Stifler's cousin. He is Whitman Crawford (Pullman), and they instantly hit it off. He is a Civil War historian and lecturer, which bores Sally but is very popular with local ladies who call themselves the Mason-Dixon Dames. He is a maker of documentaries (apparently equipped only with a handheld 16mm camera). He is a playboy who doesn't work for a living, spending his time indulging in hobbies like speedboats and fast cars. He is a pompous and obsequious clergyman because he expects each of the Bennet girls to wish to marry him due to his inheritance. He is a school teacher from Ohio who has inherited a Tahiti estate. He is able to bond with her by helping her shop for a prom dress. He is about to say that the woman was in a wheelchair when he pauses, suddenly suspecting why Terry has been sitting unmoving on the couch. He is about to throttle Duke when he realizes the boat has left the dock for Alaska. He is again filmed by his little brother, who again posts the footage on the internet for the whole school to see. He is agonisingly slow at making a move to win the heart of Anya, so the whole village comes together to help speed things up. He is also frustrated by Brian's insistence on going to "the Baywatch" and by Ricki's lesbianism. He is also glad that her last memory of Paul is one worth having (the concert), as opposed to Simon's own (their argument, and Paul's subsequent restriction to his bedroom). He is also pursued by two NSA agents who were tipped off to Martin's contract by Grocer. He is also terrified by paparazzi and by Leslie's jealous boy-friend. He is also the president of the school's dorky Film Club. He is amused by her regal manner, but less so when she appropriates his bed. He is angry at Mike for taking some of his hours, and for stealing his woman. He is angry that she deceived him, and painfully decides to cut their ties. He is appalled to find Joan in her wedding finery, and persuades her to run away with him. He is arrogant and pompous, with no regard for the business side of his racing team. He is assigned American Lieutenant Catherine Gates (Ann Sheridan) as his chauffeur, much to their mutual discomfort (arising from several prior clashes). He is at a total loss as to how this could have happened. He is at his wit's end when the Adamses surprise him with a check for $6,000. He is bailed out by Prudence, but his troubles are not over. He is befriended by the Duke and British paratrooper Major David Bruce (Rex Harrison), who has taken leave to contest a parliamentary by-election. He is brash and self-confident. He is brought up short by the person, who asks him if he wishes to kiss the bride. He is called by princess Minnie and she requests him musketeer bodyguards. He is called into action when a Soviet cargo ship sends a request for help due to a patient with acute appendicitis. He is carefree, until his parents split up, after 36 years of marriage. He is caught watching a video on his cell phone before a class by Esther, a middle-aged woman Jon earlier encountered weeping by herself at the college. He is cautioned to keep silent by Richard or risk going to Jail. He is certain his invention, Enduro cement, will make his fortune, but his new wife is not so sure. He is childishly naive to the realities of living in an inner city neighborhood. He is comforted by Belle, an old family friend, and later share a kiss. He is concerned about the couple's public image, although he believes that Anna is above suspicion. He is consistently seen never wearing a shirt. He is constantly in debt and cannot begin to write a contracted novel.

that will pay his bills including a lucrative advance by his publisher. He is content to spend his time fishing, hunting and putting around his large family mansion, inhabited only by himself and a butler (Scatman Crothers). He is continually trying to "get the band back together". He is deeply regretful of his adultery and tells Peggy he wants her back. He is deeply troubled by her resignation and tries to convince her to stay. He is delighted when he finds Joan waiting for him in the taxi. He is delighted, and on the way to her house, he stops to buy expensive 50 cent violets, even though he had earlier passed up violets at 15 cents. He is disappointed, but Carol talks him into taking her to the chip shop. He is disgusted and leaves, as Georgina tries to explain herself. He is enchanted with her, approaches her, and is rebuffed. He is engaged to Trent's daughter, Roberta (Lilian Bond). He is engaged to his long-time girlfriend, Linda (Angela Featherstone), who was attracted to him at a time when he dreamed of becoming a rock star. He is enticed into an upmarket European car showroom after setting eyes on an attractive sales assistant and mechanic, Carole Bennett. He is entranced by her quirky outlook on life, which is bright and excessively carefree in contrast with his morbidity. He is entranced by the lipstick mark and Meg's beauty, and therefore misses her boarding the departing train. He is excited about his newly acquired Matisse and wants to show it to Otto. He is extremely embarrassed by this unexpected turn of events and vows to lure Pride into his bed and break her heart, so that he can become her boss technically and emotionally. He is finally granted bail and scheduled for a court hearing. He is forced to answer no, and that he is really in love with Margit. He is forced to confess to his family that he never really courted Sue but merely bribed her to act the part of his fiancée. He is forced to dress as a female Army nurse to get aboard. He is forced to maintain the charade to avoid getting into trouble with Newman, and losing the commission. He is found outside and is invited in for dinner. He is frustrated when his current priest refuses to just sign the paper, but is willing to renew their vows so their marriage can be "legal". He is further upset to discover that Melanie and the three women whom he previously broke up with by conference call are bonding over his disregard for their feelings. He is glad to be the head of the house for his friend. He is grief-stricken when her husband and she return to Europe, but the two women have arranged that Sam will take her place and nurse his broken heart. He is heartbroken, and realizes the pain he gave to everyone when he conned them. He is hurt to discover that has his ex-wife Jean has rented a house to accommodate everyone who is attending from the States, except him. He is immediately smitten by her. He is in a dead-end relationship with his social-climbing girlfriend Trudi (Marilu Henner). He is in a failing marriage with Dora (Gwyneth Paltrow), and working for his former band mate Paul (Simon Pegg), writing and recording commercial jingles. He is in a healthy relationship with his girlfriend Grace Connelly (Jennifer Aniston), but also has a mild crush on his co-worker, Susan Ortega (Catherine Bell), who barely seems to notice him. He is in a long-distance relationship with his high school girlfriend, Kimberly Jasney (Christine Taylor), who is currently a student at the University of Memphis. He is in desperate need of help to find a real relationship. He is in the midst of putting together a multi-billion dollar merger and has ordered an emergency meeting on Christmas Day. He is informed that the Queen has rescued Constance from prison. He is initially angry with Kate, telling her that her timing is way off and he is now seeing someone. He is introduced to Nadia, who tries to seduce him, but Doug instead befriends her. He is involved with a divorcee, Lois Grey (Maureen Arthur), while she is developing an interest in Phil Fletcher (Leslie Nielsen), who also is recently divorced. He is killed several times, landing in Hell and returning to New York each time. He is later freed by Emily (Hannah Spearritt), a fellow student who, similar to Cody, is actually a British MI6 undercover operative. He is later hit in the head again and changes back. He is married, but she agrees to go with him to his lodge in Maine, mistakenly thinking she's going to meet a bunch of Elks Club members. He is misled and climbs into a teacher's room and ultimately becomes the laughingstock of the school. He is not aware that Lucy has broken her engagement with Cecil, and Lucy cannot lie to the old man. He is not dying and they can live happily ever after. He is not looking forward to it, but must go through with it. He is not succeeding when Manton's daughter, the often-married mrs Connie Manton Dezlow (Audrey Long), interrupts the business meeting, takes a liking to the handsome young artist, and makes herself his patron. He is now working at a chop shop with Carlos. He is nursed back to health with the help of Loco, Loco meets Eben (Rory Calhoun) whom she thinks owns most of the surrounding land. He is offered a ride by a young woman who turns out to be Wilhelmina "Willie" Hammond, a member of a wealthy society family, running from an arranged marriage to another socially prominent type, stolid Alvin Bailey. He is offered an opportunity for a role in a movie that he cannot turn down, the only catch is that the job is in Seattle and Elliot will be gone for four weeks. He is only humoring her as she leaves, and the audience gets the first sense of how detached he is emotionally. He is ordered to the Siege of La Rochelle. He is overheard talking to himself while cleaning up by Grosvenor and suspected to be crazy. He is particularly angry that the Managing Director of the firm has strung him on for weeks. He is particularly uninterested in engaging with the male actors and extremely interested in the physical charms of Elsie Marina (Marilyn Monroe), one of the performers, and sends a formal written invitation for her to meet him at the Carpathian embassy for supper. He is passionate about being a celebrity, but unfortunately he just isn't very talented. He is perfectly content with his home life in suburban New York with his lovely wife Brenda (Gina Torres), a teacher, and his two young children. He is perhaps the only Stifler about to graduate from high school as a virgin. He is picked up at the airport by lovely Maria Martelli (Eva Bartok), who works for the hotel's owner, the Countess Alzani. He is pleased to be able to spend more time with his wife. He is prepared to kill Orville but the princess takes him to the wise man Hyder Kahn. He is preparing an extravagant live production of A Christmas Carol on Christmas Eve, forcing the network's staff, including his assistant Grace Cooley, to work on the holiday. He is pursued by the paparazzi, his insurance company, his campaign managers and an increasingly adoring public, all the while fearful of his impending assassination. He is quickly made a member of Corps Saxonia, a student society. He is quite happy as a bachelor, but Anabel proves to be a very determined schemer. He is recognized by a passing policeman, and the Kid is convicted of panhandling and sentenced to ten days in jail when he cannot pay the fine. He is rejected by all the women he asks. He is schooled in English history and culture and shown a variety of English dishes. He is searching for money for a drink, and Eliza shares her profits with him ("With a Little Bit of Luck"). He is seen taking dr Matsutani's second-term Economics class. He is shocked to find himself being welcomed to his own place. He is shocked, as she told him that she was in Santa Fe on an extended film shoot and would not be in A. He is shot by accident, and barely makes it to Amarilly's house before collapsing. He is shown walking down the street with Sarah and they hold hands. He is skilled at selling to men and seducing women. He is smitten from afar with the coldly beautiful actress Barbara Darling (Elizabeth Hartman). He is so convincing at it, women of all kinds won't leave him alone. He is so shy around women that he can barely speak to them (to stop his stuttering, his uncle has to blow a whistle). He is soon disqualified because he had already graduated six years prior, as revealed when Rachel humiliated the group at a party. He is startled to find that the target is Debi's father, Bart, who is scheduled to testify against Martin's client. He is still in love with her, so Sally suggests he pretend to be in love with someone else. He is stopped by a policeman and, when he admits the car is not his, taken to jail. He is stressed as he battles landlords and immigration. He is stuck on the ending, until he hears Ruth humming how she thinks it should go. He is successful and stylish. He is taken to hospital. He is taking brief shots of people in the park. He is the #2 Guru in the world, next to Deepak Chopra. He is the best student in class and the only way he can fail is by copying Ryder's paper. He is the life of the party and loves his job at a men's clothing store. He is then discreetly compensated for his efforts by the husbands. He is then surprised to hear Chester and Sal have a son. He is thrilled to learn that she worked during the war helping assemble the very bombers he himself flew, and introduces her to his men: World War II crew mates Mitch O'Hara (Murray Alper) and Bill Stuart (Lewis Howard), and college friend Tim Kingsby (Stephen McNally). He is thrown off repeatedly while trying in vain to catch Lance's horse in the race. He is told that he's getting the start for an upcoming big game, and is given a hard time from Van Leemer which doesn't help his confidence or nerves. He is too cocky to be concerned when she reveals that she is the girlfriend of well-known gangster Willie Ryan (Otto Kruger). He is unable to bring himself to live in the house, and leaves it abandoned and with a debt he cannot afford. He is unable to escape until Fanny Chenal, driving by and spotting his rental car, appears and turns on the water supply in retaliation. He is unaware that Stroker is moving up through the field in an effort to win. He is unmoved, brusquely ordering her to go wipe the smudged lipstick from her face. He is used to getting what he wants, but when he invites her to visit the gardens on his estate alone. He is very content with his life, suspecting that Hannah is too. He is very much attracted to her, but she rejects him. He is waiting for Stifler's Mom (Jennifer Coolidge), who he had sex with in the first film, hoping she will show up and be willing to do it again. He is welcomed and introduced to the school atmosphere by Frenchy (Didi Conn), who was asked by Sandy to help show Michael around. He is welcomed with open arms. He is worried, though, when he finds out he is to divorce Elizabeth. He joins forces with "Daddy" (Sid Haig), car, surfboard, and skateboard customizer and owner of local music club The Dungeon to publicize the venture. He joins his friend George Calamari (Murray), and George's sister Squid, to spend the summer on the island of Nantucket, Massachusetts. He joins them on the road and tries to fit into their communal lifestyle. He jots down her phone-number on a scrap of paper and calls her, only to be disappointed when her grandparents pick up the phone. He jumps at the chance and they drive off together, Stifler not realizing until after the car has driven off that it was Finch and his mother. He jumps on the next plane to his hometown, Big Eden Montana, giving up his new home and career. He just goes by "Other Guy". He justifies his actions because he knows that he is only stealing from the company and not harming the individual card-holders. He keeps in touch with Stacy via handwritten letters, sharing with her the epiphanies he is experiencing and how he is becoming a different person and his life is advancing and improving. He keeps putting off the unpleasant business. He keeps this secret, telling neither the Harts nor Thayer, exchanging Thayer's dinner with his own delicious meals. He kept all this from Robyn, as she is finally pregnant with their first child after years of expensive fertility treatments and the baby is almost full-term. He kicks her out, denying responsibility. He kidnaps Wilhelmina, Jones' visiting aunt, and a few others, and takes them back to his hideout. He kisses her before he leaves, and Sugar realizes that Joe is both Josephine and Junior. He knocks O'Reilly down and, struggling with Jackson, tells Celine he loves her. He knocks on her door, pleading for her to let him in. He knows her intentions and wants to propose to Georgia before Pamela gets the chance. He knows the director but cannot get an audition. He laments Eliza's dreadful speech, asking why so many English people don't speak properly and explaining his theory that this is what truly separates social classes, rather than looks or money ("Why Can't the English. He later asks Olive to pretend to sleep with him so that he will be accepted by everyone as a "straight stud". He later finds out what goes on at the dance hall and goes to get Rosalie. He later joins her in a jacuzzi, and she feigns choking; when he does not attempt help, she decides they are a match. He later leaves a number of apologetic messages on Isabelle's phone. He later meets Nitin Kapoor, a film-maker (Saurabh Shukla) who later films him as he works out in the gym and other physical activities. He later meets Sonali Verma (Perizaad Zorabian), a journalist, who helps him through his difficulties and they later fall in love. He later says that he has to kill a man in his hometown who used to bully him in high school, but laments he has no car to get there. He lays his heart on the line and promises to appreciate her more. He leads a hunting party to the city where they find a group of young adults scavenging supplies. He learns from Rhea's mother (Kirron Kher) that Sameer has died in a car accident, and he sets out to help her reclaim her positive outlook on life. He learns that Lainey was there in order to lose her virginity to herA. He learns that daily expenses, including gifts and dates for his new girlfriend, quickly add up as well as mourning over the death of his new friend who dies. He learns that she is dating a man named Dana McGuire (Jess Barker), who is an adviser to Senator MacVickers (Harry Davenport). He learns that she was merely the daughter of a Berlin laundry owner and a common street walker. He learns that with his knowledge of the future, he founded the "Man From The Future" company; however, he has betrayed Otávio, divorced four times, and put Helena in jail after she was discovered holding a bag of his cocaine. He learns there is an opening at Now and goes for an interview with her. He learns to play with a team rather than just himself. He learns where she lives and goes to see her anyway. He leaves ODowd to be Fitzgibbons new assistant, putting Tony Scaponi in charge of the choir. He leaves and G fires Lauren. He leaves and spends the whole night out drinking on the streets. He leaves and stumbles around the city, which brings the movie back to the very first scene with the bartender. He leaves for the nightclub where Jay is celebrating his girl-friend's pregnancy. He leaves her at the airport, where she is kidnapped by Alexei who now wants Nadia to have the baby. He leaves her. He leaves his partner Edna Murphy, after seeing Sue Carol in the dance hall. He leaves in anger. He leaves once more for San Francisco, by air as time is running short. He leaves the bandstand to pursue her. He leaves the manuscript outside her door, with a note telling her to read the last page and that he loves her. He leaves the ring, and Rodney angrily follows, but trips on the rope and falls on his back. He leaves the room and Ash returns and tells Minta what an embarrassment to men that Sweetland is by going around and practically begging any woman to be his wife. He leaves with Richmond and a tennis ball and head to the competing firm. He leaves, and via Twitter he communicates with Helena, and they happily meet in an airport, where she fires Ricardo after 20 years of working with him. He leaves, but quickly returns, and tells her what he said to her a year ago was all wrong. He lets his friends judge her from the outside, not for who she is on the inside, and when she turns out to not be like every other girl he breaks up with her. He lies and tells her that he is a writer represented by Arthur Blake. He lies to Ted about her, saying she is grossly overweight with many children, to discourage him from having any contact with her. He lies to a policeman to keep her out of trouble and takes her home. He likes her very much, even after she tells him all about her blackmail attempt. He literally bumps into the very pretty secretary (played by Scacchi) who is assigned to help him. He lives a charmed life scooting around on his mobile pillow. He lives off funds received in compensation for an injury and sporadically works on a celebrity porn website with his roommates (Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, Jason Segel and Martin Starr), in between smoking marijuana or going off with them at theme parks such as Knott's Berry Farm. He lives on the countryside and works in a small café. He lives with his mother and cheats on his diet. He lives with talented, but nerdy Norman Cornell (Todd Susman), who writes the entire newspaper. He lives with two roommates and tries to make ends meet so he can take care of his little son. He locks her husband and her latest lover, Paul (Hardie Albright) (of whom she has already tired), in the vault, and forces shop owner Hollander (Lee Kohlmar) to smoke a drugged cigarette that soon makes him forget his troubles. He looks out the window and is surprised to find Meg in the building across the street, working in an office with an open window. He looks out the window to see the police, and they are going to the room next door where his friend Ed is in bed with mrs Johnson. He looks uncomfortable at the door, Amanda asks Graham whether he is alone, and he says he isn't. He loses his car on a bet with Simms. He lost his memory for a total of six weeks and was recorded as missing in action. He loves Barbara and considers her body perfect, but still finds pornography more satisfying. He loves Hollywood films and amuses himself handicapping theoretical wagers on horse races. He makes Tad swear not to break her heart or he will tear Tad to pieces with his "vicious rhetoric". He makes a bet for £50,000 with a doctor, Sir James Aldroyd, that he can live for a year, working at whatever jobs he can find, supporting himself solely on whatever pay he earns, and not relying on any of his accumulated wealth. He makes a deal with Bob: in exchange for a contract to perform at the club (at some later, unspecified date), Bob will court Maria and repel her with his "obnoxious" personality. He makes a play for Molly, also seeking her professional help. He makes a series of overtures toward various men, including Barry (Jon Favreau), the persistently hot-headed husband of Zooey's friend Denise who doesn't really like Peter all that much to begin with. He makes a special presentation to Carol, and, with his last remnant of magic, wins her over and they kiss passionately. He makes an appointment for a manicure as Theodore Drew III, scion of a socially prominent family. He makes arrangements to call on her, but Grace, who still thinks that Tom is "just a

"cowboy" criticizes Ellen for wanting to see him. He makes both shots, winning the game and the championship to everyone's delight. He makes himself a suit and wearing it, goes to his office but is caught on camera, not yet revealing his face. He makes peace with his friends and challenges Gideon again, this time for himself. He makes plans to use the heroic death in support of the Navy when testifying before a Senate committee in Washington,C. He manages to get into the restaurant where Daphne is present, but he gets into trouble when he cant live up to his own story about being a wealthy man, not being able to pay his bill. He manages to get to A. He manages to notify Richard on phone requesting Clara's intervention on the case. He manages to outwit Lumpjaw for much of their fight until the two fall into a river and go over a waterfall. He marries Laura. He may get married some day. He meets Baba Hindustani (Vijay Raaz) in a hotel who promises to cure him of the teasing he gets from being a virgin. He meets Christine (Miranda July), a senior-cab driver and amateur video artist, while she takes her client to shop for shoes, and the two develop a fledgling romantic relationship. He meets Gary Cooper (Tim Robbins) and Mary Ann Webster (Lisa Jane Persky), the couple providing the ride: they are extroverted and upbeat to a fault. He meets Janet again outside the hospital as he is leaving and, since Chuck has failed to show up, she offers to take him home. He meets Michelle (Rebecca Mozo) and experiences partial transformations when they go out together. He meets Morgan and suddenly takes an interest in her. He meets Natascha, a Russian countess (Sophia Loren), in Hong Kong after she sneaks aboard in evening dress to escape her life at a dance hall for sailors. He meets Simon, who says he will give the Venus to him, but that he can never mention the statue to anyone, or see Nicole again. He meets all of Colin's family and must perform in a variant of the Highland Games, in which the groom must compete to prove himself worthy of his bride. He meets and befriends a waitress, Julia Sullivan (Drew Barrymore), at the reception hall where he regularly performs. He meets and falls in love with the fiery Mary Kate Danaher (Maureen O'Hara), the sister of the bullying, loud-mouthed landowner Squire "Red" Will Danaher (Victor McLaglen). He meets her outside the police station and they kiss in the middle of the road, when it starts snowing again. He meets the Martelli family, including Papa Vittorio (Walter Slezak) and his other daughters. He meets the eccentric company owner, Burnbridge Waters (Vincent Price), for the job interview. He meets up with Syd, an old college conquest whom he can't remember, but to whom he is instantly attracted. He mentions that he has booked a conference room down the hall, but when Nat enters she finds a romantic dinner complete with doves and a violinist. He met her playing tennis doubles with friends. He moans in agony and drops to his knees asking "Why. He mounts her behind him on his horse, hurriedly opens a parliamentary session and takes her to the castle. He moves the tent to her and sleeps inside it, although it collapses on top of him. He moves to Greenwich Village, much to the chagrin of his extremely overprotective mother. He moves to Miami, where he finds a boyfriend, Jimmy, and they adopt a luxurious lifestyle. He must also cope with amorous widows, young couples who want him to marry them and a blustering ex-major who claims to have the ear of the Chairman of the shipping line. He must be rich, so Britney gets Mike to act rich. He must be tall, dark and handsome. He must be unflappable, cool, and not care what others think of him. He must plow through his dull daily life while dealing with his feelings for her and coping with his family and his friend Sam. He must preside at the Captain's Table, host cocktail parties, judge beauty contests and dance with the lady passengers. He must rescue an elderly couple from eviction, and he must cope with his wife's (Fay Holden) life-threatening illness. He mutters, "LOVE BLOWS. He names it the Hotel New Hampshire and the family moves in. He narrowly avoids being recaptured when the police search for him in Irma's apartment, but donning his old uniform Nestor simply blends in with the other police. He nearly catches Angel, but Scamp frees her and lures the dogcatcher to ram the pole of his net into a lightpost. He needs a fire to perform the spell, so he burns down a building (appropriately enough, the Pilgrim Hotel). He needs her public image to match her pure radio persona to promote Ippsie Wippsie, "the washcloth of queens". He neglects to tell his servants that he has returned; so they report the "theft" of the car and Sullivan and the Girl are apprehended by the police. He never crosses paths with Alicia, whose boyfriend gives her an engagement ring made of bone. He never returns to the gym. He nevertheless rages at them because the thumb they sent didn't match Brian's fingerprint and therefore not only failed to increase pressure on the prosecutor but even undermined the organization's credibility. He nevertheless showed up, determined to ruin Becca's day as payback. He next visits local crime boss Oxford Charlie (Lloyd Nolan), with whom he has had past dealings. He not only impresses his assistant Louisa Horton (Loretta Swit) with the introduction of his new rules - which include having as much fun as possible - but also Peggy, who admires his youthful approach of life. He notices that Isabelle Sorenson (Radha Mitchell), a new name, has signed up and tells Gracie to let her go first. He notices that a freeway traffic condition sign seems to be displaying messages intended solely for him. He notices that she has a natural talent. He now finds himself rich and (within his company) powerful, and married to the boss's (Bill McCutcheon) sexy daughter Cindy Jo Bumpers (Rene Russo). He now has to keep guard of her until Douglas returns with the money. He now heads one of the largest scientific projects in Brazil, but his eccentricities and tantrums have brought him to the verge of being fired by his former college roommate and current sponsor, Sandra, although she still believes in his project, and tries to defend him. He now knows why she did not keep their appointment. He obtains work as a sheriff's officer, helping a bailiff serve a writ on Crystal Wetherby (Purcell), a woman in serious debt, taking possession of her property.

He offers to fly her and her friends on an all-expenses-paid luxury vacation to Abu Dhabi. He offers to forgive Kathy and take her home, but she refuses and walks home by herself. He offers to go with Irene to help her beat Cornelia. He offers to open her door for her, but the task proves difficult as the door to her old car is stiff and hard to open. He offers to pay Britney $10,000 if she can manage to get Ashley back for him. He offers to pay for a cab to take her to Boston but his credit cards are declined. He omits his last name and makes an abrupt exit with the children. He only accepts provided she keep their bargain. He only helped Nicole because of his feelings for her, and they kiss. He openly shows distaste for eating human flesh, and is the only zombie there who is able to form four, coherent syllables in one breath. He opens the letter and sees the result. He opens the trunk and discovers an apparent dead body (Ellie's boyfriend Kaiser, whom Al had not yet been aware of). He opens up a fake art gallery pretending to be an artist named Deven Shah. He opts for the night and, once he is asleep, she searches until she finds the ring in the kitchen. He orders Lucky to buy the painting, but Helen stops him, and Finchley gets the work for $84,000. He orders Madison to get the film made. He orders clothes to be sent from the store and takes her to a party. He orders that all the resources of the planet should be engaged to create his "Super Death Ray Laser"; the laser's purpose is to destroy Earth, thus making Spengo the greatest planet in the Universe. He owns a driving range in West Texas, where he drinks and hangs out with his pal Romeo Posar (Cheech Marin) and their friends. He panics, and in a desperate attempt to hide it from his parents, he makes up an excuse to leave the club to help out a friend. He passes - but only just. He passes Gwen on her way home and she seduces him again, this time physically. He passes out, but the following morning, she answers the door and introduces herself as his fiancée to a crestfallen Julia. He pauses a bit, turns around, and says that he is rather hungry, accepts her invitation, and even offers to be the one who makes breakfast. He pauses for a brief moment, and then turns around to walk back towards the building as if he forgot something. He pays bail, but Megan refuses to see him or even leave the holding cell. He pays some men to pose as reporters and harass Connie at the dock, so that he can "rescue" her and become acquainted. He performs for them the song Going My Way, which he wrote on this theme. He periodically pops in and out of Tillie's life, going days without calling but showing up spontaneously at her door. He permits her to spend the night while her dress dries. He persuades Richard that he will be supportive of his date. He persuades Romeo to caddy again, but develops a problem with his swing. He persuades her to become his assistant, and potentially his lover, beginning the cycle anew. He persuades her to try out to win a snowboarding competition to win $25,000. He phones God and asks him to do so. He picks a fight, but Will easily knocks him down with a couple of punches. He pitches to Ken Griffey, Jr, who on one pitch, launches it into the stands for a home run. He places a bucket in the shower, and when she takes one it falls on her head. He plans to propose to Elizabeth over Jane as he is led to believe Jane is taken. He plans to return to his native Austria late that night but vows to think of Sarah each Spring ("I'll See You Again"). He plans to take Jessie when she awakens (along with her necklace) and hop a flight for Bermuda. He plays along, almost seducing his wife's purported twin sister, but stopping short each time. He plays the organ at church, has unenthusiastic sex with his wife, Debbie, and spends his off-hours searching for his biological mother, who had placed him for adoption as a child. He plies Eriksen and his assistant Newton with drugs, booze and hookers, and on the day of the contest, they are busy with acts of debauchery as Santo is readying to take the stage - hoping to beat his rival Dougie Stewart (fellow bodybuilder Ken Waller in a memorable cameo). He pours his heart out to Miri, proclaiming his love for her, which she reciprocates. He pretends that mr Hamilton has answered in the affirmative, only requesting that on Halloween the Careys must have a ceremony for his dead mother and find a decent place for her picture. He pretends to be an important Italian teacher priest, who was instructed by the parents of a famous American model (Natasha Hovey) to provide Italian lessons to settle in Rome. He pretends to return her feelings so he can stay close to Margit. He pretends to support her in her decision, while secretly hoping that she will change her mind. He proceeds to Susan's school, where he is the guest lecturer for the day—and as he speaks, Susan becomes infatuated with him. He proceeds to assault Anderson on the way to their wedding. He proceeds to kiss Kitty who declares she considers herself not to have been kissed at all, upon which the highwayman kisses her several times and slips a ring on her finger leaving her enraptured. He proceeds to the airport terminal, where he joins Mason, Caroline, Bliss, and Del Valle. He proceeds to track down Doug, who is back home in Minnesota, working in a steel mill and a carpenter on the side, living with his brother and playing in a semi-professional hockey league or hockey bar league on the side. He professes his love for Mia on bended knees, and they share a romantic kiss. He promised that if she ever left him, he'd give her a second chance. He promises to attend the Mathlete Scavenger hunt the following Saturday. He promises to send for his girlfriend so they can get married once he has "made good" in the big city. He proposes an outrageous wager with his rich Uncle Carlton, that without clothes or money, Michael can make it from New York City to Los Angeles in 10 days, and arrive there in a new suit with $100. He proposes at his cabin and she accepts. He proposes dinner à deux at his hotel and she decides to meet Aidan for dinner. He proposes marriage and she accepts, but tells her pal Marge that she has doubts. He proposes marriage to his girlfriend Gina Vitale, but is shocked to be turned down. He proposes to her but Ishika asks his real name, "Ricky Bahl" he replied, and story ends with a love kiss. He proves to be strong, but less skilled than Izzy. He provides Vada with valuable information to help with her assignment, including home movies and the answer behind the date written on the paper bag. He pulls Kevin to shore and prepares to administer CPR. He pulls out a book of stamps that he bought weeks ago because he knew it to be one of the small things she loves. He pulls out the penny that she turned over when they first met and Zoe promises to trust him more. He pursues her, showing up with flowers at her real estate office. He pursues the elegant and snobbish Eleanor (Olivia Williams), art restorer by day and Salsa dancer by night. He puts her in the car and walks into the wedding, getting Halley's attention. He puts his London residence up for sale and returns to Provence, entering into a relationship with Fanny. He puts two and two together and realizes that Lili and Claire are the same person. He quickly buys a ticket back to London and hires a taxi driver to rush him back to the bank. He quickly gets dressed and runs to the building where Alonzo works and is just in time to meet Jhnelle there, suggesting they do something "better than lunch" which is a movie at a theater in the hood. He quickly switches from one character to the next depending on which woman is present. He quits and moves to Montenegro. He quits his acting job on a sleazy television prank show, his girlfriend, Andrea, breaks up with him, and his agent, Herb, dumps him. He quits the show and makes another attempt to win back Isabella. He races to Chloe's apartment, only to find that she is heading off in a cab with Guy, whom she embraces lovingly. He races to Mary's house, pursued by furious females. He races to her home, but is told that she has left for a study abroad program aboard a ship that will keep her away for a full year. He re-encounters God, who confronts Bruce about his selfish use of his powers. He reacts by pushing her clear into the next room, knocking her unconscious. He reacts by telling her how she doesn't return his affections and drags him along (You are so Fair). He reads her one of his poems. He realises that lying can be used for helping others rather than personal gain, and writes a screenplay about the world being invaded by aliens in the 14th century, in which it is claimed that everyone's memories were erased. He realizes his error, writes his vows, and manages to win back Lola at the airport before she leaves, proposing to her with "the first diamond he ever bought". He realizes that Jody is in disguise as Bliss, and they kiss. He realizes that Maggie was never meant for him, ends his relationship with her for good and rushes to attend Arthur's award ceremony. He realizes that he loves Hannah and decides to tell her his feelings when she gets back. He realizes that one must decide for oneself what is acceptable concerning one's own faith and beliefs. He realizes that skilled musketeers will jeopardize his plan and then goes to the janitor room, telling Mickey, Donald and Goofy that they passed his test and have what it takes to become musketeers. He realizes this is not a healthy relationship pattern but doesn't know how to change it. He reasons that those who are innocent will go to his suite, while the murderer heads to the apartment to silence Mary. He reassures her that he will pay the rent. He rebels against his WASP upbringing, and to his parents' dismay, he romances two black women. He receives motivation from his two "coaches", Gordon (Dylan Moran), a well-meaning slacker who is Libby's cousin and Dennis' best friend, who has made a hefty bet on Dennis succeeding, and Mr Ghosh Dastidar (Harish Patel) his landlord, who uses unorthodox methods of training, such as using a spatula to spank him. He recognizes her from the airport and says "Hello," but Annie only responds with another "Hello" before fleeing. He recognizes that he must resume his life as he becomes frustrated seeing that his dog hasn't gotten over the loss either. He recommends allowing Susan to date Richard until the infatuation burns itself out; Tommy will drop the assault charge if Richard complies. He reconnects with Stella, the elementary school teacher, and continues acting. He reels in the bottom half, leaving the irate Jennifer floating in the water without pants. He refers to himself as a 'sharp-shooter' and the 'rave' amongst ladies. He refers to himself as R since he cannot remember his full name, among other details of his life. He refuses and calls her a "bad sport". He refuses her money, saying that he wants to encourage Timmy's optimism. He refuses money but wants a job. He refuses to discuss it leading them to curtail their honeymoon and return to London where Valeria learns that he was on trial for his first wife's murder by arsenic. He refuses to do this on principle, but finally consents to give Blent an oral retest while the game is in progress. He refuses to do this, but is unable to return the money as he does not know who is behind the bribe. He refuses to go any farther, holding the wheels of his wheelchair and finally getting up out of his wheelchair and walking himself and his wheelchair home, exposing that he doesn't need it. He refuses to help them as he thinks they can help themselves for being high privileged. He refuses to let Catherine help him and tells her that if she sees him to pretend she doesn't know him. He refuses to say that he needs her but in the end, Laida returns to help. He refuses to take Sally's calls and avoids her. He refuses, implicitly revealing the truth about himself and Omar and she departs wordlessly. He regains his ability to walk one day in church, where Deborah, now clean and sober, reconciles with Brian. He regains his voice to tell Ina he loves her and, in the end, they kiss. He rehires Eliot on the spot, and they take over the live show by holding Brice and the control box at gunpoint. He reinstalls the time machine, dresses up as a spaceman, and then travels back to 1991. He relents, on the condition that she wear a carnation. He reluctantly agrees and the two begin a rigorous practice regimen over the following weeks. He reluctantly agrees to do it, but discovers afterward that she was not telling him the full truth: an a-morphic zerophiliac can still change by having sex with another zerophiliac, and dr Catchadourian was using Luke to change herself one last time (into a man), leaving Luca as a woman in the process. He reluctantly lets her in for a meal and soon she tells him her story. He remains withdrawn and begs off early. He remembers Bill's talent and pitches the idea of having a man climb the "12-story Bolton building", which

De Vore's occupies. He remembers little of the night and knows little about his houseguest. He repeated the ritual every year until he was 18, and he has never been in a diner since. He replaces her with Janet, hoping that Bruno will back his revue (or at least that he can use Bruno's reputation to fend off impatient creditors). He replies that he can't answer that right now. He reports the incident to the police with his attorney Orlando present; and the two go to a diner where Vladimir rants about his misfortunes. He reprimands Henry for his attitude, leaving him with the slipper. He requests for her bedroom and carries her inside. He resolves to leave Sophie and go away with his old flame. He responds by initiating a sexual encounter in her parked car. He returns between the ceremony and the reception to check on her, and discovers that she is having an affair with his brother. He returns her wallet, explains that he and June are not involved, and then kisses Sarah just as Jake gets back. He returns home to find Alice trying to call off the whole deal. He returns home to find his parents laughing over their honeymoon recollections. He returns home to retrieve his suit and police catch a bloodied Griff and later release him with a warning. He returns late at night, and as OMalley puts the older priest to bed, the two begin to bond. He returns the money he stole from them, and leaves. He returns to France to find her and ends up walking through town, gathering people as they walk to her job at a restaurant. He returns to New Jersey hoping to finally be with her. He returns to New York, where he regains his form at work, and reconciles with Connie. He returns to her and they discuss the possibilities of having a child and getting married. He returns to the country club to break the news to his partner and the lawyer. He returns to the hotel, only to learn from the maître d' that Sarah has gone out with Peter for the evening. He returns to the party and waits there to talk with Teddy when she returns home. He returns to the room and drives off the unhappy gigolo. He reveals Dudley's true identity to Professor Wutheridge, who urges him to stand up and fight for the woman he loves. He reveals he ended it with her and learns of Julia's plans to marry Glenn. He reveals his identity to the mayor and tells him of his grandmother's support for the mayor. He reveals his true identity to the thoroughly-embarrassed Nancy, and as he has taken a fancy to her, he asks her to dance. He reveals that he bought the house across from her aunt and presents Nora the front door key, attached to an engagement ring. He reveals that he has a wooden prosthetic hand, and he explains that he blames Johnny for the loss of his hand and his own fiancée; Ronny became distracted while talking to Johnny as he cut bread for him, his hand was mangled in the slicer, and his fiancée left him. He reveals that the Hot Chili Steppers went to the State Championship, but did not win until the following year, and that Izzy and Mary were still going strong as a couple. He reveals that their parents are still alive, having escaped to a safehouse. He reveals to a stunned wedding party that Joanna left him at the altar. He reveals to her on one date that he (supposedly) never quite mastered Albert Einstein's theory of relativity. He reviews the day he just had, which ended with his getting fired after discovering his department head Niles Pender's (Hart Bochner) scheme to sell the company under the nose of its owners to a group of naive Japanese investors. He reviews the recording he made of the morning Eliza first came to him for lessons. He runs from his Soviet controllers and hides behind a perfume counter at Bloomingdale's under the skirt of the clerk, Lucia Lombardo. He runs into Flostre and learns that Jo bashed him on the head with a vase. He runs into Lieutenant Dan, and finds that the former officer is now in a wheelchair and has become an embittered drunk living on disability pension. He runs one last con to break Phillip out of prison, only to be caught when he runs into an old co-worker. He runs out of his wedding to live with Nancy, and tries to find himself with the aid of a guru. He runs out of the store to confront Maggie and realizes that she has been cheating on him. He rushes and catches her with a few smooches while she wriggles her way out. He rushes out to get on a plane to find her. He rushes over to her house to offer his assistance, but sees Charles through the window, and realizes the real reason for her rejection. He rushes to the airport, furiously calling the bank in Mumbai with the help of a Hindi-speaking cab driver. He rushes to the church and arrives just as Elaine is married. He saw that the timing was perfect, considering that his parents will leave the house for a week. He says both his brother, Gordon, and his mother are dead. He says both were exactly the same. He says he and the princess are to be married. He says he does not care and wants to marry her. He says he does not want Tess Harding or "just mrs Sam Craig," but instead "Tess Harding Craig". He says he has a gift for her. He says he has confessed his cheating to her mother and they are still trying to work things out. He says he hated his job and that he decided to do what she would do: quit his job and go back to what he loved writing music. He says he's a poet and an investor. He says his mother died by getting kicked in the head by a cow. He says no, revealing that his wife died two years earlier. He says that he has something to ask her, but is interrupted by Jake, and says he'll talk to her later. He says that he will not be saved until he can convince Inès to trust in him. He says that it does not matter what everyone else may think about John and Joanna getting married: all that matters is that they love each other. He says that it might be something that the two of them would laugh about years later, but Megan is still angry because she had to spend time in jail. He says that it was what worked out the best for his success, and she tells him that she could have had those opportunities, too. He says they'll figure it out, and tells her to continue with their plan. He says this while lighting up a Lucky atop a snow- capped mountain, where he lies down as the snow gradually covers him up, but his plans are scuppered by rainfall melting his would-be tomb. He says, "And ere I take this charm from off her sight,/ As I can take it with another herb,/I'll make her render up her page to me". He scores big and adapts to the gambler's lifestyle, gaining respect from Bendetta's spoiled friends. He scurries right off with the money but, to his dismay, Michael finds that the earrings are fastened to Julie's ears and cannot be removed. He secretly arranges for Henry to be offered a good job in South America, but Henry finds out about his hand in it and turns the opportunity down. He secures Maggie a $1 million match in Las Vegas, Nevada against the WBA women's welterweight champion, Billie "The Blue Bear", a German ex-prostitute who has a reputation as a dirty fighter. He seeks help from dr Brubaker, but to no avail. He seeks out his old teacher Ron, who forces him to confront the reasons he quit dancing in the first place. He seems to want to do a makeover on June when he apparently sees her inner beauty. He seems unchanged and has still not finished writing his doctoral thesis on Martin Heidegger. He sees an ad for a roommate and talks the reluctant young woman, Connie Milligan (Jean Arthur), into letting him sublet half of her apartment. He sees her on the street and offers to give her a tour of the real Paris. He sees his family's faces for the first time, but not Leeza's, who was away, reluctantly preparing for her marriage. He sees no real future for himself, rather an entire life supported by the Icelandic welfare state. He sees that she is with Ronny, and he suggests that they simply agree that they didn't see each other at all, but Loretta is conflicted. He sees the news on TV and defies his agent by going to the game to help Darren, as well as show Jane (who manages to stand up to the angry crowd) his chastity belt. He sees the ragged-looking, sneezing wet cat but does not recognize her. He selects a pretty place called "Crooning Water" where she stays with Horace Dornblazer (Newall), his wife Rachel (Dibley), and their three children. He sells his Porsche 911, buys a family van, and gets back together with Rebecca. He sends an invitation to Rachel for the opening night performance. He sends for Corkle and convinces him that he is Joe (by playing his saxophone just as badly as he did in his previous incarnation). He sends for Duke Sheldon, who plants oil on a lot George owns. He sends for two eligible bachelors from America on the pretense of business. He sends her home to talk to her mother about her situation, but Nancy misunderstands him and thinks that he meant for her to discuss their impending marriage with her mother. He separated Jane and Bingley out of fear that Jane had contracted the "mysterious plague". He sets up a date between the two, but Ina shows no interest in Chris, only able to think of Lincoln. He shares a rented room with his pal "Limp" Bill, a construction worker. He shares with Stacy that he started driving from his home in New Jersey just to take a drive and, the next thing he knew, he found himself in Chicago, Illinois. He shares with her his dream to become an Olympic Roller Skater. He showers her with expensive gifts. He shows Piper, Jen, Tish, and Priestly his high school yearbook, demonstrating that he was captain of the football team and class president. He shows her the kitchen, where Manuel is sleeping off the previous night's celebration in the linen basket. He shows his evidence to his son, who hires detectives to watch Lil. He shows the book to his friends Nathan and Lube and explains that it is a sex manual that has been compiled over forty years by the students who found it. He shows up at Eva's job on a white horse and persuades her to forgive him. He shows up at her apartment unexpectedly and sees her without her disguise, so she has to pretend to be her roommate Sadie (Patsy Kelly). He shrugs it off, saying, "I like it" (this has caused the cartoon much controversy for implying sadomasochism). He simultaneously receives more attention from Carol. He sincerely promises not to do so with the staff of the Regent. He sits in the dark every Thursday night, waiting for her to show up. He slaps Ben again, who, in turn, punches Zach. He slaps Pearl after Mickey runs out, assuming they slept together. He sleeps for only 13 minutes and has to stay up for eight months. He slips and falls into his bathtub while holding an electric hairdryer, shocking himself. He slowly gains Julies trust, and convinces her to stay for a while until the others forget about her (though in reality, he just really likes her). He slowly reveals himself to be a callous, social-climbing, gold-digging gigolo, and Julia is shattered when their affair comes to an end. He sneaks in, but then reveals that he is an escapee from a nearby mental asylum and thinks he is "Boney". He sneaks into Tabby's limo before it pulls in and he talks to her, and it is a moment in which he finally realizes he must grow up. He sneaks into the house with the minstrels playing that night at the ball, where her parents are arranging her betrothal to Lord Wessex, an impoverished aristocrat. He sneaks up, knocks Cornelius out, and takes a resisting Tansy back to London. He soon apologizes, however, and they kiss not much later. He soon comes across Hubbie the Ghost (Ralph Macchio), who helps Danny with his girl problems. He soon discovers that Cindy Jo is his wife and he's the president of his company, Liberty Republic Sporting Goods. He soon discovers that his neighbours are a loose troupe of performers led by Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec (John Leguizamo). He soon discovers the exact trouble and orders mrs Orrin to bed with instructions that she not even see her daughter. He spends an uncomfortable night in a chair. He spends his days drinking with friends and creating disturbances across his father's estate. He spends much of the film washing his hands, all the while singing the "Happy Birthday" song an attempt to gauge the proper length of time for the process. He spends the next three years wondering what went wrong - until he gets the unexpected chance to travel back in time and alter that night, and his fate, over and over again. He spends the night talking with a few girls, but he doesn't sleep with any of them. He spent his early adult years in Virginia Beach as a police officer. He spots her on television and tracks her to the studio. He sprinkles his second gift, a packet of glittery "magic wishing dust". He stages elaborate fake suicides, attends funerals and drives a hearse, all to the chagrin of his socialite mother (Vivian Pickles). He stakes his reputation on his mathematical calculations that show Colossal should turn a profit. He stands in lines for hours to buy toilet paper and shoes. He stares dreamily at the stage where

Vicki is performing her act. He starts to develop feelings for his best friend, Julie (Michelle Trachtenberg). He starts to walk off the stage, but then comes back and decides to chant with them instead. He starts working for a Peace movement to get to know Britta. He stays with Gregory in his house, and after listening to an answer message that Isabelle's rabbit, Bongo, has died, he runs to comfort her. He stays with Sharp while they await the arrival of "Social Services" an otherwise nameless woman with plans to place Sam in a "juvenile refuge" and to explore the possibility of treating him with electroshock therapy. He steals the letter, and believes that his wife is having an affair. He still lives with his mother (Chus Lampreave). He still yearns for a reconciliation with Laura. He stops for her, having difficulties driving the car, and asks for directions to Beverly Hills. He stops her just in the nick of time and offers her a position for which she previously applied. He stops singing "La donna è mobile" and begins "Easy to Love", during which Dick gets up and sits next to Nora, where they hold hands and snuggle. He storms off as Tenley comes in, who follows him outside. He storms out, but she persuades him to take her back. He storms over to Simpson's office, and Simpson tells Ryan that he personally screwed him over because Ryan was sleeping with his wife. He struggles with an attacker, who loses his footing and tumbles over a cliff. He struggles with defining career and relationships, and after his best friend Brooke moves away, finds himself falling for Sophie, a downtown photographer. He struggles with low self-esteem, as well as a bullying coworker and rival, Drew, who constantly dominates Julia's attention, a romantic interest for Bruce but sexually for Drew. He stumbles from one temporary job to the next, and he has very serious problems with Heinrich, his rich and influential stepfather, as well as with his brother Viktor. He stumbles into the cabin of Black Larsen, a wanted criminal. He successfully composes the soundtrack. He successfully woos Fanny into his bed, where she leaves him the next morning, expecting him to return to his life in London. He suddenly kisses her goodbye outside. He suffers from obsessive-compulsive disorder which, paired with his misanthropy, alienates nearly everyone with whom he interacts. He suggests getting someone to pose as Finch's sweetheart to get him out of difficulty. He suggests she first marry him discreetly, then divorce him publicly. He suggests that she could portray the maid, since she was an unexpected addition to the scenario. He suggests there is a jinx. He suggests they kiss first, to get it out of the way. He supports himself by writing for glossy magazines, in addition to the tiny royalty checks that occasionally arrive in his mailbox. He suspects customer Connie Ennis (Janet Leigh) of being a comparative shopper for a rival store when she buys an expensive toy train set without asking a single question about it. He suspects his neighbor (and bridge partner) George Ryan. He suspects that Joe knows where she is and tries to get him to admit it, but Joe claims to know nothing about it. He switches the love serum meant for Marge with water and informs her of his intentions to search for Dick, but Spengo overhears Afir's plan and has him placed in the barrel of the laser, to die when Earth is destroyed. He takes Eve away from the mother, but after Henry accuses the doctor of being a fortune seeker, the doctor refuses to have anything to do with Eve. He takes Gil to meet Stein, who agrees to read his novel and introduces him to Pablo Picasso and his lover Adriana. He takes Helen out to dinner and gets her to start teaching him about art. He takes Meena back to her father and tries to make him understand and honour his daughter's wish. He takes Mia home, leaving Q and Harper the last two to leave the shelter. He takes a break from his playboy lifestyle to attend his brother's (Paul) wedding, where he becomes reacquainted with Jenny Perotti (Jennifer Garner), Connor's childhood friend and the only girl who's ever captured his heart. He takes a fancy to her and lets her in on his racket, conning people out of money. He takes a fatherly approach and gives her room/board, but never acts on sexual opportunities. He takes an interest in his waitress, Carol Connelly, the only server at the restaurant who can tolerate his behavior. He takes her back to his filthy apartment and they agree to sleep together. He takes her back to his mansion. He takes her for a walk, they kiss, and he gives her the earrings. He takes her home and meets Judith's mother, Miss Sarah (Ella Joyce). He takes her on a tour through Central Park, and another day they venture for fun across the city and use their self-defense skills to fight a bully named Daryl Kitzens and try to inspect an apartment for rent, worrying his nervous parents. He takes her to Los Angeles and tries to introduce her to Felix Hofer (Sakall). He takes her to a nearby art gallery. He takes her to a nightclub called the Circus Cafe. He takes her to his and Michael's favorite hangout and once come close to having sex. He takes her to see the New York Yankees play baseball. He takes her to the beach and they make love. He takes her to the department store to get an outfit for a night out on the town. He takes her to visit his aunt and they drive a convertible along the picturesque rocky corniches. He takes his groceries to the self-help group for autistic adults. He takes off immediately to catch Cecil before she leaves town, and after a near-miss, finds her at her apartment. He takes on a high-paying experiment to test a drug that enhances the five senses. He takes pictures of her in all of them and sends them with the completed article to his boss. He takes the Tramp back to his mansion and gives him a change of clothes. He takes the video to Rex's wife, Marylin Rexroth (Catherine Zeta-Jones), a marriage-for-money predator. He takes their son's baby photos and taunts her about her perceived lack of emotions, even about their divorce and their son's death, and then assaults her, douses her in vodka, then burns the photos. He takes them through that day's encounter, where Benjamin worked up the nerve to talk to his future wife with "20 seconds of insane courage", and walks up to the table she was at. He takes them to see the girls he saw, which gives them the inspiration to change up their team. He takes up painting and makes an attempt to patronize an émigré Russian artist of genius. He talks Harold into standing up for himself, but when Tammy comes in, he pretends the men are having a Bible study. He taps the new aquarium and the glass shatters. He taunts Buttercup, claiming that women cannot be trusted and that she must have felt nothing when her true love and sweetheart had died. He teaches her some Nigerian pidgin and slangs. He tearfully apologizes to her for never doing the things she wanted when she was still alive. He teases her about the unusual men in her past. He tells Cecilia that he is attracted to her after noticing her watching him so many times, and she takes him around her New Jersey town. He tells Gwen that Caleb is gay so she'll set him up with Marc. He tells Jenny that Professor Bedlam is her true love. He tells Jerry that he didn't double cross him as it was Bernie who wanted to sell the pistol to the highest bidder. He tells Jonah that they can remove it in time, but Jonah's upset that he won't be able to father children. He tells Justine she did good; she's a good girl. He tells Megan that he has been drinking the wine that she bought for them because he is upset that his parents are sending him to boarding school in the fall. He tells Mike that he wishes he'd hit that last pitch out of the park, after which Mike fixes him a drink called "The Spilt Milk". He tells Ryan of a huge merger between his company, Simpson Inc, and a large drug corporation. He tells Victor that he will tell her the truth, but when she telephones and asks him to marry her, he at last says yes. He tells her about a love affair with a woman named Yvette to whom he revealed top-secret information during the Korean War. He tells her about his son wanting to learn French cooking, but she does not understand. He tells her he did not use the Hall Pass and remembers the time he lost his virginity to her. He tells her he fantasizes about her twin sister, but she doesn't have a twin sister, so it's just another way of fantasizing about her and is she offended. He tells her he has decided to attend art school in Boston so he can be near her when she goes to Harvard. He tells her he has got used to being rejected and will not be angry if she rejects him, too. He tells her he has plans to retire from singing and pursue a more conventional career, thinking that will impress her. He tells her he knew he, not Colin, was the one for her. He tells her it can not be, and she does not understand and runs out. He tells her it may be because they fear death, with which Rose agrees. He tells her of the rumor then confesses he's in love with her. He tells her politics is making choices, his number-one has always been the crime control bill, and that he does not want to lose her over this. He tells her she doesn't belong in jail and removes all her other rings and slips a diamond engagement ring onto her marriage finger. He tells her that Edith went to the observatory, when she is really having lunch with George in the cafeteria. He tells her that he is not neglecting or abusing Sue; he cares about Sue and his cons are to provide for Sue. He tells her that he must break up with her, as he's too busy with the revenge mission and "too complex" for a relationship. He tells her that he told his dad that he gave up singing and was given 10% of the business so he can support her. He tells her that he's sorry and that what he felt for her was real, but she accuses him of being a liar and says she can't believe that, then walks away with Derrick calling after her. He tells her that the decision is hers. He tells her that the ramen shop needs a successor, and that she is the successor of his ramen shop. He tells her that, if given a second chance, he would be a much better husband, leaving Erica visibly uneasy. He tells her think about it overnight. He tells her what he never says to his lovers that he loves her and wants her to marry him. He tells her, "I missed, fortunately for you". He tells him that what Art or even himself want is irrelevant, and that the only thing that matters is Betty's happiness. He tells him, "The jails are full of innocent people because they told the truth". He tells his brothers they need to take the women back to their homes in town, but his brothers are unwilling. He tells his father that he is the father of the child and plans to marry Polly, all the while believing Polly is the child's mother. He tells his wife he'll leave her the address of where he's living in Rio to send the divorce papers, resigns from his job and goes back to Rio. He tells of his New York experience with Isabel Drury, of how they fell in love and decided to wed, only to have Cas repeatedly upset Isabel's mother by insulting her belief in astrology, ignoring her warnings that their union would be cursed, then inadvertently burning down the Drurys' house. He tells the tattoo artist, fellow drape Dupree (Robert Tyree): "I've been hurt all my life, but real tears wash away. He tells them his wife is pregnant and they don't know what they are talking about and angrily hangs up. He tells them that they should stop moping around and take whatever action is necessary to get their women. He thanks Jerry for risking his life for the pistol he was going to give to his greedy boss. He then addresses the crowd, expressing his contempt for their antics. He then apologizes and asks her to join the family dinner. He then asked himself, "Vinny, where are you going. He then asks if his wife would have done as well under such circumstances. He then assumes that his wife is connected to the Mafia and are plotting to kill him because of some of his inventions, Claire does not see the "connection". He then calls for the check, pulls out an enormous wad of money, and pays with a $1,000 bill, telling the chef to keep the change. He then catches up with Vizzini and proposes a battle of wits, guessing which cup of wine is poisoned with cocaine powder. He then decides to adopt it, but in a hurry to prove he has a stable home life, he proposes to the first woman he sees, Monica, a hotel maid, that they get married immediately. He then delivers a touching, eloquent speech that redeems him with his daughter and endears him to Kate. He then discovers that he has Tong footage after all; the mischievous monkey had switched the reels. He then embraces her. He then feels so guilty that Cathy immediately notices something is wrong, and he admits what he has done, insisting that he still loves Cathy. He then finds that his psychotic assistant, Tonya (Mena Suvari), who is in love with him, has tracked him down to the resort. He then finds the eviction notice and reads it aloud at the girl's request. He then flips out and reminds her that she had rebuffed him the weekend before and therefore believes she's playing games, then drives her home. He then gives Brian a check for $250,000 for "expenses" and leaves. He then goes back claiming he "forgot" something to tell Bruce to wait for him. He then goes out for a night at the bar, leaving a heartbroken Aimee to get on the bus to Philadelphia by herself. He then goes out with Liz (who chooses the very same restaurant) and ends up making love to her. He then goes to get her father, but on the way back the owl gets into the car making Tom lose control of the car and crash into the house. He then grabs Dooley's taser which he uses on Dave, recharging him. He then heads to the wedding. He then joins the group, pretending that he is actually his friend, Vince. He then kisses Amelia and the two sleep together and she gives him the black leather pants that she bought him as a Christmas present that she never gave him since they broke up before Christmas. He then kisses Cathy, checking to see how this makes Lina feel. He then leaves but quickly returns and confesses that he has feelings for Mary. He then lies in a variety of other circumstances, such as preventing a police officer (Edward Norton) from arresting Greg for drunk driving and stopping his depressive neighbour Frank Fawcett (Jonah Hill) from committing suicide. He then locks the elevator and proceeds to kiss Emma. He then makes a clumsy pass at her, to which she is accustomed and immediately rebuffs. He then meets President John Kennedy as a member of the NCAA "All-American" team. He then meets a woman at the zoo, Gloria Franklin, who is getting married in 2 weeks. He then meets his friends, who state that they've been enlightened, and Chuck embraces Tammy while Earl feigns nausea. He then moves in part-time with Lawrence's son, James (Ashton Holmes), in his college dormitory. He then notices how Dashiell goes to group therapy. He then offers to carry the boxes for the woman to her car. He then orders the couple to be tortured; Harry (under a truth serum) reveals his double life to an

understandably shocked Helen. He then outstretches his hand again, and this time she accepts. He then plans to get rid of them one by one. He then plots to kill Larry at the office that night. He then pops his hand out of his sleeve and laughs. He then presents it to a thrilled Helen to sell at an auction at the gallery. He then proposes and gives her the locket she wore at the beginning of the film. He then puts the gun in his mouth. He then quits the police force and moves to Texas and works for Sysco, the family business. He then remembers that Marlin once told him that Lucy only sings after she meets him. He then reminds Thorne of what he is capable of by leaning into him and growling, causing the Vice Principal to pee himself. He then removes his homeless disguise and reveals himself to be Fuzzy²². He then returned to the United States and was lost and traumatized, until he met surfers and decided to live a peaceful lifestyle. He then returns home determined to rebuild his wounded marriage, but not before paying a visit to his father's grave, promising (in a voice-over) that he will be a better husband to his wife than his father was, pouring a bottle of Irish whiskey over the grave. He then returns to Dairy and teaches at the local second-rate boys' prep school he attended, the Dairy School. He then reveals that Graves has been sabotaging his succession to the throne and has him arrested for violating the Treason Act of 1702. He then reveals to the choir that her husband, whom she previously had claimed was deceased, is alive and remarried to a better woman. He then runs over and hops into the Cabriolet. He then says he could kill her husband to free her from her marriage. He then sets fire to another part of the gallery, forcing an evacuation as a way to leave with the painting and without anyone noticing. He then sets out to romance the judge, intending to threaten her with an alienation of affection scandal to force her to reduce Blair's alimony burden. He then shows her the wedding video, which is full of adoring closeups of her. He then shows him the video of the young Sandra, to prove his words. He then spends the night with Polly. He then springs his trap.

He then tells the kids, "Looks like you're gonna have to go to college after all". He then threatens to sue Brian if he does not pass the company onto him. He then tries Becky (or "Stalker Becky" as Gus calls her) who rejects him by claiming she never thought of her and Jonah as a couple. He then tries unsuccessfully to explain to Merle that Gillian is a witch. He then uses his influence to draw Josie into the cool crowd, much to the dismay of Aldys. He then uses the same voodoo ritual to transfer Tiffany's soul into the bride doll, in order for her to feel what he went through as a living doll. He thereafter opens a letter from Beezy. He thereafter reveals his belief that his father and stepmother, who are expecting a new baby, will care less for him once it's born; but is persuaded otherwise by Charlie. He thinks he's happy, after being promoted from mailroom worker to the assistant of a snotty agent (Cheri Oteri). He thinks she arrives when a vehicle turns up after Stifler is talking on the phone, but it turns out to be his little brother Matt (Eli Marienthal), the star of later films. He thinks that everyone is naughty, and he plans to give the entire world lumps of coal. He thinks that is an excellent plan; he chooses Sally, telling her that this is how she can pay her gambling debt. He thinks the man should be "Anglo-Saxon" (to appeal to the corn belt), while Herbert (Franklin Pangborn), Glory's dressmaker, insists he be under 25. He threatens to put the men to work, ending their idyllic lifestyle, unless they keep Jean from leaving for 24 hours. He threatens to report them to Marcel, but Dave challenges him to the game (without telling Sctanley that he is involved in the game's production). He threatens to take away Seryozha if she persists in her affair with Vronsky. He throws a fit because Ian is not an ethnic Greek, and he orders Toula to end the relationship and tries to set her up on dates with Greek men, but Ian and Toula continue to see each other, against Gus's wishes. He throws it out the window into a river they are driving past. He throws the map, wishes them well and turns to face the mob. He ties them to helium balloons and flies them as one would a kite. He too finds married life less than satisfactory. He too has now become successful. He totally freaks out when he learns that the people he sees in the mansion are all ghosts. He tours many houses with his 7-year-old daughter, Rosie (Maggie Elizabeth Jones), and his realtor, mr Stevens (JB. He tracks down Kate's work number and calls her to explain but she refuses to take the call. He tracks down Missy's therapist, dr Freeman, at the airport, hoping to squeeze in a therapy session. He tracks her down on Facebook and invites her to lunch. He tracks her down to her appointment and they both start another argument, leading to their own breakup. He trades VIP privileges at the club for favors from women. He trades the loot from the passengers for a kiss from Kitty who feels she should "yield" in order to save the life of Lord Varney (Walter Pidgeon), who has gallantly come to defend her honor. He transfers her to a couch. He travels to Provence to prepare a quick sale. He tries to cagde a ride to the bus station but spies Eve on the roof of the bar, and races up to see her. He tries to carry her bridal-style to the car, but finds he cant lift her, so she carries him instead. He tries to convince his mother that they have ended their relationship and mentions his new found love, describing Kimberly. He tries to explain to his therapist that he has got some of his memory back. He tries to find something else they have in common, but to no avail. He tries to fit in the upper-class, and changes not merely his outlook on life but also his hairstyle. He tries to get them to attend the junket, playing on Gwen's ego by telling her she will look better to the press and her fans if she attends (and she will be able to serve Eddie with divorce papers). He tries to hook up with different girls at a house party with his friend Carl, but none of his attempts goes well. He tries to inform Courtney of his decision to audition for the record deal, but cannot bring himself to do it. He tries to move forward with his life, but despair hinders his performances. He tries to persuade her to give up her involvement in the suffrage movement, but she insists she cannot abandon such a worthy cause. He tries to pick up Vicki after her performance but is sternly warned that she belongs to somebody else. He tries to prevent the impending marriage of Colleran (Turner), his best reporter and ex-wife, by keeping her on the job during the critical news coverage of an upcoming execution and prison break. He tries to reconcile with her, insisting that he doesn't care if they remain childless as long as he can be with her. He tries to spend the night at Gloria's but he discovers she started dating Manny. He tries to storm into it unarmed and rebuke the gang members, oblivious to the hazardous stupidity of doing so. He tries to use his powers to convince Grace to stay, but cannot influence her free will. He tries to walk up to her but is stopped by security. He tries to win it back at the casino, putting it all on his "lucky number" 15. He tries, again, to tell her the truth, but she drives away before he can finish explaining it. He turns himself in to Carr, then reveals that he is the millionaire son of Carr's business associate and that he holds a sizable number of shares in Carr's own company. He turns his head, noting his parents outside a door talking to doctors. He turns to Candy and Randy in a last attempt to avoid his domineering mothers match-making scheme. He ultimately stops. He understands he wants to be with Devon and quits his job. He unknowingly drinks the cup of poison. He urges Harvey to return to as soon as possible. He uses Omega Sector resources to learn that Simon is a used car salesman, pretending to be a secret agent as a means to seduce Helen. He uses Reggie's size against him, and locks him back up. He uses his technical expertise to create weapons and gadgets. He uses the tricks he honed in freestyle practice to dodge Rodney's attacks and push him against the ropes repeatedly, finally stating that they both had a lot of things to be mad about, but fighting would not improve them. He uses this time off to take his wife Sandy and children Jennifer, Bobby, and Laurie on a summer vacation from the Atlanta area to the Gulf Coast resort town of Citrus Cove, Florida, where they are beset by a never-ending barrage of problems. He visited the Radio City Music Hall, and described it as the most beautiful thing he ever saw. He visits his cousin Matilda Hemingway (ZaSu Pitts) in New York City, in Horace's view the center of immorality in America. He visualizes her (Stephanie Szostak) sitting there, and asks her why such an amazing woman would talk to someone like him. He vowed never to commit any violence against a human being again. He vows to lock his doors, pull his blinds, and climb into bed - until best friend Jacob (Brian McGuire) talks him into posting a Craigslist personal ad. He waits at the starting point despite Harold's frantic efforts to get him to leave. He waits for Ben at the mayor's lakeside lodge, where Ben has been staying. He waits for her to get dressed, including in underwear she says she keeps cool in her icebox. He wakes to find a note from Beth who is waiting for him at the synagogue. He wakes up and remembers that he is actually a suave conman named George Carey. He wakes up half-naked in the snow with a frostbitten toe, and he is taken to the hospital where the left big toe is amputated. He wakes up in a park, with a dog tethered to his foot and a note on his sweater reading "Sorry", which becomes the dog's name. He walks all night and arrives at Alice's house just as everyone else is leaving. He walks around wearing a scarlet cardigan (with matching socks and shirts) and a devilish smirk. He walks her home one night and finds her Spanish family living in a tiny home next to the railway tracks, where Fran's family show him the authentic Spanish pasodoble style. He walks her home, which turns out to be a few steps away. He walks into a convenience store where a lottery contestant, Cash, has a winning ticket worth $238. He walks into her bedroom and sees his painting hanging on the wall, and a wheelchair concealed there. He walks out, but Gaby speaks with him alone and they work out their differences. He walks over to the limousine, opens the door, reaches in, and presents an adorable Golden Retriever puppy to Stacy. He wanders off to find the "beautiful young lady skunk". He wanders outside as other guests arrive for her party. He wanders the streets and eats food left by chorus girls. He wants an explanation, but Zelda simply orders him: "Kiss me, stupid". He wants her to give up her goal and marry him, but Pat does not give up on herself that easily. He wants her to hold off until his father's term ends in two years, but she is unwilling to wait that long. He wants nothing more than to be a writer, but when his mother's health takes a turn for the worse, Jake is sent to Miami to live with his father, Zowie (Harvey Keitel), a small-time handicapper who gives horse racing tips for a living. He wants to "know trouble" first-hand, and plans to travel as a tramp so he can return and make a film that depicts the sorrows of humanity. He wants to find some meaning and magic in his life, having grown increasingly weary of what he sees as the rather shallow and superficial city of LA. He wants to leave the health resort as well and, without prompting, Vinny promises not to come on to her or do anything else of the sort. He wants to leave the job and work somewhere else, but she angrily tells him he has no choice and that he must stay; it is clear that she is completely in control of the relationship. He wants to repay her so he gets two full-time photographer jobs: one for a Playboy-like magazine owned by Mike Lansdown (Don Porter), the other for a very conservative advertising firm co-owned by Mr Penlow (Rudy Vallee). He wants to skate with her, but on his terms: no money; he calls the shots. He wants to stop his wealthy wife, Gloria (Ava Gardner), from divorcing him. He wants to talk about 'him and her' after the ride, and she retreats again, only to twist an ankle getting off the still-moving ride. He wants to use the telephone, but is instead immediately adopted by Emily Kilbourne, despite the rude efforts of Grosvenor and Emily's daughters Geraldine "Jerry" (Constance Bennett) and Marion (Bonita Granville). He warns Bloom that Stephen will not be around forever, and tells Bloom he should join him. He warns Samantha to be careful and not to get caught. He warns her that he will teach her only the basics and then find her a manager. He was a man in Paris whom she loved and planned to travel the world with but she soon found out he had a wife and child and she returned home alone and pregnant. He was greeted by Sally's parents who gave him five minutes to interact with their daughter. He was tried in a Scottish court and the verdict was 'not proven' rather than 'not guilty' implying his guilt but without enough proof for a jury to convict him. He wears a ponytail, a manicured goatee, "male make-up", and chews nicotine gum, much to Matthew's dismay. He wears down her resolve, and Hilliard catches her in a frilly nightgown. He went to America to sell some old paintings to restore the family fortunes but on the way back receives a message that the cheque he was given for the paintings is invalid. He will come out of it by giving Vernet a lesson on how he should act with Susie to impress her. He will inherit seven million dollars if he is married by 7:00pm. He will soon learn that his hobby for playing chess while his mother was alive is another gift she left him. He winds up getting stuck on it when he tries to head to the other side and then pops himself out of it. He wins Cobb's wholehearted respect and eventually Babe's love. He wins back his job, and is promoted as well, when he sells liquor-coated chewing gum as a sales gimmick. He wonders whether Margo will start hanging out with him and his friends Ben and Radar. He wonders why she left after the triumph at the ball and concludes that men (especially himself) are far superior to women ("A Hymn to Him"). He works at an MTV-like cable channel called "In Your Face" as an executive, and after learning about a documentary she's been working on, wants to get it aired on his network. He works for a nightclub called Chocolate City and aspires to be its owner. He works in the stockroom at SmartTech, an electronics store. He works with Julie by bringing in a box for Michael at work. He would also rather be a tyrant and recites some lines of Ercles. He would be very pleased to have Tom marry her. He would rather have her helping him get the business deal with Rodgers. He would rather settle down in the bedroom. He would spend Christmas Day alone and visit his mom at the end of the night, and she would give him an adult stack of pancakes. He wound up driving all the way from New Jersey to southern California just to see her. He wrestles with the idea of falseness, wondering how he should go about ridding himself of it, and criticising what he feels is falseness in others. He writes a suicide note on Kyles computer and hangs his sons body in the closet. He writes that he misses her terribly, and that he wants nothing more than to come back, have children, and spend the rest of his life with her. He writes the book after his wife dies in a car accident as a way to deal with the grief. He's also not thrilled about having to give up smoking weed, and he instead brought weed breath strips. He's annoyed with the Butlers, who have crashed his car and can't pay to fix it. He's been married to Marilyn for 34 years and they have 3 children Tony, Renata and Jan. He's even gone so far as to join a support group for virginal men, but this type of reinforcement still can't make him a hit with the ladies. He's just finished his sixth year playing "The Tall Guy", a straight man in a two-man, long-running comedy revue starring (and dominated by) Ron Anderson (Rowan Atkinson, playing a role based on himself). He's more interested in her than in Universal Widgets, but decides to be of help in order to get closer to her. He's rather heavy. He, Jim, Oz and Finch plan to take off to a beach house together, where they intend to spend the summer. He, Sammy, and Holly rush to the airport, where he books a flight to Las Vegas. He, on the other hand, thinks she has turned down his offer of marriage. Head cheerleader Tina (Bree Turner) is ready to ask them to join the team, but Greg (Bryce Johnson) goes a step further, telling Tina that Whittier will be the next head cheerleader. Headin' South gains quite a reputation as he goes along and finally believes himself worthy of joining Joe's band. Healing the gunshot wound and at the same time removing Joe's memory of his past life, Mr Jordan hangs around for a bit longer until Miss Logan arrives. Healy finds that she is an orthopedic surgeon living in Miami with her friend, Magda, and quickly falls in love with Mary as well. Healy resorts to lying, cheating, stalking, and even drugging Magda's dog to win Mary over, but is exposed by Mary's architect friend, Tucker (Lee Evans), who is heavily reliant on crutches and speaks with an English accent. Heard by Donald, he tries to calm an angry Isabelle down and they find that they have much in common and take a liking to each other. Hearing a woman singing, Jeff sneaks into the palace and see a lot of beautiful girls dancing for the beautiful Princess Shalmar (Dorothy Lamour) and singing to a very relaxed Orville. Henry Roth is a veterinarian at Sea Life Park on the island of Oahu, Hawaii. Henry and Effie both have their own lawyers who advise that since neither one will leave the family home they need witnesses that the couple are living apart to facilitate the divorce proceedings, and due to Henry's alleged violent temper Effie's lawyer also demands she have a bodyguard, a thug named Gooch who stays at the home. Henry and Gabriella decide to wed, but Henry calls the wedding off. Henry arrives as Danielle leaves Pierre's mansion. Henry arrives at the Permberton home before Toni and Junior, and the rest of the family mistakes him for her fiancé Howard Rogers. Henry begins concocting ways to run into Lucy on the following days, such as pretending to have car trouble, creating a fake road block, or by having Ula beat him up. Henry begs for Danielles name but she lies and gives Henry the name of her mother, who died giving birth to Danielle. Henry buys her silence with gold because King Francis (Timothy West) and Queen Marie (Judy Parfitt) tell Henry that he must choose a bride before the masquerade ball or wed the Spanish princess, Gabriella. Henry chases the thief and returns the Mona Lisa to da Vinci. Henry comes up with an idea to make a video explaining to Lucy her accident and their relationship. Henry gets picked up by the police and kept for interrogation until the wee hours of the morning; but his troubles are just starting. Henry has also become neglectful of his wife, Julia (Whitney Houston), and his son, Jeremiah. Henry has become obsessed with raising funds, to the detriment of his family life. Henry has to devise a plan to save the camp from a piece of NASA's Skylab, which is falling to Earth. Henry is thoroughly enjoying Carol's predicament until he kisses her and begins to fall in love with her himself. Henry is under intense pressure from real estate developer Joe Hamilton (Gregory Hines) to sell the church's property so that Hamilton can build luxury condominiums on the site. Henry is welcomed back by the townsfolk, all of whom are aware of his sexuality and are highly accepting and even supportive towards him (the film's plot and dialogue is notably devoid of homophobic content). Henry listens to her speech in admiration, and when she finishes, she rushes into his arms. Henry looks for Danielle but finds that Rodmilla sold her to landowner, Pierre le Pieu (Richard O'Brien). Henry now realizes that his family is the most important thing in his life, and he resolves to be a better husband and father. Henry overhears Danielle argue with the Cargomaster (Al Ashton) and orders Maurice's release. Henry proposed to Kate and they are about to be married, but on the day of their wedding, Kate is accidentally killed by an ice sculpture angel, because of the actions of an ice sculptor (Stephen Root). Henry reluctantly helps Lucy destroy her journal entries of their relationship. Henry rushes to the brain institute where Lucy now resides and asks if she knows who he is. Henry thinks she is a local, which prevents him from introducing himself, but the next day he comes back. Henry wants to know why his cathedral plans were derailed. Henry wishes Max well, and he then returns to Julie. Henry's closest friends are Ula, a marijuana-smoking Islander; his assistant Alexa, whose gender is unclear; Willy, his pet African penguin; and Jocko, a walrus. Henry's mother reluctantly agrees to help Eliza make conversation, following Henry's advice that Eliza should stick to two subjects: the weather and everybody's health. Henry, meanwhile, has become intrigued by Carol and has decided that she would be terrific if she developed her human side more. Henry, now completely alone, realizes that Pike meant something to him. Henry, while employed as a bookkeeper for a lace factory, was discovered to be an embezzler. Her "uncle" runs the agency and she quickly removes the earrings as he praises her night's work. Springs, Texas. Her acceptance of a non-local begins to cause friction between her and many of the young men in her surfing social circle. Her accountant goes to prison and advises her to keep a journal of all of her expenses as she is sure to be audited. Her approach is to establish a relationship with the man to build his confidence and transfer his attachment from his parents to her. Her attempts to get Will alone for a conversation fail. Her aunt Lucy (Jessie Ralph) is the housekeeper for a wealthy family, so while her employers are away, she borrows their home to host a dinner. Her best friend is Nanda, a little girl who lives in a beautiful home in Tijuca Forest, about to be evicted because the father is unemployed. Her black and white appearance however attracts the attention of Pepé Le Pew, who, after some flirting, receives a mauling. Her boss orders Christy to go to Los Angeles to inform Peter Ulysses Lockwood (MacMurray) of an inheritance of 28,000,000 pesos ($2,000,000) that a deceased uncle has bequeathed him and obtain the necessary legal documents. Her boss, upon learning that her brother cheated on his girlfriend again with Jenn, angrily asks her to take a leave of absence from the yoga studio. Her boyfriend Johnny Cammareri (Danny Aiello) proposes to her before leaving for Sicily to be with his dying mother; she accepts, but is insistent that they carefully follow tradition as she believes her first marriage was cursed by her failure to do so, resulting in her husband's death. Her boyfriend Rick (Zachary Quinto) breaks up with her when she asks him to attend her sister Daisy's (Ari Graynor) upcoming wedding, and she then gets laid off from her job. Her boyfriend, Frederick (Fred Amata), is too busy with other parts of his life to give her the attention and affection she needs, and she is distracted at work. Her brother Jordan (Kevin Pollak), already married, starts an affair with his business partner's wife, due to the missing passion between him and his wife, after giving birth to their first child, her mother (Mia Farrow) is growing concerned about Gwyn's being the last single person in the family, despite being the one also in an affair with her mother's and Gwyn's grandmother's nurse, Antonio, due the constant arguments between her and her father, including the fact that he also had an affair with an insane real estate agent. Her brother and friend also help to keep tabs on her throughout the experiment. Her brothers are then chased out of town. Her cab hits Robin, who has purposely jumped on the windshield to get a cab for Meg, who is in labor. Her carefree sexually liberated lifestyle ultimately comes to an end when her three male suitors meet and compare notes on Nola. Her children pool their money together and buy her a new dress to wear on the date. Her children welcome her home, and so does Nick. Her co-worker Vince (Vince Vieluf) brings his new girlfriend to the funeral home. Her colleagues question her unrelenting devotion to such a monster and when Laida continues to proves her loyalty to Miggy, gossip regarding her feelings for the boss starts to circulate. Her conservative father Rajeev (Anupam Kher) is unhappy that she is so eager to forsake her own culture for another, but will be pleased when she goes through with her arranged marriage to wealthy but childishly dull Vikram. Her cousin, an author of love stories set in the South Seas, invites a resident fortune teller to predict Gail's future. Her daily life is extremely hectic, as she finds a balance between high school, running, romance, sports, and parental pressure while realizing her own priorities. Her date with Gabriel essentially becomes a one night stand when she realizes he isn't what she wants in life. Her daughter Emily (Khail Bryant) overhears her mother say that she wished for a compliment from a man, and the daughter tells the local mall's Santa Claus about her mother's wish. Her daughter, Pam, also has great acting skills and hopes to be a successful actress as well. Her director Jimmy Hart (Victor Jory) follows them aboard the super-speed train the "Streamline Express". Her doctor gives her a sedative to calm her and help her sleep, but she secretly leaves her country's embassy. Her doctor, Dr Marvin Elias, encourages her to fight. Her dressing gown gets caught in a branch. Her dressmaker, Madame Amanda, gives her more clothes (and sends the bill to Bruno). Her economic condition is meager, but she makes do with what she has. Her efforts are opposed by woman-hating professor Hubert Dash (Edward Everett Horton) and his secretary George Jones (George Burns), who don't want to see their beloved college fall into the hands of an empty-headed nit-wit like Gracie. Her efforts to correct the mistake lose some of their forcefulness when she is subsequently introduced to handsome Andrew James Barrington, Jr. Her efforts to help him overcome his urges prove futile. Her employees move on to other jobs; as Christina goes job hunting, George gets a job at the children's department at a Fox Books store and Birdie retires. Her essay on her mother gets an A+. Her family approves of her fiance, but she is not so sure about him. Her family expects her to be more like her 33-year-old sister Athena (Stavroula Logothettis) and marry a Greek boy, make Greek babies, and "feed everyone until the day she dies". Her family storms Henry's apartment and demands he make an honest woman of her, and he willingly agrees to marry Toni. Her father (James Neill) turns down Will's offer to buy them a luxurious twelve-room apartment in a much better neighborhood, and the rest of the family supports his decision. Her father Simon (David Keith), a second-generation restaurateur, disapproves of Terri's plans, stating that being a singer may not be a worthwhile life choice. Her father claims later as if he had fooled Sunny big time, though is later arrested when the police claims that the family living there had a stay order, and that he entered there with no permission. Her father forgives her and provides her with the money. Her father is Doc Dedham, whom she has never met, but who now has inherited a large block of stock in the family company, making him the majority stockholder. Her father is trying to write a book about diet and is testing it on rabbits. Her father keeps interrupting her and tells her how much he loves who she is and how he knows Vince will be a great husband. Her father neither encourages nor endorses the courtship. Her father tells her he may have taken it to Goodwill. Her father then reveals that his wedding with her mother, which Mary had always seen as the perfect marriage, was actually arranged and only became a loving relationship months later, leaving Mary feeling very confused. Her father turns out to be Mr Tyson. Her father was an engineer, and moved frequently with his family throughout the West. Her father, Asa, tells her he disapproves because of the age difference but Simon suspects he merely envies his professional success. Her fear of commitment grows as she learns of the various affairs that her family is having. Her feelings for him are apparent. Her first attempt ends badly. Her first day at South Glen South High School is miserable. Her first performance is unusually successful, although Miss Lily irritates Billy by not sticking to the script. Her first position is at a small, seedy California commuter airline called Sierra, where she works with Sherry, a senior attendant, and also gets an intern herself, named Christine. Her former friends Tania, Nicole and Janine shun Muriel because they see her as a directionless no-hoper, as well as due to embarrassment over her past awkward antics. Her former friends aren't doing much better: Annie (Diane Keaton), meanwhile, is separated, suffering extreme self-esteem issues, and going through therapy with her husband. Her friend Sammy Gray is gay; he remains celibate, not because of a fear of AIDS, but because forming a relationship would force him to come out to his conservative parents. Her friend recommends a job choice as a chalet girl, working in the Alps for rich clients. Her friends Gertrude and Bert are the hosts and attempting to fix her up. Her friends are essentially her surrogate family in London. Her friends convince her to also lose her virginity before he gets back. Her friends, especially Eden, have encouraged her to try it again. Her goal is apparently to take revenge on her egocentric musician ex-boyfriend Ben Wheatley (Scott Porter) during Bandslam. Her grandfather and his lodge friends then try a strange séance ritual to send her back to 1985. Her grudge is soon forgotten, however, when Rodney publishes the pictures he took of Izzy and posts them on flyers all over the school, making Izzy a laughingstock. Her honesty and sincerity have inspired the Prince to finally show sincere love to his son. Her husband Ian (John Corbett), is now the principal at the school their daughter Paris (Elena Kampouris) attends, and Paris is preparing to leave for college. Her husband Nick (Dean Martin) has remarried; he and his new wife, Bianca (Cyd Charisse), are on their honeymoon when Ellen, rescued from an island where she has been stranded for five years, returns home. Her husband, Hubert, pleads with her to leave with him, asking how she knows she is in love. Her husband, Nick Arden (James Garner), was one of the survivors. His multiple relationships come to the women's attention, and they conceive a plot to punish the mechanic for his behavior. His name is Charles Maurey, but Sean dubs him "Chips". His nerves are worsened when he's seated next to Sarah (Bullock), a free-spirited drifter who begins to talk to Ben immediately. His new Queen is a beautiful, but evil woman who soon becomes jealous of Snow White's beauty. His new love is leaving for America and he must find a way to cope with the new reality. His new show will have him re-enact the kissing incident, but on the day of the opening Monique's father has him arrested, only be released when Yvonne, who turns out to be the wife of the Minister of Justice, convinces him to allow Philippe to do his performance, where Philippe learns that Monique has taken the place of the actress with whom he was to re-enact the kiss. His next mission is Eleanor. His niece and secretary, Judy (Anna Neagle), has her doubts that Richard is the footman he pretends to be. His old mentor offers him a job, while a formerly sycophantic employee is in Jack's old position, with an assertiveness he did not possess as a subordinate. His only friend is Andrew, a fellow student who spends his evenings at the Claytons' house trying to avoid his alcoholic mother. His only obstacle is the 1892 firehouse inhabited by "Grandma" Steinmetz (Helen Hayes), widow of its former owner, Fire Captain Steinmetz, and aunt of mechanic Tennessee Steinmetz; her displaced neighbor, flight attendant Nicole Harris (Stefanie Powers); and their sentient machines: a 1963 Volkswagen Beetle known as Herbie, "the Love Bug;" an early 19th-century orchestrion that plays on its own; and a retired cable car from the defunct Clay Street Line, known as "Old No. His only true friend and secretary, Rosa Lopez (Lourdes Benedicto), does a good job at keeping his credit problems under control. His opponent is to be Stella Stoker, a fishmonger's daughter with a degree from the London School of Economics who has been chosen to stand for the Labour Party. His parents are unaware of the fact that Andy is looking to get back with his college sweetheart Kay (Bonita Granville). His parents died in a car accident when he was eight years old, so his grandparents raised him. His parents don't approve of this plan and decide to follow him to Wainwright - to keep an eye on him and keep him away from his sweetheart. His parents have wrongly concluded he's spending nights with Amy, but when they discover Amy hasn't seen him, his father sends Raef to find him, leading to Raef and Barbara becoming engaged and Barbara throwing Bernard out of her apartment. His parents take it quite well and everyone ends up in a bizarre group hug. His party is shut down thanks in part to the neighbors calling the police. His passionate and erudite defense of those things in which he believes, in contrast to his earlier passive behavior, galvanizes the press and his staff. His patience is finally rewarded when he is joined by another figure in black. His plan backfires. His plan fails though. His plan is disrupted when Pam's younger sister, Debbie, becomes engaged and he finds out that Debbie's fiance, dr Robert "Bob" Banks had asked Pam's father for permission before proposing. His plans for the future change and he becomes responsible for his 10year-old brother, Lucas (Eduardo Melo). His plays are now immensely successful. His plea is seemingly answered by a suave angel named Dudley (Cary Grant), who reveals his identity only to the clergyman. His poker buddies are envious, but his fiancee, art teacher Melissa, isn't happy in the least. His popular but narcissistic girlfriend, Taylor Vaughan (Jodi Lyn O'Keefe), ditches him for a faded reality TV star from The Real World, Brock Hudson (Matthew Lillard), whom she met on spring break in Florida. His position at work is tenuous as he departs for London to attend his daughter Susan's wedding. His presence creates chaos in the girls humble Fulham home. His problems began in High School when he didn't ask his first girlfriend to dance because she was on crutches, and this provided the opportunity for her ex-boyfriend to reignite her passion. His psychoanalyst, dr Fritz Fassbender (Peter Sellers), cannot help, since he's stalking patient Renée Lefebvre (Capucine) who in turn longs for Michael. His punishment is to spend just three days in jail, but when he is released, he discovers that Monique has paid his fine, supposedly to avoid more publicity, but actually because she is secretly attracted to him. His pursuit of her turns into a blossoming romance that forces Stella to take personal inventory of her life and try to find a balance between her desire for love and companionship, and her responsibilities as a mother and corporate executive. His quick thinking helps calm a scared child getting ready for surgery to remove his tonsils, promising ice cream which he delivers after the surgery. His rationalizations for his work only scare Debi even more; she rejects his attempts at reconciliation and storms out. His real identity now revealed, Kelp gives an impassioned speech, admitting his mistakes and seeking forgiveness. His real purpose is to win her affections. His recruitment is followed closely by a recruiting investigator (Downey, Sr) who is trying to make sure everything is on the "up and up". His relationships thereafter consisted of a series of very short flings. His relationships with Julia (Loretta Young) and their young daughter are strained by his focus on the cathedral. His rocket-net is a success, catching over 500 of them. His romance with Lynn ruined and his lifestyle destroyed, Chris swallows his pride and moves back in with his father, still unable to decide what to do with his life, but believing he ultimately must accept the old values like his father has. His roommate is the much more outgoing Rob, played by Patrick McColley. His scheme is to maneuver Connie into being alone with him when his wife shows up, so the suit will have to be dropped. His schemes to make Baglipp take the policy ends up getting Tom and Kitty into all kinds of trouble, including involvement with a robbery. His second marriage was to a New York writer who didn't like sports and was unable to reach orgasm. His second-in-command, Leonid Kleist (Patrick Malahide) is against Pochenko's "softening" strategy, and wants to crush the growing rebellion among Slovetzia's youth. His selection is mostly due to the influence of his uncle, Lord Wilcot a powerful local figure. His situation is further complicated as Michelle is involved in a romantic relationship with Rapper Romeo (Ginuwine) (who ends up cheating on her) while Jamal (as Juwanna) is busy warding off the amorous advances of Romeo's sidekick Puff Smokey Smoke (Tommy Davidson). His skin has become magnetic and his mere touch makes people being infatuated with him. His soul is "rescued" by 7013 (Edward Everett Horton), an officious angel who assumed that Joe could not have survived. His speech is about his travels around the world while in the Navy. His stepfamily knows of this secret fortune and some go to great lengths to discover its whereabouts, while others pretend to befriend him in order to wrangle Fella's fortune away once it is found. His stepfamily takes over the family mansion, while Fella is reduced to living in an unfinished room at the end of a long hallway. His stepmother is happy that he is all right and explains she has been worried sick and says just because she is pregnant does not mean she does not love him and that they are a family. His story is a love triangle involving Jennifer (Natalia Cigliuti), Patrick (Jeremy London) and Mark (Joey Lawrence). His superior (and manager of the team) orders the inept Merle to distant Rotohan, a secure island liberated some months before, ostensibly to relieve Lt Billy Monk (Jack Carter), who has been unable to capture a Japanese holdout called Kobayashi suspected of pilfering military supplies. His suspicions are reinforced when, in a bit of bad timing, Polly and David each produce a different man whom they claim is the father. His therapist, dr Rosenthal (Elliott Gould), gives him a writing assignment: to write a page about someone who likes his rather uninspiring dog, Scotty. His third round is also excellent and moves him into contention, but on all three rounds, he refuses to lay up on the par-5 18th hole, hitting the ball into the water hazard each time. His time with Vivian has shown him a different way of looking at life, and he suggests working together to save the company rather than tearing it apart and selling off the pieces. His two best friends Chuck and Earl, fellow boxers, tag along to try to convince him to join them for the movies, as they previously planned. His uncle imposes an odious requirement of him: Alby will receive the investment money he needs but only if he leaves his blond "shikse" Catholic girl-friend and gets married to a "nice Jewish girl". His various schemes earn him money on the way west, but after two escaped convicts rob them, Paula becomes aware of Michael's bet and is disappointed in him. His version of a good time doesn't involve the exciting dance club Maggie dances in for Mr. Fontaine. His voiceover states that he tells kids that story all the time, but you would have had to be there that day. His waning resolve to resist temptation fuels his fear that he is succumbing to the "Seven Year Itch". His weak attempts at portraying Prospero and Macbeth on stage at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., lead to poor reviews, sending Axler into a profound depression and causing him to give up acting and contemplate suicide with a shotgun he keeps in his attic. His wealthy department store owner father Spear and brother John are fearful of what damage he will do to their reputations as staid, respected businessmen, remembering what happened the last time. His widowed daughter, Jennifer Nelson, occasionally helps by donning a mermaid costume and swimming underneath his boat for the passengers' amusement. His wife Debbie is not happy with the situation. His wife Dolly is a harpist who acts on her husband's behalf, presenting his impossible demands to the symphony's backers, only to then find him dallying with a considerably younger musician. His wife and children disagree with and suffer from Eddie's obsession with his appearance, his wealthy yet cheap parents, and his brother who dates a gold-digging soap opera star claiming to come from a good family. His wife had told him that he should remarry after her death, so he pursues some local spinsters who were at his daughter's wedding after he and his housekeeper Minta (Lillian Hall-Davis) make out a list of possibilities. His wife then tells Abby that Maezumi and Shintaro, their son, have not spoken in 5 years since Shintaro left for France. His wife, Victoria, a former ballerina, is unable to deal with Axler's depression and moves to California, where their son lives. His wish is granted by a guardian angel-like figure named Mike (Michael Caine), and appears at various times as a bartender, a cab driver, and so on. His words are humorously contradicted by flashbacks showing him alongside his best friend Cosmo Brown (Donald O'Connor). His writer's block dissipates and he quickly finishes his masterpiece. His younger colleagues disrespect him, he is estranged from his stepfather Philip (Bill Nighy), and his girlfriend Liz is unhappy spending every date at his favourite pub, the Winchester. Hitch takes her to a garage where she gets "pimped out" and made slimmer. Hlynur's confusion over the whole situation is expressed in his rather profound and imaginative musings: There they are. Hlynur's isolated world no small metaphor for his home country is going along rather blissfully ignorant of the greater joys involved with engaging in life until his mother's friend Lola Milagros arrives to stay at the house for a while. Hogan announces the news to a now jubilant audience. Hogan is thrilled at the prospect of yet another beautiful tenant to seduce, but is initially unaware that Robin's short-tempered, frustrated, bumbling boyfriend David (Jones) is moving in with her but in a 'platonic' capacity only, to determine their compatibility. Hogan manages to convince Sheila that Bill loves her; it also helps that he reveals who Bill actually is. Hogue explains that the boy had chewed his father's tobacco and was given too much bismuth subnitrate as an antacid, causing a blue tinge; the carbonic acid component of the soda would relieve his stomachache. Holden (Jake Gyllenhaal) appears quiet and reserved, qualities that the two of them share and, therefore, quickly take a liking to one another. Holden McNeil (Ben Affleck) and Banky Edwards (Jason Lee) are comic book artists and lifelong friends. Holden does not show up for work the next day but is waiting in Justine's car when her shift ends. Holden is attracted to Alyssa, but soon learns that she is a lesbian. Holden is deeply upset by this revelation, having previously believed that he is the first man Alyssa had ever slept with. Holden suggests a threesome. Holden tells her to meet her the following morning at a hotel. Holden, who has been following her since the split, sees them through a window. Holding Danny down, he vomits a black, viscous fluid into Danny's mouth before collapsing. Holly abandons the catering business after the romance with the architect fails and decides to try her hand at writing. Holly and April end up as rivals in auditions for parts in Broadway musicals, as well as for the affections of an architect (Sam Waterston). Holly asks help from Adam to disguise as Ben in the telephone and break up with Jean. Holly begs Jean for them to move again. Holly demands to know what he could've possibly been distracted by and Adam admits his feelings for Holly by kissing her. Holly devises a plan to invent a secret admirer for her mother, so she'll be happy and not have to relocate anymore. Holly is on the road to her perfect man as well since she has some stability in her life and finally opens up and admits her feelings for Adam. Holly overhears her friend Amy's (Vanessa Lengies) uncle Ben (Chris Noth) ordering flowers for a woman, and decides to use his advice on women (which she acquires by telling him she needs help for a school project on romance). Holly sets aside her script, and instead writes a story inspired by her own life, which Mickey reads and admires greatly, vowing to help her get it produced and leading to their second date. Holly then goes to the meeting place and admits the whole ruse to Jean, who seems to take it terribly. Holly's story is the film's third main arc. Holly, in an act of desperation, then disguises herself as Ben's secretary and arranges a meeting between Ben and her mom. Holman also knows that his niece marrying an American would strengthen his country's vital relationship with the United States. Holman hopes that his niece will marry and produce a male heir as soon as possible, but she is not interested in his preferred choice, Count Peter de Chandome (Curt Bois) or the other candidates that he has suggested. Instead, they claim that he sacrificed his life to save hundreds of other lives that would have been lost had he ejected from the aircraft and left it to crash into a populous city. Instead, they discuss his first wife (Carol Kane), whose ardor gave him no pleasure. Instead, they go to Phoebe's graduation ceremony as friends. Instead, they jail the genuine prince. Instead, they place her on a bed, and pray to her each day. Instead, they take a tour of New York. Insulted, and furious that Edward has revealed their secret, Vivian wants to end the arrangement. Insulted, d'Artagnan demands a duel. Intending to deter him, Laney arranges for Zack to be called onto the stage and perform to his surprise. Intending to see if she has anything other than a dollar sign for a heart, Henry contacts Michael and convinces the professor that he is in love with Carol. Intent upon preventing a loveless marriage, Parker and Abigail go "undercover" as Caitlin's bridesmaids to sabotage the wedding. Interest piqued by the drawing, Gwen takes a bus ride out to see the house. Interpreters unaware of the value attached to glass in 17th century France and perhaps troubled by sartorial impracticalities, have suggested that Perrault's "glass slipper" (pantoufle de verre) had been a "squirrel fur slipper" (pantoufle de vair) in some unidentified earlier version of the tale, and that Perrault or one of his sources confused the words; however, most scholars believe the glass slipper was a deliberate piece of poetic invention on Perrault's part. Interrupting a private hearing in the commissioner's office, Dodge threatens Carter with a confrontation by his old army mates. Interspersed between these scenes of past memories are monochromatic dream sequences featuring an ethereal, third character that appears to be Wes' guardian angel or physician. Interspersed with the scenes of the band playing, singer Nikko Alexander (Nolan Gerard Funk) calmly walks into the club through the back, barely making his cue for "Don't Tell Me". Intimidated by the headstrong heiress, Kabir manufactures a deathbed promise that he made to his mother, pledging that he would not marry unless his prospective bride can take 35 shillings and earn her own living for three months. Into a household filled with kvetchers steps Joe Meledandri, a distinguished Italian who years ago met Pearl's wayward husband in a bar and convinced him to return to her. Into his life enters Laura Kelly (Debra Winger), an attorney who is representing Chelsea Deardon (Daryl Hannah). Intrigued, Michael invites himself to dinner with the Stevensons and Theodora. Invigorated by a desire to find herself, Alice leaves to go home. Inviting Evie to her family's small house for dinner one evening, Randy reveals to her that she has lived with Rebecca and Vicky since Randy's devoutly religious mother abandoned her to devote all her time to an Operation Rescue-like group. Inviting them into his emporium, Facilier convinces them that he can make their dreams come true, but neither man gets what they are expecting; Naveen becomes a frog, while Lawrence is given a voodoo charm that makes him resemble Naveen. Inès tries to seduce Estelle by offering to be her "mirror" by telling her everything she sees, but ends up frightening her instead. Iona gives her a pep talk, while Duckie, still oblivious, asks what's wrong. Ipswich is anxious for her to sign a new contract, but she throws a tantrum and refuses, as it explicitly prohibits all the things she wants to do. Ipswich's secretary tells them that the "purest Anglo-Saxons" hail from the hills of Kentucky, so Glory picks a fan letter at random from those written by young Kentucky men and ends up with 23-year-old Jim Davey (Norman Foster). Ipswich, Speed and Herbert want her to choose someone else, but when "sob sister" reporter Elmerada de Leon (ZaSu Pitts) comes to interview Glory, she spots the photo, so they have to play along. Ira has been sent to the United States to find a tutor for the three children of Slovetzia's President, and, mistakenly thinking that Joy is an academic teacher, offers the job to her. Irene and Charley team up on a kidnapping that will enrich the family, but she shoots a police captain's wife in the process, endangering the organization's business relationship with the cops. Irene confronts him at his barber, and Hogan is self-defensive and self-deluded to comic effect. Irene ends up dead, and Charley ends up back in New York, missing her, but consoled by Maerose. Irene is a fashion buyer for Barclay Ames, an upscale clothing store in New York owned by Roger Barclay (John McGiver). Irene is apologetic and offers him a job as the family butler, which he gratefully accepts. Irene reconsiders and tries to reconcile with Bill, only to find he has married Lil the previous day. Irene sends Maggie to Paris as her representative for the annual fashion shows of the major European fashion designers such as Marc Fontaine, Dior, and Balenciaga. Irene's counsel/advice (about 'what love is') to the young couple at the end of the film is particularly moving, when considering Edie Adams had lost her real-life husband, Ernie Kovacs, the previous year. Irene, who has only lately come to realize the extent of Hogan's promiscuity, is determined to prevent him from getting his hands on her niece. Iris Simpkins (Kate Winslet), a society columnist for The Daily Telegraph in London, has been in love with Jasper Bloom (Rufus Sewell) for over three years, despite his infidelities and the fact they have broken up some time previously. Iris and Arthur arrive at the ceremony and are pleasantly surprised to find that, despite Arthur's fears that the ceremony would be sparsely attended, the hall is filled with attendees standing and applauding his achievements. Iris and Miles celebrate the new year with Amanda and Graham and his daughters, enjoying the evening, and laughing and dancing together. Iris and Miles have slowly become friends, and one night go to the video store to rent some other films that Arthur had recommended. Iris and Miles then return to Amanda's house, where they discuss their tendencies to fall for people that they know are wrong for them, and they begin to bond with each other. Iris discovers that the Screenwriters' Guild wants to throw a grand celebration in Arthur's honor, but he is reluctant to attend for several reasons, chief among them being that he cannot walk without the assistance of his walker, and does not want to embarrass himself on stage. Iris does not care. Iris encourages him to go because it's a tremendous honor for him, and promises to help him prepare to attend the award function with her. Iris is touched at first, but then asks if he is still engaged. Iris responds that she will be back in England by then; Miles replies "I've never been to England". Iris responds that she would love to spend the evening with Miles. Iris returns to Amanda's house, and is later surprised to find Jasper at her doorstep. Iris visits Lambert, curious about the buyer. Irma la Douce ["Irma the Sweet"] tells the story of Nestor Patou (Jack Lemmon), an honest cop, who after being transferred from the park Bois de Boulogne to a more urban neighborhood in Paris, finds a street full of prostitutes working at the Hotel Casanova and proceeds to raid the place. Irmã Maria inadvertently realize what is happening, try to react, but the bad guys, the stronger the hold. Irmã Maria, watching a cartoon, has the great idea that can save the institution: use the Trapalhões - unconditional friends of children - and ask them to do a show to raise funds to save their children. Ironically, Dunphy finds that his fellow prep-school students merely represent a wealthier, more polished class of delinquent than the friends he has left at home. Ironically, Ellison says that Joe's ailments are actually psychosomatic, caused by his experiences in his previous job as a firefighter. Ironically, Marisa was present when she received the invitation and even offered Caroline some advice on what to wear for their Lunch à deux. Ironically, he discovers that his wife cost him double what he saved in taxes. Irresponsible, happy-go-lucky Tony Spear returns home to the United States and his family after years of sailing throughout the Orient with his crewman Corky Nye. Irritated by Flandrin's brusk attitude and certain that she can get a better deal for her friend, Margot orders him to leave. Irritated it will no longer be a bait shop, Max and John join forces to sabotage the restaurant. Irving first plans to sell his photographs independent of the story, but eventually decides against it. Irving takes her picture with the same miniature cigarette-lighter/camera he had used the previous day. Irène and Graham have another encounter with each other in a parking garage. Irène drops one of the boxes she is holding, and he picks it up for her and they stare into each other's eyes. Irène is disappointed but amused at what he had just done, so she then smiles and backed up her vehicle and drove through her barrier. Irène then invites him to come to her house, and tells him to follow her to her home. Is it beyond our control. Is this over. Is this really my life. Isabel Walker (Kate Hudson) travels to Paris to visit her sister, poet Roxy (Watts), who lives with her husband, Frenchman Claude-Henri, and her young daughter, Gennie. Isabel also meets Yves, Olivia's protégé, and they begin an affair. Isabel begins a real relationship with Yves. Isabel begins planning her wedding with the help of her very enthusiastic gay friend, Bill. Isabel discovers that he has a married Russian lover, Magda Tellman, whom he intends to marry after securing a divorce from Roxy. Isabel feels happy with her single life and loves herself. Isabel is a regular singer at the Carvel country club, and when Andy comes there and they are introduced to each other, she falls in love with him. Isabel runs out of the room and comes back with casual clothes instead of the wedding dress. Isabella also quits the show rather than accept the changes demanded by the network. Isabella flees Brazil for San Francisco with her Afrio-Brazilian transsexual friend, who spent her early years with her in the fishing community of Salvador. Isabella goes after him but has to take an elevator, and her motion sickness slows her enough to allow Toninho to depart. Isabella goes to collect her things from the television studio. Isabella introduces Lizzie to the crowd, and has her sing "What Dreams Are Made Of". Isabella makes the second offering but nearly drowns. Isabella performs a sacrifice to Yemanja, a Brazilian sea goddess, to harden her heart and make her never love Toninho again. Isabella pursues a relationship with Cliff but Toninho continues trying to win her back. Isabella's jealousy grows when Susan develops a crush on Mark. Isabella, with her love still gone but now wanting it returned, tries to cook another sacrifice to Yemanja but finds her cooking talent is gone. Isabelle Grossman works for a New York bookstore which supports authors through public readings. Isabelle goes on to tell of when she was raped when she went hitch-hiking. Isabelle leaves with Sam, and later agrees to meet him the next day at her grandmother's house. Isabelle makes herself liked by going with Bronwin (Erica Leerhsen), who learns that her father has blood cancer, to wait for her parents to pick her up. Isabelle pays frequent visits to her Bubbie (grandmother), Ida (played by Yiddish theatre star Reizl Bozyk in her only film role), who lives on the Lower East Side of Manhattan. Isabelle shows Donald an abandoned rooftop, calling this a place where people who don't know where they belong can belong. Isabelle suggests that they should just be friends. Isabelle takes the liberty of cleaning his apartment while he goes shopping. Ishika says she can't con him anymore because they love each other, and the BK has no clue of it. Isolde is delighted by the news and Augie weakly announces his new job with Dick's magazine. It again informs her of her accident, but ends with her and Henrys wedding. It all boils down to one name: Irene. It all comes to a boiling point when Barbara appears on a national TV show talking about a chapter from the book "The Worst Kind of Man" and cites Catcher Block as the perfect example. It all ended at the altar when Apollo had a bout of cold feet and left Irene alone in the aisle. It all ends with an escape by helicopter piloted by Fernandel (actually John Crewdson) reading a book of flight instructions, capture of a group of assassins, then a parade for Bob, Fernandel and Ann, who are heroes. It also comes in handy keeping aggressive men at bay, as Margot is determined to succeed in her career. It also involves leaving money at a hotel for a "Mary Jordan". It also popularizes, as the character of

Alex Tremor calls it, "a corruption" of a section of Plato's Symposium regarding soul mates, referred to in the movie as "split apart". It also provides comic relief in the form of a domineering choir director. It also seems that they broke up. It also turns out that Johnny is in love with Patsy, and Jean with Sergeant Frank Miller (Tom Drake), but both did not want to hurt the other. It appears Pete might still be seeing other women, but when he gets a promotion at work, Tillie announces it's time to get married. It appears in the newspaper, showing both Ryan and Tenley, which causes another fight between Tenley and her dad. It appears that he has engineered Robert Wilcot's selection as a candidate in order to spark public interest in the election, boosting his own business. It appears that she has borderline personality disorder and becomes an obsessed femme fatale stalking him, even taking all four wheels off his SUV to ground him from his rounds and demolishing his nightclub. It appears the one who lifted her is the prince who is on a helicopter. It becomes apparent that the superhero, the goons he beats and his invisibility are just his imagination. It becomes clear his father loved his other son Gordon much more than Jarrod. It becomes clear that Vivian knows more about the Lotus than he does, and he lets her drive. It becomes clear that three women are seeing the same man. It becomes clear that whilst Vronsky is still able to move freely in Russian society, Anna is barred from it. It becomes clear to Susie that she is nothing like her roommates. It begins when a young woman, named Julie (Condola Rashad), meets at a loft with her former anthropology professor, named Adam (Justin Kirk), where she tells him that she is a virgin and wants him to take her virginity. It comes out during questioning that Joe and Connie live at the same address. It depicts two people, played by Karen Sillas and Tom Noonan, on a first date; their conversation gradually reveals their lonely lives and hidden personalities. It disappoints Larry, who had been excited about Mercedes' interest in him. It does give Mickey an idea, however, for a campaign in which "Miss Luxemberg"

is now "Mrs. It does, and he does. It does. It doesn't take long for Charley to return west. It doesn't take long for the Parisian scenery to play with Maggies emotions, leading her into the arms of mr Fontaine. It doesn't take long, with a little elbow grease, for the kids heart to shine through. It ends with Spectacular. It ends with the happy couple apparently resolved to their 'condition' and past any questions of their gender and sexual identity. It finally reaches the point where he manages to kill all the respect and love that Edith held for him as her husband. It gets more complicated with the entrance of Paolo, a photography assistant for one of the photographers at Vogue. It gives you a sense of the loneliness and lack of deep connection Alison is going through while trying to maintain her relationship with her beau in Tokyo, all while making you aware that Wes is only carrying on with his life by holding onto the best memories between them. It has also been called an African American Red Shoe Diaries. It has been six months since Laida Magtalas and Miggy Montenegro became a couple. It included the tale of Cenerentola, which features a wicked stepmother and evil stepsisters, magical transformations, a missing slipper, and a hunt by a monarch for the owner of the slipper. It is 1961, two years after the original Grease. It is Cindy, who is moving back to Los Angeles and wants to be friends with Heather. It is December 1938 in the town of Carvel. It is Eliza, standing in the doorway, tentatively returning to him. It is Eliza, who has come to take speech lessons so she can get a job as an assistant in a florist's shop. It is February 1929 in the city of Chicago, during the era of prohibition. It is Forster's afterthought of the novel, and he quite clearly states that "I cannot think where George and Lucy live". It is Foussard, who dies in the fall. It is New Year's weekend and the friends of Peter (Fry) gather at his newly inherited country house. It is Robert Classon. It is Toshi. It is a box of albums with a handwritten note from Adam declaring his love for Caroline. It is a golf-ball-sized metal ball which flies through the window and lands in his fishbowl, quickly draining the water along with the goldfish. It is a portrait of Sally. It is about a small town girl on her rise to stardom. It is also clear that the political contest is added to by the enmity of the two electoral agents the Tory Harding-Pratt and Labour's Bert Glimmer. It is also learned throughout the film that Frank's wife committed suicide, and that Frank suffers from depression as a result of his guilt from not being able to see something was wrong with her until it was too late. It is also revealed that Gwen became a compulsive liar in order to escape from what she feels is her own inadequate background, and that she has "changed" her life numerous times. It is an unwitting waiter (Eric Blore) who finally clears the whole thing up by revealing that Cyril himself is an adulterer, thus clearing the way for Mimi to get a divorce and marry Guy. It is at New York that J. It is at this point that Joe and Lucy realize that they are perfect for each other. It is at this point that she realizes how well Gyeon-woo understands her. It is clear Pete is taken by Gladys. It is clear that she is preparing a surprise birthday party for Alain, her daughter Louise is there with her boyfriend Henry helping in the kitchen. It is down to an elaborate plan involving Dylan, Jez, and (if they can persuade her) Georgie, to break them out of jail in order to save their dream. It is during a visit to the doctor at the fair that Mike falls for Diane Warren, an attractive but stubborn nurse who resists Mike's advances. It is during this episode that Rhonda falls down, apparently paralyzed. It is evident that Jesse still has feelings for Marissa and vice versa, but there is much tension in the air. It is finally revealed that two people had been masquerading as the ghost. It is found that Blake has a living grandnephew named Longfellow Deeds (Adam Sandler), who runs a pizzeria in New Hampshire and also writes greeting cards in the hopes that Hallmark may be interested in one. It is gatecrashed by Otto and Leo, in impeccable evening dress, determined to reclaim her. It is here also that Jackie becomes acquainted with Marcus (Inigo Pascual), Kiko's brother, via video call. It is hinted she was a member of "Spectacular. It is hinted that

Sybil died. It is his own apartment, and he sets everything up to record her saying she loves him. It is immediately snapped up by her naive niece, Robin (Lynley). It is implied that Bryce drops Garrett as a friend in favor of Juli by the end. It is implied that Zack frequently abuses Pearl emotionally and physically and perhaps she was hoping to catch her husband with Eve so she could finally have an excuse to divorce him. It is impossible to throw him out, as it is discovered that he is now a confidant of Senator Harlan and his daughter's target of affection. It is in a small lake-side town called North Hatley. It is later learned that Marlowe had been killed in an accident. It is later revealed that Brooke's "date" (who initially asked her out, but she politely rejected) was actually a client interested in a piece of artwork she kept at the condo. It is left ambiguous as to whether or not Adam and Jenny have sex. It is not clear if he lived or died until the sequel, Gubra which shows that Jason really didn't die. It is not very rewarding financially, and Mae is in debt. It is obvious that Ozzy likes Roxanna, but she is a bit apprehensive as she sees him as a gang-member type person, although Marissa has noted that he hasn't been part of that crowd for quite some time. It is obvious to all of their friends that they miss each other's company. It is often seen as a modern, post-feminism interpretation of the Cinderella myth. It is one she knows he wrote for his wife when trying to persuade her to marry him. It is only then that the live in witnesses, her niece Jane Luana Walters and Henry's friend Bob Grant, Bob Byrd notice that the shoe Henry brought back that night is about a size four; too small for Nan. It is only when she's driving for some time that she discovers Kiko's younger brother is in the car. It is positive. It is revealed at this time that Trent hired Douglas's agency to break the engagement. It is revealed that Alejandro's biological mother Madonna is going to be coming from Colombia to the wedding, which upsets Alejandro since he does not have a "traditional" family, and his Catholic mother would not approve of that or the fact that Don and Ellie had been divorced. It is revealed that Emma's boyfriend accidentally killed the man with whom Emma was having an affair, and she is not aware of this. It is revealed that Holden has dissolved their partnership over Bluntman and Chronic, leaving the viewer with the assumption that he sold the publishing and creative rights over to Banky (which is corroborated in the beginning of Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back). It is revealed that Kiko knew who Jackie was all along and is one of the coordinators for the volunteer medical mission. It is revealed that Lester is Diamond Jim's son. It is revealed that Lori's character has "brain fever" and will die; still hoping to be rid of Celeste, Montana ad-libs and suggests that a brain transplant can save her. It is revealed that Phil was wearing a wire courtesy of Grant, who informed Arroyo of the situation. It is revealed that Randall's American flag boxers, which were earlier used as a replacement for the original flag, had been stolen by a Martian. It is revealed that Sue was once offered as a bride to the well-meaning but dim-witted prizefighter known as Killer Khalsa; offended that her parents would even consider such a match, she has been playing mischief in revenge. It is revealed that his business partner and best friend is the thief, but he gets away with the money. It is revealed that the detective found himself in the Versailles of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, and is last seen fleeing from the agents of the State. It is revealed that the movie actually contains a compliment to Dylan at the end that Dylan doesn't see. It is revealed that the whole night Stevie stayed up and wrote a contract concerning her and Jonah's deal. It is revealed to be a spaceship which resembles a human (Eddie Murphy), controlled by 100 tiny humanoid aliens. It is ruled that Daniel will return to Earth. It is set in the Bronx during the 1990s. It is soon clear that Inès is attracted to Estelle, Estelle is attracted to Joseph, and Joseph is not attracted to either of the two women. It is soon revealed that Sellers, the family butler who loaded the pistols, made sure both men were firing blanks while he, Sellers, an expert shot, wounded the Earl with a weapon of his own. It is spring. It is suggested that along with his newfound artistic success, Billy may at last find romantic fulfillment as well. It is suggested that he will die, and an angel (Emmanuelle Béart) arrives on the scene, given the task of bringing Jim's soul back to heaven on the night of his engagement party. It is suggested that much of the script involved personal details of Hannah and Elliot's marriage that had been conveyed to Holly through Lee (having been transmitted first from Elliot). It is the early 1900s. It is the end of their marriage. It is the property of the fabulously wealthy Nora Hunter (Laraine Day), who has secretary and friend Sylvia Lockwood (Marsha Hunt) impersonate her in public. It is the same one Bill used to commit suicide. It is the story of a rich Manhattan playwright named Henry (Edward Herrmann) who goes on an exotic vacation to Egypt with companions Jason (John Wood) and Rita (Deborah Rush). It is then revealed that Leroy is gay, which doesn't bother Samantha. It is then revealed that McKinley described the third kind of people he came across as being the ones who embraced death as a friend and an equal, with a heartfelt laughter. It is then that Bill reveals that he knows Connie's true identity, and that he loves her anyway. It is then that Julian finds a YouTube video of his wife stripping and accepting money for sex at a fraternity party. It is then that Marcia realizes her philandering husband has already ruined their marriage. It is then that Scott tells Jenn of his plan to secretly propose to Matt that evening. It is then up to the girls to come up with a plan to save the dairy, and the jobs of those who are working, but no one believes in them. It is there that Nick meets Sheridan "Sheeni" Saunders and his life is turned completely upside down. It is this experience that brings Frank to an epiphany: life is short, and his own projected insecurities are his true enemies. It is true that he spent some time in England during the war, and he may have met some woman, but he lacks every memory of Tillie and her two twin children because he was suffering from amnesia. It is well received. It is with great surprise than that Baker finds a girl in the straight-laced Payne's room the following morning. It isn't long before Pete is smitten and proposes. It isn't until later, as her brother's wedding approaches, that her mother figures out that they are dating. It leads to a comic fight between Max and Bones at New York's Bergdorf Goodman. It leads to a romantic embrace. It looks like the jig is up when Hank pretends to be Ellen's jealous husband, and then her brother. It made him dream of buying a secret decoder ring. It manufactures nothing and provides no service. It must be fate then, when he once again sees Irene (Toni Gonzaga), his ex-girlfriend from 3 years ago with whom he had the best memories with. It offers him cryptic advice on his love life throughout the movie. It proves unnecessary, though, as Jeremy is prepared to pay for the entire debt. It requires G laying down the law to end it, after which she orders people to drink from her hip flask and get ready for the ceremony. It reveals both Dwight and Vicky having sex, as Rock yells out, "Stifler. It revolves around two stories, firstly the upcoming wedding of Lizzie (Cate) and Guy (Richard) and a second story in flashback of Guy's previous relationship with Jenny (Frances O'Connor). It runs out she is more than lucky and she makes the firm a neat load of cash in a very short span of time. It scares him to the point where he cannot sing at rehearsal. It seems Emily must learn the hard way that love and family require sacrifice and not everybody can be happy. It seems like a good deal, until they find out Kimble is an eccentric who would sign over anything and the deed is worthless. It seems like a social coup for Lil, until her hairdresser friend and confidante Sally (Una Merkel) points out that all the guests have left early to attend a surprise party for Irene (who lives across the street). It seems that John married Lilly as a favor to get her into theS, intending to divorce her so that she can wed her true love, John's old pal Fred Taylor (Jack Carson). It seems that Leo and her ex-husband arranged the "assault" and the "prostitute" so that they could separate without any blame attaching to Leo, who wishes to marry another man - John Hotchkiss. It seems that the pamphlets have revealed to them the dangers of marriage. It seems there's hope for them reconciling when Peggy looks at Charlie with new eyes and (citing a reference from her grandfather who claimed that her grandmother's strudel kept the family together) says, "I'd like to invite you over to your house for dinner on Sunday with your kids. It seems, however, that Burke has not been following his own advice, and in fact has not been dealing with the loss of his wife. It should be noted that an almost identical scene occurred in the movie Together Again (1944). It shows Mr Summers slipping a capsule down the jockey's back. It soon becomes apparent that he has also drastically changed his view of Miranda as well. It soon becomes apparent that he must care for his aging, bitter father Max, as well as support his emotionally fragile mother Lorraine, especially since his father has also just been fired from his 35-year career in the garment industry. It states: "Glade and Sears are next door neighbors and old friends. It takes her over a year to finally find the courage to mail the letter. It takes several confessions by several people to resolve everyone's dilemmas. It takes some doing, but everything finally works out. It takes the murder of his grandmother, an avid supporter of Alderman Marvin Harris' anti corruption campaign for Mayor, by members of mobster Michael Minelli's gang, to awaken him to the realities of his city's urban decay. It tells her how he believed he would always be with her, forever, and how much he loves her. It then becomes obvious they are at a train station and the "noose" is actually a trackside pickup hoop used by train crews to receive orders without stopping, and the bars are merely the ticket barrier. It then shows Johnny's mother and father are watching the show on TV and see Johnny and Kim kiss. It turns out Betsy is friends with Daphne, and she agrees to introduce Andy to her. It turns out Ed is Smokey's new boss. It turns out Joe's lies were a tad larger than he first said, since he has faked letters from his loving wife - letters that his boss, Arthur Truesdale Worth (Charles Dingle), has read. It turns out Rodrigo was not interested in the car but a bag that was supposed to be in the trunk. It turns out colleagues only assumed Victor and Dolly were husband and wife, and they never actually tied the knot. It turns out he has a secret cache of diamonds given him by the last Czar, and is persuaded to start selling them. It turns out however that Ellen was merely shipwrecked on a deserted island, and has been rescued. It turns out many of the paper airplanes have collected in a nearby alley, and when the lipstick-marked paper airplane lands among them, they begin to stir and fly from the ground, seeming to come alive, and set off in pursuit of George. It turns out she is unsatisfied at home and a willing participant when Taylor flirts with her while posing as a shoe salesman, engaging him in dangerous sex in public places. It turns out she needs him to kill a spider. It turns out she was bluffing about divorcing and leaving him all along, when her suitcase opens as they kiss and make up, revealing that it is empty. It turns out that Bunmi was the one sending Alan threatening messages all along. It turns out that Caesar used to be Waters' pet parrot. It turns out that Cindy actually is a spy, but for American counterintelligence, despite the opposition of her guardian, Colonel Edwin Martin, the base commander. It turns out that Colin was only over to avoid a girl that he slept with, because he doesn't want to give the women he sees any expectations. It turns out that Edy has cancer, it's serious but he's being treated for it. It turns out that Freddie had called Costikyan after being rescued and used him to help her get the $50,000. It turns out that Fritz is a member of the gang. It turns out that Jerry had carried on affairs, first with the Chicago murder victim, then with his accused killer. It turns out that Manulani was the granddaughter of the last hereditary prince of the islands, and Amelia finally puts all of the pieces together to solve the mystery. It turns out that Senator Mabby is mounting a public campaign against nudity, and the artwork (for which his daughter posed) would be terribly embarrassing to him. It turns out that Woody (in Nell's body) can't fight him, and Nell (in Woody's body) runs up and punches him in the face. It turns out that he had cause for concern; Steve persuades Belle to marry him. It turns out that he is the mysterious Freddie Denmark on his way to Kansas City to find the crooked accountant who got him into trouble with the IRS. It turns out that his colleague had encouraged Leo to attend his weekly men's group run by New Age type goofball Keith (Simon Callow) whose wife is Sybil (Harriet Walter). It turns out that just before he left on his expedition, Jeff got drunk and married Martha. It turns out that not all the children have been rescued, and Mary is trapped with one left behind. It turns out that the necklace is an extremely valuable piece belonging to Lady Devenish (Grace Lane), who is impressed by Molly's honesty and invites her to her home to present her with a substantial cash reward. It turns out that they went to the restaurant, but left when they spotted Collins. It turns out the dice were loaded; they always throw three and four. It turns out the property sale agreement wasn't formally correct and the land is returned to the town. It turns out to be "The Blonde" who says she knows him and maybe she would see him cruising the coming night. It turns out to be a disaster; George is so overwhelmed with his troubles that Lisa eventually asks that they just eat in silence, and they part ways not expecting to see one another again. It turns out to be a message from the crooked cops with Tommy recording it. It turns out to be the wrong woman, Monica's roommate Hannah (Michelle Monaghan), and Tom likes her because she is so honest and does not fling herself at him. It turns out well despite Akpor's blunders and Richard's interference. It was Jeff's idea to stow away, but it was Orville 'smoking in the powder room' that caused the explosion. It was Pedigrew who hired the private detective. It was based upon The Woman Haters by Joseph Lincoln. It was later found out that Sally did not become pregnant. It was published posthumously in 1634. It was released to DVD in North America in 2005. It will be thrown by socialite sisters Dove and Fawn Greenstein. It will only take three days and Burke would be rewarded handsomely for his trouble. It works temporarily, then backfires. It works. It works. It would now appear that Patrick and Jenny have broken up but at a boozy and somewhat riotous party at Julian's house, Patrick takes advantage, in the early hours, of a tired and sozzled Jenny in one of the guest bedrooms. It's 1738, and Gracie Alden (Gracie Allen) of the powerful Alden family fails to graduate from the college founded by her grandfather for the ninth year in a row, so he leaves it in his will to the first female of the family to graduate within 200 years. It's Matt who walks into the closet, to Jenna's horror. It's a "nasty send-up of Andrew Lloyd Webber" called Elephant. It's arranged for the Crain sisters to meet in Portland. It's been a long time since they've had female companionship, and they receive a broadcast showing human females. It's like two birds of different species. It's not always easy to hold this smile". It's revealed in the present that after high school, Alicia and Mike went their separate ways. Its Captain (also played by Murphy) pilots the spaceship from the command deck located in its head, with the help of his second-in-command Number 2 (Ed Helms), and researcher Number 3 (Gabrielle Union). Its epigraph is Vengeance is mine, I will repay, from , which in turn quotes from. Its young director, Captain Cummings (Cary Grant), is in reality an undercover Federal agent working to infiltrate and expose the illegal activities in the bar. Its about that time in your life when you're in your first real job and your first real adult relationshipthe one you think might just last forever. Ivan can return to the Soviet Union to aid the war effort, enriched by Anne's love. Ivan then declare his love for Judy and tells her that if she would like, he would be willing to spend the night with her. Ivy Moore, an African-American maid, age 26, has worked for the Austin family for nine years, after arriving from Florida where she was raised by her grandmother. Ivy gives chase but despite their efforts they fail to retrieve the package. Izzy and Karin leave as the team begins to argue. Izzy angrily admits that his father was obsessed with boxing, that it was all that they talked about since his mother died, and that he no longer liked the sport, and only did it for him. Izzy apologizes, and his father quietly accepts the apology before making an excuse to leave. Izzy arrives and apologizes to Mary, who jokes around with him and smiles before handing him a uniform, and all is forgiven. Izzy coldly refuses, stating that he needs to focus on boxing, and rejects Mary even when she begs him. Izzy considers the offer, and after they coerce a reluctant Mary into asking him to agree, he does so, on the condition that they practice in the gym before school, where nobody can see them. Izzy declines, but Rodney refuses to drop the subject. Izzy is left with little choice but to agree to go, leaving his team to put on a disappointing performance, and leading Mary to expel him from the team, despite his apologies. Izzy meets his father afterwards while the judges decide the winners, and he apologizes for pushing boxing so hard, having done it motivated by wanting to connect with Izzy. Izzy overhears them, and Shauna and Keisha explain that Yolanda joined the Dutch Dragons, leaving them down a player. Izzy promises not to be late again, and his dad leaves, leaving Izzy alone with his thoughts. Izzy scoffs at the alleged difficulty of jumping rope, and Mary subsequently challenges Izzy to speed jump. Izzy states that it's not that easy with him, and Mary gives him a quick kiss before going back to her room. Izzy takes out his anger through training at the gym, where Mary finds him and asks him to rejoin the team. Izzy's boxing skills are great enough that he stands only one exhibition match away from going to the Golden Gloves; his opponent is Rodney, the only other undefeated boxer in the gym. J, the drug dealer, finds out about the fake drugs and threatens to kill Tom if he doesn't return him his money. J-5 drills a hole in the tank and the pair kick their way to freedom at the last minute. Jack (Prinze Jr) is a thirty- something New York City advertising executive, living a life forged from routine. Jack (Richard Grant) and Sarah (Imogen Stubbs) are expecting a baby together, but a complication during the birth leads to the death of Sarah. Jack Campbell is a single Wall Street executive living in New York City. Jack Lemmon stars as the playboy landlord Hogan, a swinging bachelor. Jack Singer (Cage) has sworn to his mother while she was on her deathbed that he would never get married. Jack Taylor is enraged by the damages done to the house and throws Tom out. Jack Taylor's ex-secretary Audrey goes to the house to try to earn her job back. Jack accepts, eventually winning over the people and even the dead president's mistress, Madonna (Braga). Jack admits that maybe he had been too hard on Greg, and he brings him back to the Byrnes' household. Jack agrees to give her a big settlement check. Jack and Joan are separated, and Omar corners Joan atop the burning scaffolding. Jack and Sally admit their marital problems still exist (her frigidity is not solved), but they find they accept their problems as simply the price they have to pay to remain together. Jack angrily calls Greg out in front of the entire family for his lack of honesty, and demands that he call off his relationship with Pam and leave immediately. Jack asks her to be his wife (again) and she says yes. Jack comes home one night and surprises Andie with a pink dress he bought for her at a thrift shop. Jack convinces Miles to drive him back to Cammi's house and sneak inside, where he discovers Cammi and her husband having sex. Jack decides to take Lee home to spend Christmas with his family. Jack discovers this, steals the taxi, and sees Betsy outside the Kauai Club, where he's attacked by Tommy and arrested. Jack eventually is able to overcome his fear and lands and spots Betsy, which then ruins Tommy's plans. Jack eventually re-enters the dating scene, regaining his sexual confidence with the assistance of Sandy (Sally Kellerman). Jack explains he was forced to flee without his clothes and wallet (which contains a pair of irreplaceable wedding rings). Jack finally breaks it off for good with Ann. Jack finally confesses his real identity, and the couple make plans to marry. Jack forgoes closing the pharmaceutical acquisition deal to intercept Kate. Jack gives Joy's ex-fiancé, Mason (Jason Sudeikis), her engagement ring back without Joy knowing.

Jack gives Pellet the check for $1,000 to cover the rent for the next two weeks, but Pellet tears up the check and orders the Chesters to leave the house when their first two weeks expire or he'll throw them out personally. Jack goes outside and George tells him that the bomb threat was called in by someone who wants to fight ugliness. Jack has purchased their parents' home and lives in it with his wife Molly. Jack himself conducts a background check on Greg's MCAT scores and finds nothing on anyone named Greg Focker ever taking the MCAT's. Jack is furious with Jill for violating their pact of honesty, and they break up. Jack is immediately attracted to Stephanie and arranges a double date, to include Miles and Maya, and tells Miles that he learned Maya is no longer married ("sans rock", as he describes it). Jack is living the life he could have had, had he stayed in the United States with his girlfriend. Jack is startled to learn Marion has remained in contact with numerous ex-lovers and becomes increasingly uncomfortable due to the language barrier and a multitude of her old flames she keeps meeting. Jack is torn between his love for Molly and his lust for Ann, a former romantic interest of Barry's. Jack kidnaps her and steals another guest's autogyro to carry her off to his home. Jack knocks Omar over the side, killing him. Jack later runs into Ralph (Danny DeVito), the swindler from Jack and Joan's previous adventure in Colombia who demands Jack turn over the gem Jack and Joan found. Jack meets Jill (Manning) by chance on a rooftop. Jack now realizes that he will have to skydive from 3,000 feet in order to get to Betsy. Jack offers to help Cash. Jack plays along and manages to trick the lunatic into entering a room, which Jack then locks. Jack realizes his mistakes and gives Tom a promotion. Jack realizes she knows that he talked to Mason. Jack realizes that the culprit has to be Jill. Jack reevaluates his life, and just as he quits his job, a bomb threat is called in at his work. Jack reminds her that they have a lot of money between them. Jack returns to his penthouse and sleeps. Jack runs out to the street and encounters Cash driving Jack's Ferrari. Jack rushes to the airport, convinces airport security to release Greg, and demands that he be honest about everything that transpired. Jack says he has everything he needs. Jack senses that Maya is interested in Miles, who downplays his friend's intuition, and tells Jack that Maya is married. Jack struggles to fit into the role of a family man, such as missing opening Christmas presents, flirting with a married woman and forgetting his anniversary. Jack suggests Jill's name for an ad shoot. Jack takes an instant dislike to Greg and openly criticizes him for his chosen career of nursing and whatever else he sees as a sign of weakness. Jack talks to his parents and they tell him it looks like he and Joy are in love. Jack tells Maya that Miles' manuscript has been accepted for publication, even though it is only being considered. Jack tells her that there will be a relatively significant earthquake in San Francisco at 9:06 am; she hopes that it will be wrong but again it also becomes reality. Jack then inspects what he thinks is Greg's luggage, unaware that it is actually not his own, finding an assortment of sex toys, including a strap-on dildo. Jack then jumps to the false conclusion that Greg is not even a real nurse, but a drug dealer posing as a hospital worker for easy access to drugs, per their previous discussion about "Puff the Magic Dragon". Jack then receives a leg injury that prevents him from spending time with his family. Jack tracks down her wacky friend, Lucy (Parise), and pleads his case. Jack tries desperately to get Betsy back and discovers that Tommy has taken her to Hawaii, where he has a vacation home. Jack's best friend and business partner, George (Stebbins), notices a more playful side to Jack's usual cynicism, and wants to meet the cause. Jack's boss has been alerted to the affair, and secretly listens outside the courtroom. Jack's young daughter realizes his secret, thinks he is an alien and decides to assist him in surviving his new life. Jack, Joan, and Al-Julhara arrive to expose Omar but are captured. Jack, grief-stricken, goes on an alcoholic bender, leaving his daughter to be taken care of by his parents and Sarah's mother, until they decide to take drastic action: they return the baby to Jack whilst he is asleep, leaving him to take care of it. Jackie (Kathryn Bernardo) is a troubled, nineteen-year-old wild child, much to the dismay of her separated parents. Jackie Laurens (Heather Locklear) is a recently divorced, 40-year-old and mother of a teenage son and daughter who takes a vacation alone to Hawaii where, against her better judgment, she meets and hooks up with hunky, 27-year-old resident surf instructor Kyle Hamilton (Robert Buckley). Jackie and Adam are dating. Jackie and Brett decide to try again to set them up, and the two men start to develop a relationship. Jackie attempts to call Meryl but Paul's assistant Adam stops her by kissing her, which she responds to by tasering him. Jackie begins to put more effort into the mission and becomes closer to the people of the community. Jackie convinces her brother to stop for a bathroom break at a marketplace where she attempts to escape yet again. Jackie directly and firmly rejects Marcus' advances, because she is in love with Kiko. Jackie drives Kiko back and helps out his sister, after learning that she had just gotten her period. Jackie gets the idea of reuniting the three men later that evening on a TV show hosted by Madeline Bradville (Gray). Jackie however, has no intention of following through with orders and tries to sneak out of the house, only to be stopped by her older brother who was sent by their mother to collect her. Jackie offers Niles' job to Larry, plus a company car, a new Mercedes and he accepts. Jackie runs off, and her mother follows after which she demands to know the reason why she was the one left behind. Jackie turns out to be a tall, masculine transvestite. Jackie voices her struggle with growing up without her mother and expresses her inability to forgive her. Jacob finally comes out to his mother (after he inadvertently ejaculates on her coat as his sexuality is revealed), and flees with Octavio. Jacobsen finishes with a par on 18, tied for the lead with Roy and one shot ahead of Simms. Jacqueline is spared and becomes Danielle's lady-in-waiting. Jacqueline's younger sister, June (Joyce Howard), decides to help her older sister out to save her marriage from falling apart. Jade locks Tiffany into an oven, while Jesse pushes Chucky out the window. Jaded playboy Richard Fleming travels to the South American nation of Rosarita. Jake Anderson, another recent divorcee, finds himself in a similar position; his lawyer, Charlie, wants to set him up with a woman named Sherry. Jake Bianski is the owner of a fish market in the North End of Boston, Massachusetts. Jake Cunningham (Shawn Christian) is an uptight FBI agent assigned to protect Brandi O'Neill (Jami Gertz), a lower-class cocktail waitress who recently helped with the tax fraud investigation of her billionaire boyfriend. Jake Stein (Frankie Muniz) is a 17-year-old who lives with his sick mother and grandfather in Brooklyn. Jake and Brian walk in on the ladies having a tearful moment, and later Jake and Anna have an argument over the religious issues complicating their romance, which ends in the two parting ways in frustration. Jake and Charlie are discussing Sarah when he admits that she intrigued him. Jake and Kristy then begin a program to assist their efforts to become pregnant, which eventually succeed. Jake and Kristy then continue to adjust to their new live until Kristy unilaterally decides to cease taking contraceptives, without telling Jake, until, after several months, she informs him that he has been unable to impregnate her. Jake asks his best friend, Davis McDonald, played by Alec Baldwin before the wedding if he thinks he'll be happy, to which his friend says, "Yeah, you'll be happy. Jake begins fantasizing about having an affair with a mysterious young French Model, who is wise beyond Jake's years. Jake decides to move forward, and asks his boss Paula on a date. Jake del Mundo (Gerald Anderson) is a handsome boy who comes from a privileged background. Jake feels pressure, from society and from his wife, to have a child. Jake inquires further about Sam, and Ted explains the situation. Jake instantly bonds with Paul, however, and no matter how hard Julie tries to keep Paul from complicating her life, the more he begins to fall for her, and she finds she too is falling badly for him even while her boyfriend is pushing to set a wedding date. Jake interrupts Anna's going away office party and manages to get her attention from a window in the building across the street and calls to explain himself and offer to set things right. Jake is angry at his mother because of her recent divorce. Jake is confronted by Sherry at an art gallery; she is curious why he did not call her, but again Jake does not seem interested. Jake is playing with Whit's hospital bed, and to Libby's disgust, Whit calls him a "little shit". Jake later uses the excuse of finding them together to break up with Caroline (who had surprisingly fallen for Ted and doesn't mind the break-up very much). Jake learns that Lainey is going to re-enroll in school and possibly move to Michigan. Jake leaves, upset. Jake makes a deal with Ted: If Ted lets Jake keep Sam's panties, Jake will allow Ted to drive home his drunk popular girlfriend, Caroline Mulford (Haviland Morris), in Jake's father's Rolls Royce. Jake must figure out how to become a man, if he is ever going to finish writing his memoir. Jake quickly befriends Mark, a local rich kid, whose excessive drug use helps him get through the pressures of teenage life in Southern Florida, where the "in" crowd only cares about how much money one's parents make, whos coming to one's pool party, and whether or not one is getting laid. Jake reminds Marina of her younger brother, who died in a motorcycle accident, and Jake is unable to get over the fact that such a beautiful woman is interested in him. Jake runs into a man named Bill outside a coffee shop, not realizing that this man is Sarah's father. Jake takes Sarah rowing and they share a kiss. Jake wants to be a writer and tells his bosses that, which amuses and threatens one boss, who himself had failed at ever writing a book. Jake's best friend suddenly visits after not seeing him for two years, which causes the two to both envy one another's lives, and to also reaffirm their own. Jake's entire house is completely trashed. Jakes), they decide to stay while a driver picks up Jason's family and friends. Jamal Jeffries (Miguel Núñez, Jr) is a UBA (fictional version of the NBA) basketball star whose undisciplined on-and-off-court antics have earned him a bad reputation in the basketball community. Jamal Jeffries is reinstated into the UBA and returns to action with his old team, a better player and person. Jamal is dropped from his team, the Charlotte Beat and suspended indefinitely after he strips naked in protest of being taken out of a game. Jamal is fired from the team, and the Banshees, devastated at the betrayal, begin to suffer on the court as a result. Jamal quickly becomes a star on the court, and his overall attitude changes drastically as well. Jamal's cover is blown at the end of the said game when Jamal decides to dunk the winning basket and shatters the backboard. Jamal, now out of work and homeless, goes to live with his no-nonsense Aunt Ruby (Jenifer Lewis), the only person that doesn't put up with Jamal's outrageous antics. Jamal, seeing this, decides to try to make things right again, and enters the Banshees' locker room during another game's halftime to apologize for the lies and tell them that playing with them had changed his views and attitude about basketball, women, and life in general. James Bed-sop (Charles Hawtrey) is a private detective Sophie hires to spy on Sid's after-hours activities when he supposedly "vets" the female clients, including Esme. James Kelly (Guy Robertson) and his pal Happy Moran (Edgar Kennedy) are taking their all-girl-dancing troupe across the ocean to tour Europe, when Kelly and the mysterious Catherine Bell (Irene Ware), fall for each other, literally. James and Mollie realize that Mikey already sees James as his father, and they decide to give it a chance, kissing passionately while Mikey considers telling him he needs a new diaper, before deciding to wait. James and Mollie run to reach him and take him to safety, where Mikey unofficially asks James to be his father by saying his first word "Da-da". James arrives and he and Mollie make up. James calls her out for using Mikey to push men away including himself and he storms out. James comes to the apartment and tells Mikey that he won't be around any more, and Mollie listens over the baby monitor as he pours his heart out to Mikey who admits he will miss James too. James continues to serendipitously pop into Helen's life, cheering her up and encouraging her to start her own public relations firm. James finds her on a bridge and explains that he was married but is now separated and planning a divorce. James is working as a minor drug dealer, and tries to raise money to pay off a supplier to whom he is indebted. James leaves Miranda behind to make his album, what he always wanted to do, but realizes he left his heart with her. James occasionally hangs out with his kids (including scamming their way into a movie theater) and has fun with them. James relaxes in the evenings by lying on the hood of his car parked "in a great spot" beside Wrigley Field, and during the days by walking around the North Side of Chicago with his friend Luca, appreciating the buildings. James runs in and gets the fire extinguisher and puts out the fire. James takes Katey back to the car and assaults her after she refuses to kiss him. James tells Mollie that he loves her, but she says she only wants what is best for Mikey and kicks him out. James' girlfriend, Missy (Camille Mana), who is one of his father's students, tells Lawrence that James has had a poem accepted by The New Yorker. James, smitten, returns to the shop, where Beth takes him on adventures, including a shopping trip for her to try on underwear. Jamie admits that while the two are "just friends", she tried to "put herself out there" to Chris, to show Chris that she is interested in a relationship. Jamie also appears, working as a bartender to support herself through graduate school. Jamie doesn't reciprocate his romantic feelings; after they share a brief kiss on the cheek, Tim and the class burst in and humiliate Chris again. Jamie punches Chris and he is tossed out of the bar. Jamie rapes Nola, while mockingly asking her if he's as good sexually, as Greer or Mars. Jamie refuses to listen and Dusty tries to convince her to have sex with him. Jamie, however, brings Dusty along, and Chris's mother ends up joining them, ruining Chris's plan. Jan eventually apologizes and gives Renata her blessing. Jan is about to get married, leading Renata to wonder why boyfriend Rob has not yet proposed to her. Jane (Joan Crawford) is a Prohibition agent who helps uncover Chicken bootleg activities. Jane Nichols (Katherine Heigl) has been a bridesmaid for 27 weddings. Jane agrees to one drink with Kevin and ends up getting drunk. Jane also picks up that Gooch and Nan seem to recognise each other and trick Gooch into calling Nan where they overhear her location on an extension phone and get the truth out of her. Jane and George tell him to come along so he cannot cause any more trouble. Jane and Pitka kiss. Jane becomes upset at the roundabout route Malone is forcing them to take. Jane comes to an artwork show of Joe's where Joe finally gathers up the courage to ask her out, while Lucy begins dating Bwick Elias (Ben Stiller), a weirdo artist who paints with his own body parts. Jane decides that George should know the truth about Tess and shows pictures of Tess with other men, eating ribs (as she claimed that she is a vegan, like George), holding a cat by the tail, and recoiling from George's dog (she told him that she loves dogs, but actually hates them) in short, doing all the things she had told George that she never did. Jane decides to face the music and go to the benefit for the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, but doesn't realize that everyone thinks that she and Richard are engaged. Jane dies soon after, and the film ends with Richard placing a commemorative sign honoring Jane's memory on the wreckage of his flying machine. Jane gets angry at that and decides to show Don. Jane goes to visit her Aunt and Uncle Gardiner at an unfashionable address in London. Jane intercepts them and tells Richard that everyone thinks they are engaged. Jane is a big fan of Pitka's, having read all of his books. Jane is interviewed by local newspaper reporter Matilda Runyon, who then calls the Daily Mirror in New York. Jane is unaware of Kevin's intentions. Jane later ends her relationship with Valery because it feels like a betrayal of her friendship with Brian, and Brian's first novel is published by Galassi. Jane locks herself in her room until her father gives her a telegram from Richard. Jane receives telegrams of support from the American public, and the Marshalltown club, which had earlier reneged, now promises to continue business with her. Jane runs away and George, in an impassioned speech, scolds the townspeople for turning against her. Jane scolds him for his underhanded actions. Jane tells Brian that her boss Galassi (Eric Stoltz), a publisher, has read his story and wants Brian to write a novel. Jane travels to New York to appear on ABC, NBC, and CBS, including the show I've Got a Secret. Jane visits Miss Bingley and is caught in a rain shower on the way, catching a serious cold. Jane wins in court, but E&P appeals the case to the state Supreme Court in Augusta, Maine. Jane's friend points out that telling the truth to George and breaking their engagement didn't make her feel better. Janet accompanies Lawrence on a trip to New York to meet with the publisher, where she learns she is pregnant with his child. Janet mistakes him for reporter Paul Tracy, who was supposed to interview her. Janet thinks it means "bird. Janet tries to make "Paul Tracy" hide or leave, in between performing on stage. Janet's roommate, Mae Thompson, convinces her to continue the deception. Janice fires Judith after finding out about her and Harley's plans, and the two have a falling out. Janice has just discovered she is expecting a baby, but is unable to inform Mickey, who is too distracted by work. Janice sends Judith to New Orleans with Harley to finalize a deal with shareholders, telling her to flirt with Harley, but also to be careful. Janie Barlow (Joan Crawford) is a young dancer who is reduced to stripping in a burlesque show. Japonica reveals that she has stayed at a clinic named the Chrysylodon Institute. Jarod (Jonathan Chase) is a handsome and fit jock who is quite insecure. Jarod and Griff are also having problems, as they have become a couple, and are conflicted over whether to enter the contest. Jarod seeks out fellow jocks, including a baseball pitcher named Beau (James Getzlaff), while Griff tries to earn the affection of Angel (Darryl Stephens), a male stripper; Jarod and Griff leave these men to have sex with each other instead, because they are in love. Jarrod comes home to find the group laughing and then kills the mood by saying that he'd been with Tracy all day and that they'd been laughing harder. Jarrod fails to turn up. Jarrod is depressed about his fight with Eric but Lily finds him and attempts to cheer him up. Jarrod is impressed with Lily's shark costume as well as her savant-like video game skills, making it to the finals of a Fight Man video game competition, though she loses to defending champion, Jarrod because she spends their contest staring at him. Jarrod is more interested in Lily's workmate, Jenny (Chelsie Preston Crayford). Jarrod spends his time alternating between trying to win his dad's affection and training for his impending fight with his high school bully Eric Elisi. Jarrod takes a bite only to discover his apple is rotten. Jarrod takes flowers over to Tracy's house and spends the day with her on the beach trying to impress her with his "fighting skills". Jarrod then attempts to come over and is pushed away by the father. Jarrod tries to impress his father with the news he's dating Lily, but father isn't impressed. Jarrod's dad, Jonah, is a withdrawn man in a wheelchair. Jarrod's father Jonah spends most of his time watching an old tape of Gordon winning a cross country meet and reliving the victory that he felt at that time. Jarrod's sister (Nancy) and brother-in-law (Doug) seem to sell all kinds of "sell from home products", like questionable make-up kits, knives and their own athletic jumpsuit clothing line "Awesome apparel". Jason (Jason Bateman) and Cynthia (Kristen Bell) are a neurotic couple who've experienced multiple failed attempts to conceive, and Shane (Faizon Love), who has recently separated from his wife, has a much younger twenty-year-old girlfriend, Trudy (Kali Hawk). Jason (an advertising executive) and Julie (a charitable investment advisor), longtime best friends now in their mid-30s live in the same building in Manhattan. Jason (with help from Hollywood) is the only one who can stop him. Jason Alexander, Michael Gilio, and Ed Asner co-star in this debut effort by writer-director Dwayne Johnson-Cochran. Jason Steele is an actor who plays a doctor on TV. Jason and Julie begin dating again and enter into budding relationships with young actress Mary Jane and divorced father Kurt, respectively. Jason and Sabrina have the wedding and also jump the broom. Jason chases after her before Zack and Benji rehearse their kissing scene. Jason comes by to tellJ that he found a new job and is relocating to Chicago with his boss and girlfriend Sonia Kendall. Jason confronts Benji about his sexuality who admits he is gay, but is lying due to his attraction to Zack despite him being in a relationship with Casey. Jason confronts his mother and tells her he is a grown man and to stop treating him like a little boy. Jason defends his decision to have a child with Julie, saying that he loves her deeply and that she was the soundest choice of person for him to start a family with. Jason forgives her and takes up a night of dinner with her. Jason meets back with Sabrina and the two reconcile. Jason prays to God to help him. Jason removes the necklace, which awakens Jessie. Jason tells everyone to look for Sabrina and also punches Malcolm. Jason tells him that they haven't been best friends in years and Malcolm has only been there to ask for money. Jason's emotional shift and words make Julie emotional and uncomfortable, so she sends Jason home. Jason's group is his insecure mother Pam (Loretta Devine), his charming uncle Willie Earl (Mike Epps), Pam's best friend Shonda (Tasha Smith) and Jason's cousin Malcolm (DeRay Davis). Javier and Carlos talk about how they miss their dad, then they hear that Batista has fled the country and join the celebration. Javier comes over and argues with his brother. Javier dances with Katey while James sits at the bar. Javier gets upset and leaves. Javier sees her and asks her to come see the real dancers Saturday night, but she says she is already going to the country club. Jay (Chris Attoh), a casanova, to the surprise of his friends, proposes to his girlfriend, Kimora (Yvonne Nelson). Jay and Rick get into a brawl, which neither Lauren, nor the next-to-arrive Nick can stop. Jay and Silent Bob are able to rescue Brodie andS. Jay and Silent Bob are also shown with a monkey named Suzanne, which promises to be "another story" (told in Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back). Jay appears, and Lauren finds out that HE is the groom (Jay = James), not Nick, who is the best man. Jay attempts to quicken the process by hiring Andy a prostitute. Jay eventually breaks up with her, because she's become too possessive of him; on his way out of her apartment, Jay bumps into Raymond, who's also coming out of a mistress' apartment, thereby discovering each other's secrets. Jay gets into an argument with an obnoxious customer (Kevin Hart). Jay leaves, and a dazed Rick moves into Jay's place. Jay pushes Robin away, but Terri runs off in tears, ignoring Jay's insistence that the kiss meant nothing. Jay speaks out of tune during an argument with Kimora, leading to him confessing his affairs, including the one with Judith. Jay tries to get Robin to cease her efforts to keep him and Terri apart. Jay's friend, Raymond (Kweku Elliot) a casanova who's now also married to one of Kimora's friends, Paula (Nadia Buari), is indifferent. Jealous of the thought of Irma being with other men, Nestor comes up with a plan to stop Irma's prostitution. Jealousy comes between a young couple of newspaper people when the wife earns more money and becomes more famous than her husband. Jean Harrington (Barbara Stanwyck) is a beautiful con artist. Jean becomes furious when she realizes he has gone. Jean cooperates with the ruse, but it isn't long before secrets get revealed. Jean is being witnessed posting the letter and Maddy follows him back to the salon and consequently she flirts with whom she believes is her secret admirer. Jean is deeply moved by this and decides to stay, finding a new job and trying to rebuild her life without running away. Jean is determined to torment Pike mercilessly, as she explains, "I've got some unfinished business with him I need him like the axe needs the turkey". Jean points out to Johnny an unused nearby warehouse they wish they could make into a canteen to entertain the troops. Jean shows herself to be determined and ruthless, leaving the other girls behind. Jean's father also joins the festivities. Jean's high education as a translator in several Asian and European languages is uncovered in a verbal fight in Chinese with two women. Jean's mother and stepfather mr and mrs Lloyd arrive next morning. Jean, Polaire, and

Schatze are ex-showgirls who put their money together in order to rent a luxurious penthouse apartment. Jeana is completely humiliated by this, and adding insult to injury is the fact that the revelation of her virginity has made her a target for every oversexed man in the immediate area, all of them determined to "make a real woman out of her". Jeanne's father works with his loathsome son-in-law Chip (the husband of Jeannie's older sister Gaylord) to find a way to discredit Booger and cause Jeannie to call off the wedding. Jed and Cheryl turn to a relationship counsellor but when asked if he loves Cheryl, Jed can't bring himself to say "Yes", and instead covers up by saying of course, he "loves her TO BITS". Jed has long liked Sophie without realising that he was falling in love with her and even when Marcus and his new love leave London on the Eurostar to Paris, Jed lacks the courage to tell Sophie of his true feelings, even though she is aware of them herself. Jed looks to his friend, Marcus for help and for advice from Grimandi who tries to school him in the French philosophy of love. Jed rushes off to see Sophie, who greets him warmly, whilst we see Cheryl enjoying her new independence. Jed, a journalist is living with his long-term girlfriend, Cheryl, with the couple regularly seeing Jed's best friend Marcus and his girlfriend, Sophie. Jeff (Tom Drake) arrives home to New York City after being away in the Navy for several years. Jeff Peters (Bing Crosby) and Orville 'Turkey' Jackson (Bob Hope) are seen floating at sea aboard a pile of wreckage. Jeff Peters (John Malkovich) is an emotionally repressed scientist who cannot stand others because of their intellectual inferiority. Jeff and Gidget reconcile on the beach and head back to the hotel to straighten everything out with the adults. Jeff and Judge jump into a speedboat and save her. Jeff and Mary are invited to a party at Dill and Connie's house, and the two decide to attend in order to cause some havoc and shock the newlywed couple. Jeff and Orville learn the sheik is pursuing a princess for marriage. Jeff and Orville try to use their 'patty-cake' routine on Kasim, but it backfires. Jeff arrives, announcing his presence on a loudspeaker set up in his car, and broadcasts his invitation to Marian to come with him to the Red Door Inn on the 19th. Jeff breaks up the party and confronts Orville, who has Jeff thrown out. Jeff calls Bliss for special thanks. Jeff calms him down and tells Orville he'll buy him back, eventually; and two men throw a hood over Orville and carry him off. Jeff decided to go into space while the android takes his place on Earth so Ulysses and Frankie (who by now are deeply in love) can be together. Jeff ends up hiring Mary Lou as his secretary. Jeff is surprised to find her still working for his family. Jeff is surprised, but the princess says her wise man read the stars and told her to marry Orville. Jeff later reveals an ulterior motive for this assignment: to track down a long-lost love interest who lives in town. Jeff realizes he loves her; he chases and catches her, and they are reconciled. Jeff realizes why Orville was so eager to get out of the marriage, but decides not to tell him. Jeff reminds him that Aunt Lucy died before he could agree. Jeff runs into Flandrin on deck, only to learn that the insulted dealer is no longer interested in selling his artwork. Jeff says he tried to buy Orville back, but learned he was re-sold to someone else. Jeff selects his team, made up of Darius and a man named Arnau (Karan Soni), the latter of whom is a studious biology major interning at the magazine to diversify his resume. Jeff soundly chides Gidget for letting the "game" get out of control, but he backs off when she tells him that she won't tolerate such a scolding from anyone. Jeff storms in and is grabbed by guards. Jeff tells Arnau to not waste his youth and convinces him to spend the night with one of the women. Jeff then comes in to warn them that the government agents are also on the property. Jeff then realizes how much he cares about Gidget, so he puts Abby in her place by telling her that he likes her and to call him what everyone at home calls him: "Moondoggie". Jeff tries to smooth the situation over, but Connie remains furious. Jeff tries to tell the princess that HE was the one sold and should be marrying her, but he is interrupted by a sword-wielding Orville. Jeff walks through the street singing, (accompanied by Aunt Lucy's ghost) until a note, with Orville's locket is tossed at him from the palace window. Jeff wanders the palace singing, an act that attracts the princess and they go on a moonlit walk. Jeff's attempt to approach Kenneth alienates him, so Jeff orders Darius to make contact. Jeff, also an award-winning filmmaker, once had his own dreams of making "real" films, but now is a hard-worn cynic who masks his disappointment behind a façade of irony. Jeff, having just arrived from the mainland, sees this and walks off in disgust. Jeff, thinking Orville is in trouble, scales the palace wall. Jefferson's fiancée, Mary Lee, arrives unexpectedly. Jefferson, in contrast to Elizabeth, is trained through the children of his sister to cope with babies, so they it's more him give the baby a bath; after dinner they spend time together in the barn. Jeffrey and his co-workers at The Flamingo also venture to Yonkers Raceway together, risking cash on a horse tip but come up short when the trotter breaks stride. Jeffrey and his team eventually win back what was unfairly lost, including a good profit besides. Jeffrey becomes shocked at his mentor's actions and reconsiders college. Jeffrey gets further immersed in the "easy buck," defying his father's guidance. Jeffrey in distress of the chase, said he gave up on Amy and believes he's done nothing wrong. Jeffrey is a kid from a middle class Brooklyn family and his father (Elizondo) does not approve of him working at the private club. Jeffrey is resistant at first, but after Celeste gives him advice on how to approach her and break the ice, the conversation leads to Celeste and Jeffrey embracing. Jeffrey is the grandson of Dracula's old nemesis Fritz (sic) van Helsing but changed his name to Rosenberg "for professional reasons". Jeffrey, a winning Gin Rummy player himself, and his friends, admire Brody and how his wins at the Gin rummy table make him seem "psychic," knowing which cards to give up. Jeffrey, the main cause of all the trouble, learns absolutely nothing. Jemima (Genevieve Nnaji) isn't having the best of times. Jen, leafing through Trucker's yearbook, excitedly calls everyone's attention to a photo of

Zo. Jenn and Matt are later thrilled when they learn Jenn is finally pregnant. Jenn arrives at the comic book store to ask for Matt's forgiveness, and offers to raise the child with him one last time. Jenn has begun a relationship with one of Matt's straight co-workers and stops by Matt and Scott's place to give them the night off of baby-duty. Jenn is devastated by the possibility that the child may not be Matt's after all. Jenn is taken aback and exclaims that she will be able to raise the child and give it a great life, even if Matt never forgives her and she is forced to raise it alone. Jenn returns to work and offers to buy into the yoga studio with some of her trust fund money, securing her future with the studio and furthering her career. Jenn's grandmother set her up with a trust fund if she ever had a child, so Jenn is confident that she and Matt will have the finances to have one. Jenn, a yoga instructor, and Matt, a comic book store worker, are best friends from college who are now single and in their 30s. Jenna discovers that she works for Poise, her favourite fashion magazine. Jenna informs them that once their Diri phones run out of battery, they will be permanently stuck in YouTube, just like her; they find out there are two Jennas. Jenna rushes out to the leafy suburb on his wedding day, hoping to convince Matt that she wasn't the person she'd seemed to be, that he'd marry her if he could see who she really was, but Matt, already in his tux, says the past can't come back and hands Jenna her pink homemade dollhouse, which he'd kept all these years. Jenna's best friend, the geeky boy Matty Flamhaff, (with the horrible nickname of Beaver because he looks like the star of "Leave It To Beaver") arrives early to the party to give her a bright pink, dream dollhouse that he built for her. Jenna's dream has come true: It is now 2004, and Jenna, at first utterly baffled, particularly by the handsome hunk in her shower, realises she's magically turned thirty overnight, with no idea of what happened in the intervening seventeen years. Jenna, freaking out like the frightened teen she still is, wants only to find Matty. Jennifer Verti (Melissa Joan Hart), has spent all of her savings buying her first house and all of her belongings have recently been stolen while trying to move into her new house. Jennifer and Joe are facing drug charges in court, because cocaine and marijuana was found in Joe's car and house, while Monty is to be charged with assault. Jennifer and Nikki share a room, where she says to Nikki, "Your father is so sweet. Jennifer later discovers that Templeton is a top executive at her new place of employment, a NASA aerospace research laboratory in Long Beach, where she works in public relations. Jennifer persuades her father to create a human body for her so she can torment the latest Wooley. Jennifer tearfully confesses to her dad that she had an affair with an "older man". Jennifer then works overtime with her witchcraft to rescue her new husband's political career. Jennifer tries hard to seduce Wallace without magic, but though he is strongly attracted to her, he refuses to put off his marriage. Jennifer tries to commit suicide with an overdose of birth control pills. Jennifer's father conjures himself a body. Jennifer's lawyer says that Monty is irresponsible due to an earlier conviction of statutory rape. Jenny (KC Concepcion) is an unpretentious mall promodizer searching for true love. Jenny (as G-Girl) discovers them in bed the next day. Jenny Swanson (Blondell) is a waitress in a small college town whose dream is to go to Paris by any means necessary. Jenny Taylor (Amanda Bynes) is a fan of Jason Masters (Chris Carmack), a world-famous rock star, but her efforts to meet him are always thwarted by her nemesis, Alexis (Jamie-Lynn Sigler). Jenny Tuffel (now Genevieve Linden) (Risë Stevens), an old girlfriend of O'Malley's whom he left to join the priesthood, now has a successful acting and singing career. Jenny agrees and she embraces her former nemesis. Jenny eavesdrops and learns that Sylvia is in love with Dennis, but fears being disinherited by her very wealthy grandfather Olaf if they married (Dennis is the son of the family butler). Jenny eventually dies of her illness, and Forrest becomes a devoted father to Forrest Jr. Jenny explains, to Patrick's wonderment, that she intends to remain a virgin until she is married. Jenny feels bad and tells Jason

the truth about not being stranded. Jenny gets help from Ryan, who drives out to her location to provide her with supplies. When Alexis discovers Jenny's plan by following Ryan secretly, she also pretends to be marooned with them. Jenny has rented a room in the home of middle-aged couple, Dick and Martha Thompson. Jenny has the support of her older brother, Michael, but has to deal with the prejudice of parents and the conflicts with her younger sister, Anne, who always felt rejected and less loved by the family. Jenny hears this and though Sandra tries to comfort her, Jenny leaves the room hurt and in tears. Jenny is adamant and is forced to pull his hair to make him stop. Jenny keeps him from seeing Olaf, who knows nothing about Tom's debt, and promises to pay him tomorrow. Jenny moves in with Sally, undergoes a makeover, and becomes a model. Jenny nurses Garp, observing his infantile state and almost perpetual autonomic sexual arousal. Jenny prescribes traditional Swedish remedies, which soon make Olaf much pleasanter. Jenny proposes to Forrest, and he accepts. Jenny raises young Garp alone, taking a position at the all-boys Steering School in New England. Jenny reveals Forrest to be the father of her child, also named Forrest (Haley Joel Osment), and that she is suffering from an unknown virus (considering the timeline, it is assumed to be AIDS). Jenny sneaks aboard a party vessel Jason is on, and when Jason is washed overboard, Jenny jumps in to save him. Jenny starts to become more controlling after she reveals her powers and Matt starts to lose his mind. Jenny starts to buy a ticket home, but then decides to go to New York instead. Jenny takes such a liking to Adam's new physique that she makes a move on Adam and the two share a passionate kiss. Jenny visits O'Malley at the church, sees the boys choir, and reads the sheet music of Going My Way. Jenny will get married to Kitty, but her family does not know her sexuality. Jenny, who was listening to Helen talking to the children, still refuses to give the kids back to her. Jeremiah Hammerslag (Jim Backus), also hunting Kobayashi, Merle is threatened by his new superior, Col. Jeremiah, who has the faith of a child, still remembers Dudley, and wishes him a merry Christmas. Jeremy (Jerry Ferrara) and Kristen (Gabrielle Union) have married and are now trying for a baby. Jeremy abandons Darren, who dumps him. Jeremy decides that he's finally committed to being a father, and Kristen reveals she might be pregnant (though she claims to be a week late), bringing the two closer. Jeremy ends up having sex with Gloria on a nearby beach during the reception. Jeremy proposes to Gloria and tries to ask John to be his best man, but a depressed John refuses. Jeremy realizes that he himself has been played and that he may be in love with Gloria. Jeremy sees the way he talks to his child, and is influenced to become a father. Jerry (Veronica Cartwright), Guy's repressed lesbian ball-bustingly ambitious agent, connives to cover up the impending outing and ensure Guy the role in Ben-Hur by marrying her client off with great fanfare to the studio head's secretary, Sally (Carrie Preston), who just happens to also be a slavishly devoted Guy Stone fan. Jerry Warriner (Cary Grant) returns home from a trip, which he falsely says was to Florida, to find that his wife, Lucy (Irene Dunne), is not at home. Jerry and Marion see the spruced up tramp looking the perfect gentleman and Jerry likes it when he later brushes off Jerry's arrogant wannabee boyfriend, Herbert Wheeler (Phillip Reed). Jerry and Samantha rekindle their romance and get married in Mexico, while Margolese finally gets his prize, as well as the gunsmith. Jerry arrives in Mexico and makes his way to pick up Beck, the Margolese employee now in possession of the gun. Jerry asks Lionel to find her. Jerry briefly has an uncooperative donkey as transportation to follow the thief, then buys an old, damaged truck. Jerry decides to pick up Samantha and Leroy at the airport, where Leroy recognizes him, but Jerry doesn't recognize Leroy. Jerry finds out that Ted, his friend and colleague, wanted to kill him and take the pistol to Margolese, but hesitated and ends up getting handcuffed to a pawnshop owner, after he received the gun from a policeman when Jerry was being interrogated for the bloodstain on the front passenger seat of his car. Jerry gets assaulted and taken to Margolese who was released from prison a few days earlier. Jerry helps Beck to his car, only for the man to be killed by celebratory gunfire from a nearby festival. Jerry is consumed with jealousy, as she sees Minerva flirting with Rawlins at golf later that morning. Jerry proposes to Dale, who, while still believing that Jerry is Horace, is disgusted that her friend's husband could behave in such a manner and agrees instead to marry Alberto. Jerry realizes that Nayman's plan was to make it look like Jerry double crossed Margolese. Jerry then finds out he accidentally grabbed Ted's Passport and tries to retrieve his own, but Ted has already fled. Jerry then runs out and unties Spike, and the dog lets out a loud bull roar, which starts a new chase. Jerry wants to reconcile, much to Lucy's delight, but then Dan and his mother make an appearance. Jerry's decision to marry Ted crushes Paul. Jerry, for his part, comes up with a list of reasons why he and Osgood cannot get married, ranging from a smoking habit to infertility. Jesminder "Jess" Bhamra (Parminder Nagra) is the 18-year-old daughter of Punjabi Sikhs living in Hounslow, London. Jess and Jules are offered scholarships at Santa Clara University in California, which Jules tells her parents immediately, whereas Jess has trouble telling hers. Jess and Jules send their parents a team photograph, and it is revealed that Pinky is pregnant. Jess and Jules tie the score, and when Jess is awarded a free kick, she must bend the ball around the wall of players to score. Jess develops an attraction toward Joe, and when the team plays in Hamburg, Germany and goes out clubbing, they're caught about to kiss by Jules, who also has a crush on Joe, souring Jess and Jules's friendship, as Jules is adamant she'd told Jess about her crush. Jess flees to the football field to tell Joe of her parents' decision. Jess goes into labour early while Jago is still on the oil rig. Jess is extremely happy and excited about the tryouts, even though Joe is skeptical about a new player joining the team. Jess is infatuated with football, but because she's a woman, her family won't let her play.

Jess muses on how her friend was irreplaceable, but then recognizes a trait of hers in Scarlett, Millys daughter. Jess reassures her that she will always want her in her life. Jess reveals the lie and her mother blames Jess's father for allowing her to play. Jess still hasn't told her parents about the scholarship. Jess's father convinces her mother to accept Jess's wishes after telling her he doesn't want Jess suffering as he did. Jesse (being a marine) pummels Fernando before his friends drag him off. Jesse and Mauricio return home and join their father, each drinking to their own little problems. Jesse concedes and wishes her a happy life. Jesse convinces Jade to go with him, but as they pack up, Jade's strict and overprotective uncle police chief Warren plants a bag of marijuana in Jesse's van to frame him. Jesse is also revealed to have joined the Bellas' all- male rival group, the Treblemakers, but his roommate Benji was rejected after being called "weird" by Bumper. Jesse is an unemployed artist in no hurry to find a job. Jesse knocks Chucky into his grave, and Jade grabs Chucky's gun and shoots him to death. Jesse later bails Beca out, but makes matters worse by getting her father involved in the situation, who is furious and tells Beca that he will no longer pay for her to move to Los Angeles because of the incident. Jesse overhears this and warns Mac and Zack. Jesse passively agrees, still in love with her and hoping for her to come back around. Jesse then appears with Tiffany and they trade hostages, but Chucky throws a knife into Jesse's back, and ties up the couple for the ritual. Jesse visits Marissa to drop off some Christmas presents and to apologize for his behavior the previous night. Jesse's Brother Mauricio (John Leguizamo) also arrives, along with his wife Sarah (Debra Messing). Jesse's sister Roxanna (Vanessa Ferlito) arrives by taxi, although everyone assumes she came in a limo because they all assume that she made it big in Hollywood as an actress. Jesse, however, is still mad at her for not telling him that she had a boyfriend before they had kissed. Jessica Capshaw has a small role in this film. Jessica and Helen move in together, but their relationship, while good in most respects, begins to suffer from a lack of frequent sexual intimacy. Jessica rejects him, explaining that she already has Helen. Jessica's behavior towards Helen is more akin to that of a best friend rather than a sexual partner. Jessica's secrecy means that she has to endure scenes that would not happen had she been open about the two of them. Jessie Mills (Alyson Hannigan), Steven's 13-year-old daughter, notices Celeste's strange habits, like eating car batteries and pulling hard boiled eggs out of boiling hot water with her bare hands, and becomes suspicious of her. Jessie's delighted but Frances offers a pretense of modesty. Jessup, having recovered from his breakdown, is horrified by his part in Madison's death. Jewel, a forklift operator in the previous reality, is now Larry's mistress and his secretary. Jhankaar Beats is a story about love, friendship and music. Jhnelle asks to take the car home but Derrick suggests taking the bus instead. Jhnelle begins to cry and begs Al to say something, but Derrick replies, "My name is Derrick" and she runs off. Jhnelle's ex-boyfriend Trent is there and causes problems while J. Jiajia eventually begins a romance with Frank. Jiajia recognizes Frank because he once treated her father. Jill decides to go away for a week with some friends from college. Jill does not realize that Don is blind until she sees him dropping his cigarette ash on the table. Jill has never met a blind man before, so she asks all sorts of questions about how Don manages everyday chores. Jill has strong feelings for Don and tells Mrs. Baker that if there is someone who should get out of Don's life, it is she. Jill is looking for an apartment and asks Jack for directions. Jill later decides to take Jay back (she is pregnant, and her misgivings about Jay as a father figure were what had spurred the breakup). Jill presses Luke about marriage, which he promises he will be able to talk about some time soon. Jill's free-spirited nature causes some friction, however. Jim (Jason Biggs), Stifler and Finch (Eddie Kaye Thomas) end up performing "like for like" sexual acts on each other in return for being able to watch the girls doing the same thing. Jim Barnes

(Jack Mulhall), the new warden, reassures Danny's older brother Bill (Douglas Fowley), who has bad memories of the school from when he served as a guard there, that his testimony describing the place's cruelty eventually resulted in the dismissal of the former warden and the adoption of gentler rules. Jim Buchanan (Marshall), wealthy president of Buchanan Motor Company, is engaged to Evelyn Fletcher (Inescort), a henpecking aristocrat who is interested in Jim for his money. Jim Bullock (Don DeFore), who has been evicted from an apartment building O'Connor is tearing down for a new skyscraper, and runaway 18-year-old Trudy "Smith" (Gale Storm) who is actually O'Connor's daughter. Jim Dear and Darling return home as the dog catcher departs, and when they release Lady, she leads them to the dead rat. Jim Dear arrives in a taxi with Lady, and she reunites with Tramp, but their joy is short-lived when they find Trusty pinned underneath the wagon's wheel, motionless, with Jock howling mournfully. Jim Murdock's marriage is in trouble after he neglects his wife, particularly her attraction to golf. Jim accepts, and despite Thorndyke's underhanded tactics, he and Herbie take victory. Jim agrees to this, as long as Wu allows him to race the car in the El Dorado. Jim and Connie have received no offers by the time Charley and Eadie return, and Charley lends Jim the $800 needed for the repairs. Jim and Jeanne elope, Linda fires Carey, Carey feigns interest in Boo to make Bud jealous, and the scheme succeeds, with Bud proposing to Boo. Jim and Michelle break the mock relationship off once he is ready to have sex with Nadia, but by then Michelle has really fallen in love with Jim, and soon Jim realizes that he has found his soul-mate in Michelle. Jim and the Prospector find the cabin and stay for the night. Jim bails him and takes him to the airport. Jim decides to take matters into his own hands, taking his wife home to rural Kentucky. Jim ends up sleeping in Bobbie's empty apartment, as he knows that she is away on a modeling assignment, but the next morning, Bobbie returns home, and Connie mistakenly assumes that she and Jim have spent the night together. Jim goes and plays the trombone once more whilst Michelle is playing the flute at a major recital in order to show her that she is the one he wants to be with. Jim is infuriated when he is thrown in a cell with Charley, but the older man explains that he needed time to tell Jim his life story so that he can write a book about him. Jim is released the next day and writes Charley's book, which becomes a best-seller. Jim lives in an old fire house overlooking San Francisco Bay with his friend and mechanic, Tennessee Steinmetz, a jolly Brooklynite who constantly extols the virtues of spiritual enlightenment, having spent time amongst Buddhist monks in Tibet, and builds "art" from car parts. Jim proposes and Michelle accepts. Jim recovers consciousness and wanders into the snow, but he has lost his memory from the blow. Jim reveals that he and his partners have lost the camp to Michael O'Connor, and when Mike later defends his business dealings to Mary, she tells him he has not changed after all. Jim soon finds the car is prone to going completely out of his control and believes Thorndyke has conned him. Jim states he needs a "real car" for the upcoming El Dorado road race, but finds no sympathy from Tennessee, Carole, or Herbie, who jealously proceeds to damage the sleek sports car, proving to Jim once and for all he has a mind of his own. Jim still wants to sell, however, as he is convinced that the building will drive them deeper into debt. Jim suffers from a brain tumor, and his headaches have gotten worse. Jim urges her to break up with Lloyd, feeling he is not an appropriate match for her, and suggests she give him a pen as a parting gift. Jim wants to exclude Stifler from the wedding, having concerns that Stifler's behavior isn't socially acceptable. Jim witnesses the dealership's British owner, Peter Thorndyke, being unnecessarily abusive towards a white Volkswagen Beetle that rolls into the showroom, and defends the car's honor, much to Thorndyke's displeasure. Jim's credit cards are declined when he tries to buy her a luggage set. Jim's dad arrives as Jim is receiving fellatio, and a mishap grasps the restaurant's attention. Jim's dad, Noah Levenstein, the camp's MACRO (Morale And Conflict Resolution Officer) recommends he start trying to fit in and earn the band's trust. Jim's feelings about his new acquisition soon improve when it appears Herbie is intent on bringing him and Carole together. Jim, played by Robert Joy). Jimmy and his men "prove" to the government clerk that they are looking for work by placing an ad in the newspaper - "At liberty: combat crew. Jimmy attempts to possess Gary, only to be hurt by his silver star-shaped badge and is temporarily exiled. Jimmy becomes upset with Faye in the dressing room afterward, and says that he has no intention of marrying her. Jimmy climbs into Miss Dorothy's room and lets Millie in, and they find all of Miss Dorothy's possessions still there. Jimmy continues to vent frustration at White over the band's direction. Jimmy disguises himself as a woman named Mary James seeking accommodations at the Priscilla Hotel, and "casually" mentions to Mrs Meers that she is an orphan. Jimmy drives Doug home, and reiterates that they are in a business relationship, and Doug, although hurt, agrees. Jimmy ends up in a tree in the middle of the lion enclosure at the zoo, while Trixie breaks through the roof of a turkish bath full of toweled men who scramble to cover themselves. Jimmy even takes Mike's place in a boxing match, since the injuries could kill Mike, though Jimmy has never been inside a ring in his life before. Jimmy falls in love with Peggy, and in order to further her mother's love affair with Lord Anthony, Peggy announces her engagement with Jimmy. Jimmy feels guilty for Mike's injuries when their airplane crashed during the war. Jimmy gets a date with Gretchen's sister Allison. Jimmy is reminded by Doris that he needs a real friend for himself, and he is motivated to succeed on completing Doug's wedding. Jimmy is seemingly uninterested in her well-being, being preoccupied with trying to convince White to let the band record more of his original songs. Jimmy is unaware that Leslie is secretly in love with him. Jimmy later takes her and Miss Dorothy on an outing to Long Island, where they meet eccentric widow Muzzy Van Hossmere (Carol Channing). Jimmy possesses Gillian again and attempts to kill Sally before Frances and Jet return. Jimmy, eager to win the bet as well as prove his theory, is not content with simply allowing nature to take its course. Jimmy, his secretary Doris, Fitzgibbons, Lurch, and Reggie, interview people willing to fill the four remaining spots based on their "party trick distractions". Jimmy, the former head of an employment agency, will not rest until all his crewmen have resolved things. Jimmy, whom Becca turned down when he proposed two years earlier, is convinced Becca only invited him to rub her marriage to Vernon in his face. Jjacks and Sam return home. Jjaks and Freddie decide to run off together, eventually staying in a motel. Jjaks and Freddie have since had a falling out, however Jjaks remembers Freddie's dream: that she wants to live in Las Vegas and be a dancer. Jjaks meets with the motel manager but sees Freddie's necklace on the floor of the manager's apartment. Jjaks now realizes that Sam was setting him up. Jo and Maggie try to get in touch with Dick, who has made plans to leave Paris. Jo believes him and decides goes through with the wedding. Jo does the runway show and before her wedding gown finale, she looks out the window and sees the plane Dick was supposed to be on, take off. Jo goes to talk to Flostre at his home. Jo reacts by recommending that he read her book on stress relief titled Let's Live a Little. Jo then accepts John's proposal. Jo thinks the fashion and modeling industry is nonsense, saying: "it is chichi, and an unrealistic approach to self-impressions as well as economics". Jo tracks him down and assumes (as Spiggins had plotted) that it is Tony who is trying to derail the ceremony. Jo urges them to leave. Jo warms to him too, until they go to a diving exhibition. Jo's father "Spiggy" Spiggins, a store manager and classmate of's, does not think John is a good match for his daughter, preferring Tony as a son-in-law. Joan Barclay as Betsy Cummings takes a job as a secretary, using the alias Mary Layton, only to find that her Father (Forrest Taylor as Jerry Cummings) is being cheated by his brokers, Monte Blue as Crone and Jack Mulhall as Jan Jaffin. Joan Bradford is a society heiress who rebels against her mother's choice of a future husband by masquerading as a working class girl and dating a window washer. Joan Carlyle (Joan Cusack), Casey's mother, attempts to prevent Casey from skating due to her declining academic performance. Joan Heseltine, once a proud woman teaching English to a big class of men, becomes, as a result of her love for the butler's son - who during war becomes a Major in the British Army - a timid and submissive woman working in the army as a typist for him. Joan Howell intends to be an actress, but for now she's working as a maid. Joan accepts and leaves with Omar over Jack's protests. Joan doesn't feel safe there, either, because she's harassed by Andy's ex-lovers. Joan escapes into an abandoned mine. Joan insists that they stay in her family's apartment for a few weeks. Joan intercepts him and they spend an idyllic day together. Joan is having trouble finding a job and has just been evicted from her apartment. Joan is soft and vulnerable as she is badgered by her conductor husband, harassed by unknown callers, menaced by men from her sister's past, and "helped" by Harry. Joan refuses and locks herself in her room, but Jim embraces the plan. Joan soon discovers that Omar is a brutal dictator rather than the enlightened ruler he claimed will unite the Arab world. Joan tells Jack that the jewel is Al-Julhara and not a gem stone. Joan's father has just lost his job, and the entire family admit they have been wrong and try to talk Will out of it. Joan, suffering writer's block, wants to return to New York, while Jack prefers aimlessly sailing the world on his boat, the Angelina. Joanna Drayton's (Katharine Houghton) unannounced early return from a Hawaiian vacation causes a stir when she brings her new fiancé to her childhood upper-class home in San Francisco. Joanna and Will reconcile in the family's old tree house, but it collapses and injures both of them. Joanna introduces Marni's grandmother Bunny to an elderly woman, Helen Sullivan (Cloris Leachman). Joanna is oblivious to the reactions of her parents. Joanna reveals that they have dated, and Tim appears devastated when he hears that she's marrying Will. Joanna then starts a fight with Marni, who fights back. Joanna tries to reason with Will but he doesn't care about her past and is furious that she lied to him. Joanna's defense for pretending not to remember Marni is: "I thought we could start over". Joanna's parents—newspaper publisher Matt Drayton (Spencer Tracy) and his wife art gallery owner Christina Drayton (Katharine Hepburn)—are purported liberals who have instilled in her the idea of racial equality. Joanne rushes to the club and convinces Neil to rejoin the rink. Jock and Trusty visit her and determine that their change in behavior is due to Darling expecting a baby. Jock and Trusty visit to comfort Lady, but when Tramp arrives to apologize, Lady angrily confronts him about his past girlfriends. Jock comes to see the family along with Trusty, who's still alive and merely suffered from a broken leg, which is still healing. Jodie, on the other hand, falls for PFC Midge Riley (Cynthia Pepper), a beautiful but fiery WAC. Jody and Jeff get close to each other, but she gets hurt when she sees him making out with one of his actresses, Sindi, who was actually taking advantage of Jeff in his drunken state. (Matthew Perry), a process server, is a week late serving a Mafia kingpin known as Fat Charlie (Joe Viterelli) with a summons to appear as a witness in court. Joe accepts that Jess isn't allowed to play, and the final begins without her. Joe agrees to become the new owner. Joe agrees, but the entire deal is a setup to get Tony into the hotel room to serve Sara, which he does. Joe and Belle get on a bus and phone Abigail to let her know they are going to Eilat. Joe and Belle panic when they see flashing police lights outside, slip out of the club and hide in a local hotel room. Joe and Belle rent an apartment and go to a local open mic night where Joe sings a song for Belle. Joe and Connie are attracted to each other, though she is engaged to bureaucrat Charles Pendergast (Richard Gaines). Joe and Connie are taken to headquarters. Joe and Jerry become enamored of Sugar and compete for her affection while maintaining their disguises. Joe and Jerry, fearing for their lives, realize they must quit the band and leave the hotel. Joe and Kathleen have a conversation that reveals Kathleen's fears about the Fox Books store opening around the corner. Joe and Mary go ahead to New York, but Chris is delayed because the trains are full. Joe and Sara are forced to take the same bus; while they are riding together, Joe informs her that, under Texas law, she stands to gain nothing from the divorce. Joe arrives at work, overseeing the opening of a new Fox Books in New York City with the help of his best friend, branch manager Kevin. Joe arrives in Keetoomen before the couple leaves, and explains that he has lied to his boss about being married to Mary, to get a longer vacation in the past. Joe arrives to find Matan on the ground and she takes the gun from Belle, but when Matan suddenly wakes up she shoots him in shock, killing him. Joe arrives to help open the store and quickly receives phone calls from both the bank and the store owner, Mitchell Beck (Ben Bodé), regarding the previous night's missing deposit. Joe asks Connie to go out with him. Joe belongs to the Fox family which runs Fox Books a chain of mega bookstores. Joe breaks Sugar's heart by telling her that he, Junior, has to marry a woman of his father's choosing and move to Venezuela. Joe collected stories of radio stars, including that of Sally White (Mia Farrow), whose dreams of becoming famous were hampered by her bad voice and accent. Joe convinces Daphne to keep Osgood occupied onshore so that Junior can take Sugar to Osgood's yacht, passing it off as his. Joe convinces Jerry that he cannot actually marry Osgood. Joe decides not to write the story, despite the considerable amount of money riding on it. Joe decides to quit being a drug dealer and gives all the drugs she has to Yoni for free. Joe delivers the drugs to Abigail (Romi Aboulafia) who tells her to meet at the club 'Dark Eighties' later that night in order to sell the drugs. Joe doles out the small supply of fresh water to her, while he gradually becomes delirious from thirst. Joe explains that he had intended to use the money to invest and become part-owner of the store, which would allow him the opportunity of saving it from becoming a Music Town franchise. Joe falls in love with her and won't fight, at least not until Sadie's beau, Noah, shows up. Joe finally decides, for safety's sake, to let her spend the night in his apartment. Joe follows and "accidentally" meets her on the Spanish Steps. Joe has just enough time to tell Miss Logan, with whom he's fallen in love, that if a stranger (especially if he is a boxer) approaches her, to give him a chance. Joe hurries home and, hiding the fact that he is a reporter, offers to show "Anya" around Rome. Joe insists that it be someone in good physical shape, because he wants to continue his boxing career. Joe is distracted from immediately dealing with this crisis due to a scheduled store event: Rex Manning (Maxwell Caulfield), a former 80's pop idol, is due to arrive at the store for an autograph session to promote his new album. Joe is recently divorced and he rekindles Ellen's romantic notions at the very moment when her marriage to Tommy is being tested by the events on campus. Joe is reluctant to take over a life so unlike his previous one, but when he sees the murderous pair mockingly berating Miss Logan (Evelyn Keyes), the daughter of a financier who was sold worthless bonds by

Farnsworth's bank, he changes his mind and agrees to take over Farnsworth's body. Joe keeps saying the body they find "has to be in the pink". Joe later found out that he was ashamed of being a taxi driver. Joe leaves after also realizing Eleanor's affair is with dr Morrisey, but she chases after him, and the two share another kiss. Joe makes up details of the alleged interview until Hennessy informs him that the event had been canceled because the princess had suddenly "fallen ill". Joe manages to mentally nudge Corkle into turning on the radio to the fight and hears that Murdoch has collapsed without even being touched. Joe on the other hand is infatuated with his attractive neighbor Jane (Elle Macpherson). Joe pleads with mr Bhamra to allow Jess to play, but mr Bhamra refuses, revealing that he doesn't want Jess to suffer the same way he did when he was kicked out of the cricket club because of him being Indian. Joe reveals to the East Side Kids Danny's real intentions for the $200, and the remorseful boys go to his bedside and, after inviting him back into the club, urge him to recover. Joe sees a newspaper picture of her and realizes who is in his apartment. Joe serves him under New York law and Gordon takes the papers. Joe soon realizes that Jane isn't who he thought she ought to be. Joe soon resumes the correspondence, apologizes, and promises to eventually tell her why he stood her up. Joe spends a day and a night out on the town in New York City, where he solicits advice on everything from style to living life to the fullest from his wise chauffeur Marshall. Joe spies on the two of them from the window. Joe subsequently offers him a job at the store. Joe takes Connie home. Joe takes over Murdoch's body and wins the title. Joe takes the opportunity to play the devastated husband who has been left by his wife, and gets sympathy from Worth. Joe tells Sugar that he is not good enough for her, that she would be getting the "fuzzy end of the lollipop" yet again, but Sugar wants him anyway. Joe tells his boss off, quits his job, and asks former coworker DeDe out on a date, but when he tells her that he is dying, she becomes upset and leaves. Joe then flies to Los Angeles, where he is met by one of Graynamore's daughters, Angelica, a flighty socialite who labels herself a "flibbertigibbet". Joe was fascinated by the glitz and glamour of Manhattan, where the radio broadcasts were made. Joe's abrasive boss Ray (Cedric the Entertainer) ridicules him while complimenting Joe's rival, Tony (Vincent Pastore), for serving multiple summonses in record time. Joe's ex-boyfriend Matan (Yotam Ishay) arrives at the apartment and mistakes the sleeping Belle for Joe. Joe's manager, Max "Pop" Corkle (James Gleason), has his body cremated. Joe's own favourite radio show was The Masked Avenger. Joe's son, Brian, acts as Madea and Helen's attorney after Charles and Brenda catch the pair breaking into and vandalizing Charles's mansion. Joe's thugs arrive and begin to attack Monty, but the crowd defends Monty against them. Joe, dressed as Josephine, sees Sugar onstage singing that she will never love again. Joe, the head of the family, owns a construction company. Joel Goodson is a senior student in a normal high school who lives with his wealthy parents in the North Shore area of suburban Chicago. Joel accepts this, and they decide to attempt a relationship anyway, starting their life together anew. Joel beckons Clementine to start over; Clementine initially resists, pointing out it could go the same way. Joel finds Lana and demands the egg back, but they are interrupted by Lana's pimp Guido, who pulls a gun. Joel finds himself revisiting them in reverse. Joel lets Lana stay at his house while he goes to school. Joel meets Lana at a restaurant, and they speculate about their future. Joel pays Jackie to go away, but before she leaves, she gives Joel the number for Lana, another prostitute. Joey (Jon Favreau) and Lucy (Kristin Davis) are high school sweethearts with a smart but naive teenage daughter named Lacey. Joey finds Lucy with Salvadore and knocks him out, reuniting with his wife. Joey offers to pay Patrick to take Kat to the prom so he can take Bianca. Joey then punches Cameron, but is in turn beaten up by Bianca for having hurt her, Kat, and Cameron. Johann Porok, a third-generation butler in the service of Count Albert Sandor, the Prime Minister of Hungary, is unexpectedly elected to the Hungarian parliament, representing the opposition social progressive party. John (Martin Freeman) and Judy (Joanna Page) are professional body doubles for films. John Beckwith (Owen Wilson) and Jeremy Grey (Vince Vaughn) are divorce mediators in WashingtonC. John Buckingham (Ben Chaplin), a lonely St Albans bank clerk, orders a mail-order bride Nadia (Nicole Kidman) from Russia on the Internet. John Candy, Dan Aykroyd, and Matthew Broderick were in character as Chet Ripley, Roman Craig, and Ferris Bueller during the end credits. John Cleves (Jason Robards) is a businessman with an office in New York and a home in New Jersey. John Jarratt stars as Jack, who is pushed past the brink of his stalking obsession over Emily (Kaarin Fairfax) when he breaks into her house to take what he wants by force. John Lawrence (Ronald Reagan) is a returning GI. John Robie (Cary Grant) is a retired infamous jewel thief or "cat burglar", nicknamed "The Cat", who now lives in a hilltop villa in the French Riviera growing grapes and flowers. John Sullivan (Joel McCrea) is a popular young Hollywood director of profitable but shallow comedies (eg. John again uses this to his advantage, starting a fashion trend that helps the boys in the basketball team play better. John and Claire continue to bond the next day on a sailing trip. John and Frank purchase the shut-down resort in Maine where their parents met during the "magical" summer, and the property becomes another hotel of sorts, functioning as a rape crisis center run by Susie. John and Franny are companions, seeing themselves as the most normal of the children, aware that their family is rather strange. John and Franny experience the pain and desire of being in love with each other. John and Jeremy become acquainted with the Clearys at their home: the Secretary's wife (Jane Seymour) sexually harasses John; Gloria's brother Todd (Keir O'Donnell) tries to seduce Jeremy during the night; Gloria continues to lavish unwanted sexual attention on Jeremy; and Sack repeatedly injures Jeremy during a game of touch football. John apologizes for intruding and leaves. John arrives at Boris and Melody's home full of regret and hopes to get the family back together. John begins to date Cynthia, and eventually they become engaged. John explains that he was injured in an attempt to reconnect with his mother, who had been transformed into a wolf. John gets dressed and subsequently gets into a scrap with Nadia, who later reveals that she can indeed speak English and that her name is not Nadia. John goes there and tries to win his wife's love back, but she just tells her husband to come visit her on any Wednesday. John has grown to care for Nadia and is forced to steal from the bank where he has worked for ten years. John has some news for his brother; he has just proposed marriage to Jo Spiggins, who grew up with them both and is now a valued and trusted store employee. John inadvertently picks up Carol, an annoying teenybopper who seems fond of him. John invites Cynthia to dinner but she prefers not to socialize with her employer. John is distracted for the next week, and Doris discovers that he has a girlfriend, Brooklyn. John is targeted by a jealous and armed Birgel at the Lorelei, but Birgel is killed by American soldiers who shoot him first. John is told a woman has arrived with a limp, but he says she limps from an injury that will heal and is not a suitable match. John is uncomfortable and shy, but Nadia is sexually bold. John joins the wedding mid-ceremony to Jeremy's delight, but Claire is upset by his appearance, prompting John to profess his love to her and his regret for his past behavior in front of the congregation. John learns that the trio have carried out the same scam on men from Switzerland and Germany, among others. John makes amends by giving her his watch and asking her to be his girlfriend. John partakes in a continuing sexual/business relationship with the older hotel housekeeper, Ronda Ray, which ends when a letter arrives from Freud in Vienna, inviting the family to move to help him (and his new "smart" bear) run his hotel there. John rescues her, tying Alexei to a chair. John serves as the narrator, and is sweet, if naive. John takes Nadia to turn her into the police - hoping to clear his name as a wanted bank robber. John tells Judy that "It is nice to have someone [he] can just chat to". John tells her that he and his girlfriend recently broke up over text, and asks her about her love life. John then wins the affections of a woman with constant nosebleeds by purposely smashing his nose in secret. John visits Jeremy's former wedding crashing mentor, Chazz Reinhold (an uncredited Will Ferrell), who convinces him to crash a funeral. John warns Matt that chastity is not easy; meanwhile, Ryan starts a popular office pool to bet on how long Matt can last. John's Aunt Alice (Anne Revere), an avowed suffragette, has the controlling interest in the company and insists that Cynthia be given a chance. John, disguised as Alexei, leaves for Russia with Sophia. Johnny Rizzo, a young man who dreams of working in radio, is engaged to Claire. Johnny Stewart (Wayans) is a lifelong con-man who meets a girl, Amber Evans (Dash), and tries to impress her by cleaning up his act and doing things the honest way. Johnny Van Owen is a rapper who drifts from city to city. Johnny Walker (Hall) is the top high school quarterback prospect who is heavily recruited by many schools. Johnny agrees to marry Lois the next day. Johnny and his T-Birds remove the competing Pretones preppie boys by tying them to a shower pole in the boys' locker room and drenching them. Johnny asks Loretta to invite his estranged younger brother Ronny (Nicolas Cage) to the wedding. Johnny decides to do his duty and devote himself to take care of his children; he finds himself pretty well in the role as a father and is beginning to enjoy himself. Johnny decides to help with the laundrette and they resume a romantic relationship that (it is implied) had been interrupted after school. Johnny decides to interrupt and defend him, despite their mutual dislike, and the punks turn their attention to him instead. Johnny finds himself being "adopted" as their uncle. Johnny has a big bachelor party planned for the same night, and cannot meet Amy by the boat at her arrival. Johnny has no chance of recognizing Amy, since they never met, and he denies being married to her; still believing that she in fact is Tillie - his English wife. Johnny is frustrated by this and seeks his best friend Bob's advice on the matter. Johnny is injured and ends up in a hospital. Johnny is performing at a nightclub, rapping and dancing with his crew and a club background songstress playing "Cool as Ice (Everybody Get Loose)". Johnny makes the acquaintance of lovely heiress Prudence Millett (Coleen Gray) when she comes to inquire why the children are not in school. Johnny now has won $60,000. Johnny pays her to teach him how to snowboard, which brings them closer and after a day in the snow they kiss briefly and end up sleeping together. Johnny resists his uncle's hedonistic lifestyle but meets a free-spirited woman named Brooke, whom he quickly befriends. Johnny rushes off to share the good news with Emile, but Emile believes he took his advice about bank robbery. Johnny shows up with his crew at a local club frequented by Kathy and her friends. Johnny starts dating Jean, unaware that Patsy is also in love with him. Johnny starts working hard to support his new family, working on a farm during the week and singing and waiting tables on Sunday in a restaurant owned by Jericho Schlosser (Sig Ruman). Johnny's father Vito finds out, and he tells Frank he will kill Gina unless Frank kills Michael during his wedding speech. Johnny's friends jokingly present Amy, Joyce and Johnny Jr. Johnny's job is also back at hand. Johnny's mother, seeing how happy her son is, gives in and agrees to accept Kim. Johnny, enraged by Stephanie's new romance, threatens to fight the Cool Rider if he sees him with her again. Johnny, feeling guilty, tells him that though he cannot make it up to him, he is with him now. Johnny, having come back after breaking up with Chloe, appears behind Kim and apologises; a playful conversation follows and they kiss. Johnny, upon seeing them together in a discussion, demands that Stephanie quit the Pink Ladies to preserve his honor ("rep", reputation). Joining them are Carol (Rudner), the American TV star wife of Andrew; and the impolite Brian (Slattery), Sarah's very recently acquired lover. Jojo finally agrees to marry

Bill, and at their wedding, Daisy and Charles reconcile. Jojo is trying to have sex with her boyfriend Bill (Vincent D'Onofrio), whom she attempted to marry at the beginning of the movie, but fainted after deciding she couldn't go through with it. Jon Martello is a young Italian American and modern-day Don Juan living in New Jersey, with a short list of things he cares about: "my body, my pad, my ride, my family, my church, my boys, my girls, my porn". Jon begins dating Esther. Jon later meets with Barbara and apologizes for lying to her about the pornography. Jon politely brushes her off. Jon replies she asked many things of him and he could not meet her expectations. Jon tells his family about the break-up with Barbara: while they are displeased, his sister Monica states that Barbara never cared about Jon and was just dating him because she knew she could manipulate him to her will. Jon tries to return to his old lifestyle, but ends up in a downward spiral. Jonah (Ryan Kwanten) is a young man without a care in the world. Jonah asks Ava to stay in his room. Jonah asks what other options there are, now very worried that he will never have children. Jonah calls her and tells her that he would give her anything if she would carry the child. Jonah catches up to Stevie and tells her that he loves her, but Stevie leaves. Jonah finds Stevie, but Ava comes out of Jonah's room and Stevie storms off, feeling betrayed. Jonah goes back to the doctor to ask for more time and moves his operation three weeks. Jonah goes to see a doctor, who reveals that Jonah has testicular cancer. Jonah is crushed. Jonah is frustrated and Stevie gives in and says she is okay with natural. Jonah is sad at first, but Stevie does show up for moral support. Jonah leaves to go find her, hoping she is home. Jonah leaves, realizing he is out of time. Jonah meets up with Becky (Kathryn Beck) and they retreat up to his room away from the party, only for Becky to find a lump in Jonah's testicle. Jonah never tells the girls he asks that he has cancer. Jonah persuades a reluctant Sam to go on the air to talk about how much he misses Maggie. Jonah reads through the contract and signs it and Stevie tells him that they have a four-day window that Stevie should be ovulating in. Jonah receives a call from the sperm bank and goes in for a meeting. Jonah then begins making lists of all the women he has ever dated or known and asks them if they would ever consider after his child. Jonah's first "paycheck" is worth over $700. Jonah, a baseball fan, reads Annie's letter and likes that it mentions the Baltimore Orioles, but he fails to convince his father to go to New York to meet Annie. Jonathan Younger owns a self-storage facility. Jonathan is dismayed to discover that his neglected family shipping firm is in dire trouble, and that he will not be receiving his usual check, leaving him broke. Jonathan pushes her into a singing career, and she soon becomes a star. Jonathan shares her esoteric beliefs, and they receive the blessing of his deceased wife for the new relationship via seance. Jonathan's college-aged son Winston returns home to help run the family business. Jones becomes a local celebrity and, at the behest of his boss (Paul Harvey), begins ghost-writing Mannion's "autobiography", with good-natured but street-wise Wilhelmina voluntarily acting as his "talent agent" to see that he gets paid. Jones turns out to look exactly like the notorious bank robber "Killer" Mannion (also Robinson) and is apprehended by the police. Jordan Abrams (Chernik), a conservative Jewish accountant, lives a stable but rather boring life with his girlfriend Rachel Stern (Manninen). Jordan eventually decides not to get back together with Rachel after all, as he comes to realize he loves Julia. Jordan recruits Julia to be his teacher to broaden his sexual horizons, in exchange for managing her finances. Jordan runs after her. Joseph cheated on and mistreated his wife; Inès seduced her cousin's wife while living with them; and Estelle had an affair and then killed the resulting child, prompting the child's father to commit suicide. Joseph concludes that rather than torture devices or physical punishment, "hell is other people". Joseph finally begins giving in to the lascivious Estelle's escalating attempts to seduce him, which drives Inès crazy. Joseph is constantly interrupted by his own guilt, however, and begs Estelle to tell him he is not a coward for attempting to flee his country during wartime. Joseph never married Nando's mother but drowned with her in a boating accident. Joseph suggests that they try to leave each other alone and to be silent, but Inès starts to sing about an execution and Estelle vainly wants to find a mirror to check on her appearance. Joseph's actual wife, whom he left in 1950, is alive in Philadelphia. Josephine Evans (Mary Astor) and Professor Michael Kingsley (Herbert Marshall) are in a romantic relationship, something not approved of by Evan's two children. Josh Mallon (Bing Crosby) and Ace Lannigan (Bob Hope) are best friends and work aboard the same ship. Josh Rosen is a film geek and aspiring filmmaker with a crush on Amy, a former friend of Dylan's. Josh and Ace flee to Hawaii and then head for Singapore. Josh and Gisele flirt and Molly is upset. Josh and Giselle rush to the hospital where Molly and the family are waiting. Josh asks his friends what's wrong with Dylan. Josh boards an ocean liner with Gloria and his father. Josh chases after her and she admits that she loves him, returns his grandmothers ring and leaves. Josh continues to see Giselle, and Molly dates other men. Josh counters, saying "Or what. Josh ends the "benefits" part of his relationship with Gisele and confesses he may love Molly. Josh ends up buying the lingerie. Josh eventually chooses Azalea and pairs off Selena with his friend Master Sergeant William Bailey (Tommy Farrell). Josh explains that they cannot because he is seeing someone else and rejects her bluntly, which distresses Alice. Josh finally admits the truth; that he and Molly are not engaged. Josh finds them and professes his love for Chloe. Josh finishes his movie, after much delay, and shows it to the public. Josh gets jealous of Peter and when Lara Jean confronts him about his jealousy he kisses her, and tells her he wants to be with her, causing Lara Jean to realize that she wants to date Peter for real. Josh makes it to the restaurant party, and tells Nat that he thinks she is the perfect wife, just not for him. Josh meanwhile leaves the flat, telling Nat he's remembered he has to do something and that he will meet her at the restaurant. Josh overhears this and walks away in confusion before he is discovered. Josh persuades Pappy Tatum (Arthur O'Connell) to sell one side of his mountain to the government as long as government employees don't come to Tatum's side, which means revenuers can not interfere with Pappy's moonshining. Josh picks up Amy the next day and takes her to the party, even though Amy is uncomfortable with the crowd. Josh realizes that Ace and Mima must be on the island. Josh realizes that he and Amy have a lot less in common than he originally thought, and she leaves to check out the music. Josh replies that he is more comfortable with Molly than anyone else he knows. Josh retaliates that Nat's family were not overly friendly towards him. Josh talks to Chloe about his book while she's working at a charity office. Josh talks to Dylan and asks her for advice on how to interact with Amy, as he had never dated before. Josh teaches Dylan a lesson about how the world doesn't revolve around her. Josh tells him that the ball was taken from him by a bully (Nicholas Berman). Josh tries to tell the police officers that Dave is harmless but is ignored. Josh unwittingly but clumsily offends Nat's grandmother during a game of charades, Nat's father makes him sleep on the upper deck of a bunk bed of a young female relative, and Nat's parents giving Josh a pair of books titled "How to be a Successful Writer" and "How to Stop Wasting Your Life". Josh wants to get casserole dishes for Nat but Chloe laughs that this is not a present for a wife and she must help him; they end up at a lingerie shop with Josh uncomfortably trying to make conversation with the shop assistant amongst the shop's expensive contents. Josh wants to make a documentary for the Puget Sound Film Festival, and decides to give himself a challenge, with his topic being popularity, and his subject being Dylan herself. Josh's best man Danny asks Chloe out but is rebuffed. Josh's friends from the film club are angry at him for abandoning them for Dylan, and assume he has a crush, which Josh denies. Josh's mother angrily reveals she knew he was having an affair and is horrified that he would bring Giselle to the hospital. Josh's parents ask Josh and Molly to stay longer to help with Josh's family's framing shop, as Max's health is failing. Josh, along with Captain Robert Jason Salbo (Jack Albertson), has to persuade the Tatums, his distant relatives on his mother's side, to sell their land to theS. Josh, in a moment of panic, says that it is Molly. Josie Geller (Drew Barrymore) is an insecure copy editor for the Chicago Sun-Times who has never had a real relationship. Josie confides in her brother Rob (David Arquette) about her fears. Josie develops a crush on her English teacher, Sam Coulson (Michael Vartan), and becomes the top student in his class. Josie loses hope, but is reassured when a kind-hearted nerd named Aldys (Leelee Sobieski) befriends her. Josie reverts to the old geek persona that ruined her first high school career. Josie vows to give Gus a story and writes an account of her experience. Josie waits, but the clock runs out with no sign of Sam. Josie, ultimately making amends, secures him a coaching job. Joy accepts, and it is only after they arrive in Slovetzia that Ira realizes his error. Joy and Jack meet by chance when they are given the same hotel room because of a computer error. Joy ends up being highlighted in a newspaper article after she helps her students and the caged animals escape the building successfully. Joy eventually learns that Katrina is in love with Alek (Timothy Dowling), one of the leaders of the youth rebellion. Joy frequently clashes with Pochenko, who is disturbed by her fierce independence and the fact that he cannot frighten her. Joy gets the promotion she'd been working for, but tells her boss she would rather be happy doing nothing than doing something she hates and being miserable. Joy is put in charge of preparations, and during this time she and Pochenko grow closer. Joy realizes that Jack set her up to get back with him, therefore cheating on him and letting Jack keep the money. Joy states that they hit the jackpot, to which Jack replies that he certainly did (referring to both the money and to Joy). Joy teaches them of life outside Slovetzia and helps them gain confidence in themselves. Joy tells the judge she doesn't want any money and gives the engagement ring to Jack, telling him she officially doesn't want anything from him. Joy walks away from Mason and goes to the hearing. Joy's presence in Slovetzia is due to Pochenko's desire to change his reputation among other Western nations as a "beast". Joyce thanks her for giving her the life they both wanted by Shirley giving her Jesus (You Gave Me Jesus) since Aunt Bam spills that Shirley is sick. Joyless, listless and chronically sick, Banks regularly visits doctors who can find nothing wrong with him. João wakes up in an alternate 2011 in which he is rich, but is not married to Helena. João, however, is the one who drinks it, and he becomes drugged. Juan Antonio begs Vicky to meet him again privately before leaving Spain, which she finally accepts, lying to Doug in the process. Juan comes to realize that the true meaning of life is love, family, and happiness, and that money isn't the answer. Juan is suspicious and takes the check to his immigration worker (Polly Draper) who encourages him to follow the directions given him. Juan was born on a strawberry field in Bakersfield, California, but due to hardship, his mother decided to relocate to Mexico. Jud takes her to a New York Giants baseball game and to dinner and dancing. Judge Abramovitz (Nora Dunn) sends their respective counsellors to Ireland to inform them of this, but on arrival they discover that the celebrity couple has reunited on the anniversary of their wedding. Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) had hoped that his son would go to college and study law, but Andy isn't sure that's what he wants to do so he heads off to New York City to find a job. Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) has been appointed chairman of a special committee in Washington, DC. Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) has two problems. Judge Hardy (Lewis Stone) later encounters his son, Andy, and Andy broaches the subject of car ownership, but Judge Hardy tells Andy that he cannot have his own car. Judge Hardy also learns that Kathryn's father is poor. Judge Hardy explains his point of view about spending money on a car versus putting it aside as savings and then discloses his deep concern for Andys mother. Judge Hardy is so impressed with James help and his sons ingenuity that he pays the last $8 for Andys car. Judge Hardy is told he has inherited $2 million. Judge Hardy would like to convey a message to his wife, but there is no telephone at her mothers home and Emily finds telegrams unnerving. Judge Hardys wife, Emily (Fay Holden), receives a telegram that evening informing her that her mother had a serious stroke. Judith (Jurnee Smollett-Bell) becomes a therapist, working at a matchmaking agency owned by Janice (Vanessa Williams) and Brice (Lance Gross) works as a pharmacist. Judith (in sorrow) then walks out of the pharmacy and heads to church, to meet with her mother as the credits start rolling. Judith becomes upset with Brice, when he refuses to confront a group of men who catcall her on their way home from dinner. Judith changes her hair and makeup for her birthday and Brice fails to notice the change or remember her birthday. Judith constantly taunts Jay in front of his wife. Judith is dissatisfied with her job and anxious to start her own marriage counseling business, but Brice tells her to wait until they are more financially stable. Judith isolates Darren from his friends, demands that Darren quit the band, receive humiliating medical procedures, and attend relationship counseling under her care. Judith meets Harley (Robbie Jones) at work. Judith returns to the apartment she shared with Brice to pick up a laptop and becomes surrounded by her mother and church members' prayer circle. Judith refuses to tell talk to Brice about their argument and goes to take a shower. Judith turns out to be a friend of Kimora's, and she's come to stay with the couple for a month. Judith's coworker, Ava (Kim Kardashian), gives Judith a makeover. Judith, now questioning her sex life with Brice, tries to improve it, but fails. Judy (Swanson) and Nicholas Randall (Olivier) are a newly married couple who agree to a marriage based on "perfect understanding". Judy and Gabe are introduced to Jack's new girlfriend, Sam, an aerobics trainer. Judy begins seeing Michael. Judy chooses to go back to London to decorate their home but insists that Nicholas spend time with their friends. Judy forgives him due to their prior agreement of a perfect understanding. Judy leaves Ivan to consider her options and ends up wandering the streets at night. Jules and her mother arrive at the wedding so that Jules can celebrate with Jess. Juli Baker meets Bryce Loski two weeks before the beginning of second grade; it's something about those blue eyes that attract her. Juli hangs the picture in her room so she'll always be reminded of what the tree represented for her. Juli ignores him by sitting in the living room, until she looks out the window and sees Bryce's last attempt at winning her heart: he plants a sycamore tree in her backyard. Juli manages to get home without Bryce seeing her, but Bryce is determined now. Juli now realizes Bryce has changed and waves back at him from her living room window. Juli often sits out with her dad on the porch for hours, listening to him talk and watching him paint. Juli's spirits are lightened when her father, who she admires more than anyone, paints her a picture of her sycamore tree. Juli's yard has always been very messy, and the family is concerned about poison in the eggs. Juli, furious and hurt, decides to abandon every thought of Bryce, even though Bryce's grandpa is very good friends with Juli and helps her tame her yard. Juli, on the other hand, can't stop thinking about Bryce in the many years she's known him. Julia Becker, the sculptor, also pays a visit. Julia Jones (Alyson Hannigan) is an obese woman who dreams of marrying Napoleon Dynamite (Josh Meyers), but even in her dreams she is rejected. Julia Scott (Claudette Colbert) is a very efficient secretary at a department store. Julia Tellier, the well-respected madam of a small-town whorehouse, takes her girls on an outing to her brother's village to attend the first communion of her niece. Julia accepts, and prepares to move in permanently with the Careys. Julia also doesn't like Donna romancing Chuck and casually throws around the name of Donna's boyfriend. Julia also gets a present from her mother-in-law: a vaginal thermometer which apparently has been in their family for generations and is regarded as good luck when it is not washed. Julia and Andy fight each other, Kill Bill-style. Julia and Grant go to a wedding planner named Jell-O (Valery Ortiz), who has a big butt. Julia and Robbie are increasingly confused by their deepening feelings for each other. Julia changes her mind and tells Monty to go home. Julia decides to go down to Philadelphia and "get the Rodgers place in order". Julia feels betrayed because she didn't hear this information from Monty earlier; she leaves, telling Monty that custody will be awarded to Jennifer. Julia feels the marriage is over, and makes plans for a cruise to Cuba and Panama with Rodgers. Julia finds from reading Andy's mind that she wants to get back together with Grant and plans to split the two of them up. Julia finds him and, out of a guilty conscience, brings him back to her place to sleep off the alcohol. Julia finishes Monty's case preparation and discovering it is her 32nd birthday, takes her to his favorite jazz club, where they dance. Julia flees to Aunt Margaret for assurance that her parents truly loved her, and Margaret reveals that her parents' situation is looking good enough that they are about ready for her to come home. Julia follows Bruce to the nightclub, where he's been doing quite well with Sam and an old routine, and is about to enter the final heat/round of the competition. Julia gives Jordan some cookies which are the best Jordan has ever tasted; it turns out Julia is a talented cook as well as a dancer. Julia goes outside and dances to impress men on the streets, but is unsuccessful. Julia goes to lunch with Martha Pryor (Jean Dixon), who tells her she is offered a manager position of a department store in Paris. Julia goes to the hospital to demand Monty to take her home, but sees Social Services sending his children to live with Jennifer. Julia goes to work at her father Frank's (Eddie Griffin) Greek diner. Julia grows more jealous, and her competition for Ian upsets Carmen. Julia happily says yes. Julia has a $500 debt she needs to repay. Julia is comfortable in the acting world and friends with the director, Bill (Kyle MacLachlan), while Carmen is uncertain of where she belongs. Julia is the last woman standing and is rewarded with dinner for two at a restaurant called "A Restaurant". Julia meets Richard's sister, Gertrude, and his daughter, Annabel, who is a very spoiled, out of control child. Julia races to the race track to see how it all turns out. Julia represents Monty, apologizing for not hearing his side of the story. Julia returned to show business, but left her infant daughter with her husband, so that the child could be raised in more secure circumstances. Julia returns home to begin rehearsals for the new play. Julia sees a report on the incident, in which Monty is identified as having been "falsely convicted" of rape. Julia suggests a romantic tryst, and he gently tells her that he's gay. Julia takes Grant to meet her parents. Julia tells Donna it would be foolish to give up her wealthy boyfriend for a side show crooner. Julia tries to cheer him up and later asks him to help her plan her own wedding. Julia tries to walk away in a rainstorm, but ends up in the mud. Julia wants help and goes to see a love therapist, Hitch, who rejects her at first but reluctantly agrees to help her. Julia wins, leaving Nancy too jealous to enjoy the quiet evening after the party ("On the Front Porch"). Julia worries that her marriage is failing. Julia's brother becomes infatuated with Rosa, one of her workers, and promises to visit next month. Julia's wasp-tongued mother, Margueritte (Jenifer Lewis), is also suspicious of Dudley, because she believes the newcomer will break up her daughter's marriage. Julia, however, is instantly charmed by the handsome and unflappable angel. Julia, meanwhile, discovers what Drew is up to and outright rejects his advances, then kicks him out whilst threatening his position at work. Julian is disapproving of Patrick's behaviour and is sympathetic to Jenny, who is at first very upset and says she never wants to see Patrick again. Julian is revealed to be a speechwriter who visits a call-girl, named Alice (Ingeborga Dapkunaite), on a weekly basis where she practices bondage acts on him. Julian opened the school he has worked hard to establish, with his wife, former stripper Candace, as his head of admissions. Julian tries to persuade Alice not to give up on what she does best, but her mind is made up, and she walks out to spend alone time in her new artist studio. Julian understands Kim being unsure and they end up spending the night together in a threesome with Kim's girlfriend. Julianna knows it's love, while Bryce, like any seven-year-old boy, doesn't. Julianna stalks Bryce all through his childhood; staring at his house, asking him to play, following him at school, etc. Julianne Potter (Julia Roberts), a 27-year-old New York City restaurant critic, receives a call from her lifelong friend Michael O'Neal (Dermot Mulroney). Julianne and Michael then take a walk, with Julianne finally confessing her love to Michael. Julianne declares that Kimmy has won, and that she accepts Michael's decision. Julianne finds Michael at Chicago Union Station, where he is looking for Kimmy, and confesses all to him. Julianne is disappointed that Michael will marry someone so wrong for him, and someone he has known for such a short time. Julianne pursues Michael, but finally realizes he loves Kimmy. Julianne then tracks down Kimmy in the bathroom of Comiskey Park (Kimmy's family has a private viewing box at the stadium). Julianne wishes them well, and she and Michael share their goodbyes, both of them finally moving on with their lives. Julianne's unauthorized use of Kimmy's father's computer to forge an email message to Michael's employer causes further problems for Michael and Kimmy, to the point where they are on the verge of calling off the wedding. Julianne, however, apologizes and explains to Kimmy that she kissed Michael unexpectedly, but he didn't kiss her back because he was in love with Kimmy. Julias friends, Brenda and Cynthia, set Julia up on a blind date with Byron - a dimwitted, middle-aged rapper. Julie (Vanessa Williams), a successful Manhattan reporter-turned- columnist in her mid-40s believes she has it all - a great job, a rent controlled apartment, a boyfriend (Michael Boatman) and best of all, an adorable six-year-old son named Jake, whom she conceived via an anonymous sperm donor. Julie asks if Scott and Cynthia can come along for a double date. Julie finds that she is legally married to both Marty and Vernon. Julie has neither intention nor desire to reveal her identity to him, she simply needs to check her sources, get the facts, and move on. Julie invites Tom to a concert she had planned on going with her former fiancé, Jed. Julie is astounded by the siege, but Perry speaks to both of them inside their heads, and tells them that its because the Boneys are afraid of the change they represent. Julie mistakenly assumes an innocent relationship between Tom and Ruth. Julie resists talking but finally admits she misses Dorothy. Julie shoots it, and both fall off the roof as Grigio shrivels away into a pile of dust and bones. Julie slips away in the confusion and arrives at a theatrical agency. Julie states she had given off the wrong signal to Tom, since she is planning on moving away. Julie tells him that Kurt wants her to meet his children that weekend but that this new degree of commitment has made her realize that she is in love with Jason, who, along with Joe, have become her closest family. Julie wants to go somewhere warm for the night. Julie, however, is so outraged that she slugs him in the stomach in front of the cast once the cameras have stopped rolling before storming off. Julie, however, will not concede that her mother could be right, so she places genetic blame on Jakes anonymous father. Julie, meanwhile, will be blasted off into space. Julie, upset at their lack of respect, tries to leave as the pallbearers carry Bill's coffin out of the church. Juliet (Keira Knightley) and Peter (Chiwetel Ejiofor) get married in a lovely ceremony orchestrated and videotaped by Mark (Andrew Lincoln), the best man. Juliet, Peter, and Mark meet Jamie and his bride, Aurélia. Juliet, played by Jocelyn DeBoer, seems to be a mixture of Charlie and Rob. Juliette "Jules" Paxton (Keira Knightley) is the same age and the daughter of a native English family. Julio gives Belinha up to Roger while Fred and Honey celebrate. Julius Sagamore, the shrewd family solicitor, then suggests that Epifania undergo therapy with noted society psychiatrist Adrian Bond. Julius admits the truth of it but insists that the legend is not a lie. Julius and Lauren share a mutual love of the poetry of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, and he claims to have lived at one time in the Brownings' villa in Venice. Julius has also seen the paper and intercepts Lauren and Daniel on their way back to the hotel, angry that Lauren lied to him about going to Venice to visit her sick mother. Julius hides them in a movie theater and gives them his remaining cash, promising to return a half-hour before sunset. Julius is nowhere to be seen, taken to a police station, but despite being slapped around by an inspector, refuses to reveal their whereabouts until the bells of the Campanile have rung. Julius is sitting on a nearby bench and she bids him a tearful farewell. Julius soon falls behind and Lauren persuades Daniel to go back for him. Jumping into the driver's seat, Tom drives by and stops to see Scott lean in to kiss Julie. Jumping ship in Florida, she runs away boarding a bus to New York City to reunite with her new spouse. Kevin and his gang then proceed to beat Denis up in front of the entire party in the most humiliating fashion, pounding him to the beat of the song playing. Kevin becomes his new sidekick but without a name. Kevin doesn't end up "getting off" with anyone, but he does seem to succeed in getting over Vicky (Tara Reid) after making advances on her throughout the film. Kevin finally convinces him with the news that Minelli had their grandmother killed and that he will wear the costume Darryl designed for him. Kevin however, recovers and subdues him yet again. Kevin is Adam's friend who drives a cab to support himself while he pursues his passion for painting. Kevin realizes a problem and worked out that they can only afford the house if they have a fifth member to work along with them. Kevin rushes to Darryl's workplace with the news, but Darryl refuses to help wanting a normal life. Kevin sees a woman he wants, but loses interest in her after he gets her. Kevin still proclaims his love for Nina, but she is still suspect of his feelings. Kevin tells Adam he wasn't treating Nina right and tells him he knows that Adam is not truly in love with Nina. Kevin tells him how messed up that is, but Adam only shrugs it off. Kevin then forces Denis to row a boat out to the middle of the lake. Kevin's editor ran the article on the front page of the 'Commitments' section, despite Kevin and her settling to hold it for a while. Kevin's father forgoes charging Beth with stealing his car if they don't charge Kevin with attempting to kill Denis. Kevin, after Nina and Adam break up, tells her that their relationship wasn't just sex and that he's in love with her. Kevin, hoping to win the affections of Kimberly Jonz, a reporter at his TV station, begs Darryl to allow her to interview him. Kevin, ignoring warnings from Andrew, proposes to Sarah from the stage. Leonid has quietly taken over administrative duties and signing sentences in Pochenko's name. Leroy kills him in an act of vengeance, and flees with Samantha. Les Anderson (Corey Haim) is a 16-year-old living in Southern California who tries to get his driver's license and falls in love with Mercedes Lane (Heather Graham). Les drives off with Mercedes, without his license. Les finds her too cold. Les lies to his parents and friends, convincing them that he has passed the test. Les panics and goes to his best friend Dean's house, where Dean (Corey Feldman) fixes the dent in the car's hood. Les proposes marriage, insisting Michael/Dorothy "think about it" before answering; he leaves immediately and returns home to find co-star John, who almost forces himself on Dorothy until Jeff walks in on them. Les' father tells Les that the BMW is all his now, and laughingly tells him to take good care of it. Lesbia wants a family, but not a husband who smokes and is as untidy as the general. Leslie Lutrell openly shows his affection for him but Lucky Fritz doesn't trust his magic skill. Leslie Steele (Merle Oberon), a guest at a costume party, is forced to stay overnight in a hotel because of a particularly bad London fog. Leslie Wright (Queen Latifah) is a straight-shooting physical therapist and die-hard basketball fan who is tired of being a guy's best friend or as Morgan called her the "homegirl" type. Leslie and Albert enjoy listening to Jimmy read fairy tale stories to them on their roof. Leslie and Max overcome Von Stuppe's henchmen and confront Von Stuppe. Leslie and Max return the real Prince in time for his coronation and depart with Fate and Maggie. Leslie and Scott decide to spend a romantic evening together, but Leslie wakes up to Morgan at Scott's door hoping to reconcile. Leslie encourages him and helps him get back in the game, the two of them spending a lot of time together. Leslie is the classic hero always dressed in white, handsome, ever-courteous, enormously talented and successful. Leslie proposes an automobile race from New York to Paris and offers the Webber Motor Car Company the opportunity to build an automobile to make the journey. Leslie quickly moves out as Scott and Morgan reunite. Leslie reveals "him"self and agrees to make the dress for Michelle. Leslie stops his car just short of the finish line under the Eiffel Tower to prove that he loves Maggie more than he cares about winning the race. Leslie then confesses that she has gone along with Logan's incorrect assumption as a means of seeing how much he would be prepared to give up for her. Leslie uses mules to pull his car to another refueling point, where Maggie tricks Hezekiah into boarding a train and handcuffs him to a seat, lying to Leslie that Hezekiah had quit and "wanted to go back to New York". Leslie's nemesis, Fate, is the traditional melodramatic villain usually dressed in black, sporting a black moustache and top hat, glowering at most everyone, maniacal evil laugh, grandiose plans to thwart the hero, and dogged by failure. Less than two weeks later, however, Jack and Sally are back together and the couple meet Judy and Gabe for dinner like old times. Lester Watts (Chris Pratt) works at a liquor store, happily selling alcohol to minors while spending his spare money on his porno collection. Lester and Ramona argue and break up. Lester becomes slightly jealous. Lester begins to walk away, then turns around, walks up to Dashiell and says "She's my girl-friend", and punches him. Lester falls in love with Dodd, but he is initially oblivious to her feelings. Lester had arranged to meet Ramona after the session, but has forgotten about it, while Dashiell and Lester become friends. Lester outstretches his hand, asking Ramona to dance. Lester still continues with the group therapy, even after the two sessions that he said was his last. Lester teaches Dodd about the business of filmmaking and eventually becomes his secretary. Levin and Kitty marry and start their new life on his country estate. Levin and Stiva pay a visit to Anna, who is occupying her empty days by being a patroness to an orphaned English girl. Levin continues working on his estate, a setting closely tied to his spiritual thoughts and struggles. Levin feels dissatisfied at the amount of time Kitty wants to spend with him and dwells on his inability to be as productive as he was as a bachelor. Levin is a passionate, restless, but shy aristocratic landowner who, unlike his Moscow friends, chooses to live in the country on his large estate. Levin is both horrified and profoundly moved by the sight of the tiny, helpless baby. Levin is initially uneasy about the visit, but Anna easily puts him under her spell. Levin is very agitated by Dolly's talk about Kitty, and he begins to feel distant from Dolly as he perceives her loving behaviour towards her children as false. Levin resolves to forget Kitty and contemplates the possibility of marriage to a peasant woman. Levin tries to overcome his feelings, but eventually succumbs to them and makes Veslovsky leave his house in an embarrassing scene. Levin, crushed by Kitty's refusal, returns to his estate, abandoning any hope of marriage. Lily retrieves it from the rubbish. Lily tells Lauren that their mom wants to see Lauren for brunch. Lily tells a silly joke and the whole group gets along very well. Lily tells him she is leaving for home on the following daybut that could change. Lily, annoyed by this, leaves the house and takes her sleeping bag from the tent, choosing to sleep over on the other side of the yard instead, stubbornly refusing Jarrod's offer to use it. Lina and Cathy end up spending several hours together getting acquainted, and find themselves fascinated by each other's work Lina's archeology and Cathy's photography. Lina assures Cathy that she does not intend to take Michael away from her, which seems to calm Cathy somewhat. Lina finds her fears are outweighed by her feelings for the Americans, and returns to reunite with them, only to discover they have already gone. Lina flees. Lina is convinced they are in love, despite Don's protestations otherwise. Lina moves in with them, and they continue enjoying the island paradise as a threesome. Lina threatens to sue F. Lincoln contacts his friend Chris Bartlett, hoping he will be able to romance Ina. Lincoln remains loyal to his fiancée, though, and soon grows irritated by Ina's attempts to impress him. Lincoln, however, is engaged to Agnes Oglethorpe Young, the beautiful young daughter of his mentor dr Carleton Radwin Young. Lincoln, who is replacing dr Young that night, suspects that Ina is faking. Linda Howard discovers that her husband is having an affair and takes their young adult daughter Janet away to start a new life. Linda becomes a successful fashion designer but begins to re-examine her own life choices when Janet forsakes her successful-but-bland doctor boyfriend for a faster, more loose set of companions. Linda is averse to the idea because of his leaving her three years earlier, but agrees to hire him if he will keep their relationship on a strictly professional level. Linda wants Carey to write a simple story about the young couple, but he insists on looking for an angle, which presents itself in the form of Jeanne's younger sister Barbara (nicknamed "Boo"), who confesses she always has been in love with Bud, the brother of Jeanne's former beau Jim, who was dumped by Jeanne when he joined the Army. Lindsey again rejects him. Lindsey attends the party to talk to Wesley, and Walter forces her to stay. Lindsey regains custody of Ariel. Lindsey returns to find her car towed and argues with the two men. Lindsey rushes to pick up her check from work and ends up parking in Wesleys reserved spot, leaving her six-year-old daughter, Ariel (Jordenn Thompson), in the car. Lindsey takes Ariel to school, while Wesley has a meeting with his coworker and best friend, John (Eddie Cibrian), over acquiring a company Wesley's father has been competing against for years. Lint Harper (Raymond Keane), Gilly's roommate, becomes interested when Gilly tells him what happened with Ann. Lionel Witherspoon, an African American security guard who protected Vladimir from his Russian handlers during the defection, takes him home to Harlem to live with Lionel's mother, unemployed father, sister, and grandfather-a living arrangement noticeably similar to Vladimir's family back in Moscow. Lionel and Paulette, it becomes clear, have been using each other: Lionel using her sexually, Paulette using him as a means of entry to the higher spheres of the New York social and art scene. Lionel decides to return to Alabama to be close to his minor son. Lionel is still infatuated with her, but Paulette wants only his tutelage, which makes things difficult since they live in the same studio-loft. Lionel moves back from Alabama and takes over Vladimir's job driving a limousine. Lionel pours his anxiety and repressed passion into his work. Lionel realizes that he needs the emotional turmoil of his destructive relationships in order to fuel his art. Lionel, who has figured out that Marisa is the woman Chris has been looking for, tells her to go to the dinner and end the affair swiftly if she wants to keep her possible future in hotel management. Lisa Kelly manages an isolated BDSM resort called The Club that offers its high-end clients an exclusive setting in which they can experience the life of a Master or Mistress. Lisa asks him to come to their house that night, leading Tom to think that she has invited him to the party; in reality, she just wants him to fill in for her - he reluctantly agrees. Lisa eventually breaks up with Darryl after he announces their engagement (without Lisa having given her consent) to their families, and starts dating Akeem. Lisa returns home after finding out that her boyfriend Hans is cheating on her. Lisa thanks the marriage counselor and decides to stay with her husband.

Lisa walks in on them and is disgusted by the situation. Listening enlivens Mickler's relationship with his own wife, Marilyn (Faye Dunaway). Marni and Will's little brother, Ben (Billy Unger), loosened the screws as a part of his plan in hiding the tree house because Will was going to move it as a wedding present. Marni apologizes to Will for her actions, saying she was only trying to protect him. Marni appears to start a relationship with Charlie (Sean Wing), her brother's best friend who has always been kind to her. Marni decides to bring Tim to the rehearsal dinner as part of her plan to stop the wedding. Marni forgives her and promises to get them back together. Marni is also upset to see that Joanna fits in very well with the family. Marni is in trouble when everyone discovers that she was responsible for the video at the rehearsal dinner. Marni is now convinced that Joanna hasn't changed, and walks away. Marsha ends up asking Darvac to pretend to be Roogle, but has to knock out Darvac when he tries to claim his privileges as her "husband". Marsha goes to her friend Kitty's cabin in the mountains to get away from the limelight. Marshal, Karen Sisco, are forced to share a car trunk during Foley's escape from a Florida prison. Marshall Thomas (Houston Rhines), an advertising designer, and his partner of seven years, cafe owner Gabe Horton (Noah Schuffman), who live in Los Angeles, California, are in a rut. Marshall discovers a smart phone application called eCupid and agrees to install it without reading the terms of agreement (despite multiple warnings) The application (voiced by Morgan Fairchild) proceeds to take over Marshall's phone and computer, and by proxy his life. Marshall then arrives, jealous. Martha goes to a bar where she drops her quarter in front of the jukebox. Martha introduces Whitman to her family and he impresses them. Martha is smitten with him now, however, throws a rock to get arrested so she can end up in the next cell, holding hands with Petey between the bars. Martha replaces him and becomes successful. Martha slips away and heads for the exit, where she reunites with Lawrence, who was looking for the pair. Martha soon becomes frustrated and desperate after the manipulative Whitman tells her whole smitten and oblivious family that they are engaged to be married. Martha talks to Richard the next day, telling him that Julia is leaving and taking the job in Paris. Martha then realizes that she really loves Doug and makes up with him. Martin abandons the contract and rescues Bart from certain death, driving him to the Newberry house and holing up inside, narrowly ahead of Grocer and his mercenaries. Martin appears on the base to produce a show for the enlisted men and (at his request) is assigned Curtis as his assistant, who offers Martin the use of his apartment in town and insists that Sheila be included as his partner in the show. Martin confesses his machinations to Sheila, who embraces him in relief and calls on her new husband in the guardhouse. Martin finds out and tries to dissuade her from this approach, later enlisting the help of his friend Steve Adams, who tries to woo Shelley. Martin gradually kills the team of mercenaries. Martin really wants to keep his single lifestyle, and can't see himself as the "marrying kind". Martin sends Sheila to town to bring Robert back before he's declared AWOL. Martin then experiences an epiphany, recognizing that his recent disillusionment with his work and his amends with Debi signify an opportunity to change his life for good. Martin's ever-suspicious wife, invited by Curtis, arrives and Sonya is forced to leave the show as well, which is canceled for want of a leading lady. Martin, concluding that it is futile to try to change his life, fires his psychiatrist over the phone, notifies Marcella that he is laying her off (but directs her to a brick of cash hidden in the office, set aside for her severance pay) and finally opens the dossier containing the details of the contract that brought him to Grosse Pointe. Martindale, having himself been at the charity ball, finds himself to be a chance spectator of the reunion. Martini and the studio soon learn of Wilbur and Alexander, a couple of down on their luck vaudevillians with a trained lion act. Marty agrees but says that his work is garbage anyway and that it means nothing to him now. Marty also said that the Sally was entertaining the thought of marrying Nick. Marty became depressed and drew grim drawings and compiled it into the "Book of Sad" and sent it to Sally. Marty brought some of Sally's stuff to her house. Marty finally admitted his feelings but Sally isn't ready to commit in a relationship. Marty got a call from a comic-book publisher, Renegade Komiks, and got an opportunity to pitch a comic storyline from the eyepatch-wearing editor Toto. Marty got drunk, talked to a girl who says Nick's a friendly guy and sees the girl dancing with Nick. Marty had an impression that Nick is a dickhead and literally sees him as a monster. Marty knocks on the door and sees Sally with a bruise on her mouth who explains that it was caused by an accident. Marty refuses to accept the explanation, knowing the real cause of his friend's bruise and urged Sally to run away from her abusive parents. Marty tried to charge at Nick but he was stopped by Sally who prevented him from being run over by a vehicle. Marty urged Sally to say what she would want to say and Sally revealed that she has a boyfriend much to Marty's shock. Marty was immediately accepted at the institution while Sally was put on the "waiting list" meaning that her admittance to the college isn't certain. Marty was reluctant to accept the ticket saying it wasn't his thing but Nick insists saying it was a gift. Marty would sometimes finds Sally with a bruise with Sally often shrugging it off claiming the bruises were from accidents. Marty's father confronted him with his problem and brought him to a place where men go when they are depressed which was later revealed to be a toy car racing venue. Marty's father encouraged him that it was not too late to disclose his feelings to Sally pointing out that if he did he would be the "first in line" if Sally and her boyfriend broke up. Mary James is subsequently captured by mrs Meers and Bun Foo, and Millie follows them to Chinatown, where the unconscious Jimmy has been hidden in a room in a fireworks factory where Miss Dorothy is sleeping. Mary McKinley (Patricia Neal in her film debut) is the girl he left behind. Mary Pepperree (Deanna Durbin) starts a new job as a telephone operator at the White House, where her father Timothy has been working as a guard for many years. Mary Tate and Craig begin a passionate and exciting relationship. Mary Thomas (Keke Palmer) is a teenage girl and competitive Double Dutch player, part of a team called the Joy Jumpers, who lives next door to Izzy; the two have a complicated relationship, always arguing when they see each other, but Mary's teammates and Karin know that they have crushes on each other. Mary Wilson, a born and bred Texan, moves to Los Angeles to open a high class bakery, and get away from her wacky family. Mary admits her feelings for him, and they kiss for the first time. Mary admits she has feelings for him too, but also tells Rip that they have to fix the mess they have caused in Grandview before they can start a relationship. Mary and Trudy angrily tell Mike they are leaving for Florida the next day because of the way he has manipulated Jim. Mary and Uncle Billy arrive, having rallied the townspeople, who donate more than enough to cover the missing $8,000 and for Potter's warrant to be torn up. Mary and the Joy Jumpers, meanwhile, are training for the regional championship, in order to make it on to the city finals. Mary asks David to escort her to the party, offering to introduce him to the President's secretary in exchange for the favor. Mary believes him and decides to pursue him. Mary confides that she once felt the same way about ballet, but eventually confessed to her mother that she hated it, and her mother easily accepted it. Mary dumps a cooler of water on his head, and the four run away, Rodney giving up the chase quickly but angrily. Mary fears that Steve has revealed his feelings for her but instead Fran reveals she doesn't know if she is in love with Steve anymore. Mary finally realizes she does not need Steve to be happy. Mary gets Harold to propose (with an assist from a passing mail carrier's whistle), and she accepts. Mary invites Rodrigo to the party and admits to him upon arrival at her aunt's house that this is where she actually lives. Mary is left wondering whether she should continue to plan Fran and Steve's wedding, while Steve is left wondering whether his chemistry with Mary is a sign that he shouldnt be marrying Fran. Mary is pleasantly surprised when her date turns out to be handsome and charming Steve Miller, a cameraman for the television news network CCN. Mary is quite happy with Chris' actions and that he finally stood up to his friend. Mary knows she should not go, but the two go up to Aunt Paula's (Billie Burke) country house in Phoenicia, New York. Mary manages to thank the man before fainting. Mary never married; when George says he is her husband, she screams for the police, causing George to flee and the local policeman to give chase. Mary quickly gets out of her wedding dress and projects strength instead of fainting. Mary returns home in a wheelchair sporting a neck brace. Mary returns to college, where she meets and flirts with rich instructor Rodrigo. Mary sees Rodrigo at the party with another woman who turns out to be his wife and learns that they are buying Casa Bonita. Mary sobers and Steve decides to stay with her for a while. Mary spots them leaving in Hogan's milk truck and assumes Sheila is being kidnapped. Mary still wants to marry him, money or no, but he refuses to let her share his impending disgrace. Mary then quits her job and steals the company's records, and mails the two former clients their records from Lacuna. Mary wants nothing to do with this, but Chris agrees to help out, lending Joe his wife. Mary writes a bold and angry editorial against Rip in the local newspaper, which is run by her family. Mary's expectations are low, as she tells her hamster. Mary's father Isaac disapproves of the romance and provides an excellent adversary for Christopher. Mary's obsession gets her fired when she creates a crossword titled "All About Steve". Mary's rescue plan works, but she lets Hartman take the credit. Mary, Fran and Steve visit another potential wedding venue. Mary, however, is not impressed and instead remains focused on her ambition to become a partner at the wedding company she works for. Mary, the Lacuna receptionist, is dating the other memory-erasing technician, Stan. Mary, who arrives on the scene, accidentally falls into the mine shaft as well while making a beeline for Steve. Mary, who has given up on true love, insists that life isn't a fairytale and marrying Massimo is the right thing to do. MaryAnn and Darrin are last seen on a bus saying goodbye to Aunt Sally, as they sadly wave to each other. Marylin and her lawyer, Freddy

Bender (Richard Jenkins), fail to reach an agreement with Miles and Rex. Marylin has tricked him, and now his considerable wealth is at risk. Marylin insists on the Massey prenup, which will make it absolutely impossible for her to claim any of her fiancée's assets in the event of a divorce, over both Howard and Miles's objections. Marylin then tells Miles that to get Donaly's help for supplying Doyle, she gave him an idea for a hit TV show, restoring his fortunes in the process: America's Funniest Divorce Videos, with Gus Petch as the host. Marylin wants revenge. Marylin's friend, serial divorcée Sarah Sorkin (Julia Duffy), warns Marilyn that Miles will be a dangerous opponent. Masha escapes her prison in a surfboard shack and finds Bryan, who is crazily driving a jeep stolen from Brick after he tried to kill Bryan. Masha is in shock, terrified with the thought that she killed Bryan too. Masha's father Vlatko (aka Vadik) (Ken Davitian) marries her to Bryan to get her a green card, under the condition that Bryan cannot touch her. Masha, heartbroken, continues her old life taking dance lessons. Masha, using the distraction, grabs Brick's gun and shoots him in the back: he falls off the cliff, taking Bryan with him. ment as a way to get back home. Matt (Adam Scott) who Jake thinks is the most boring guy in the world. Matt Cole (Frank Lovejoy), a photographer from Life Magazine who loves Agatha, believes her feeling for Merrill is simply an unresolved holdover from her girlhood and follows her to the school. Matt Stifler, the younger brother of Steve Stifler, is eager to enter the family business of making porn films so he can prove himself to his older brother. Matt Sullivan (Josh Hartnett) and his roommate, Ryan (Paulo Costanzo), are co-workers at a San Francisco dot-com company. Matt agrees and meets Jenny for a candlelit dinner at his apartment, under the pretense of wanting to resume their relationship. Matt and Barry are left holding their girlfriends' purses and clothes, and leave to have a beer together. Matt and Elyse later are attracted to each other and share a kiss while watching clouds in the sky. Matt and Kitty become a couple, but when Kitty learns about Mae's meddling and her plans to maneuver a commitment-averse Matt into proposing, she ends their friendship. Matt conspires with his nerdy roommate, Ernie, to film the other band members in a bid called 'Bandeez Gone Wild', using hidden cameras. Matt finds closure with Tom by finally speaking with him and asking him if he would pass his proposal up to one of his superiors. Matt finds difficulty in getting back into the dating game and finds himself constantly avoiding awkward run-ins with Tom. Matt finds out that Richard has decided to take a trip and is able to manipulate affairs so that Margaret will travel with him. Matt is initially disgruntled by the idea but soon agrees to it, interested in the notorious sexual behavior of band camp girls (citing Jim's marriage and sex life with Michelle as an example). Matt is obsessed with his ex-girlfriend, Nicole (Vinessa Shaw), and his obsession repeatedly causes him problems during attempted one-night stands. Matt is recovering from a devastating break up with his partner of six years, Tom, who is a rising comic book publisher. Matt is there with several of his rowdy teammates and instantly becomes attracted to the surfer. Matt later offers a deal of showing them his film 'Bandeez gone wild' in exchange of deleting his uniform photo. Matt meets Erica (Shannyn Sossamon), a cyber nanny, and they begin to date. Matt refuses and makes plans to leave the city. Matt says he cannot give the couple his blessing however; he fears that Joanna will be hurt by the prejudice that she and John will surely encounter. Matt's co-workers make many unsuccessful attempts to persuade him to have sex in order to win the pool, and as the days pass Matt's obsession with sex grows. Matt's golf buddy Monsignor Mike Ryan (Cecil Kellaway), a Catholic priest, stops by after Matt earlier cancelled on playing golf. Matt, wounded by what he thought was Jenna's betrayal of him, is getting married the next day. Matters are straightened up at home and she is sent back to school in disgrace. Max Herschel, the married, wealthy, vulgar, egotistical, middle-aged head of a corporate empire, is satisfied with the somewhat casual love/hate relationship he shares with his mistress and protegee, television producer "Bones" Burton, just as it is, but she wants a more serious commitment. Max Tracey is the head waiter at a London hotel. Max and Lola then fly to Paradise Island in The Bahamas. Max and Maria begin dating due to their shared passion in fishing, while her mother Francesca (Ann Morgan Guilbert) dates John's father (Burgess Meredith). Max asks about Nigel's art in the conference room, which Fanny has a copy of in her restaurant. Max becomes enamoured with the beautiful, feisty café owner Fanny, who is rumoured to have sworn off men. Max can't make it to dinner because his rehearsal runs out. Max concedes that his nemesis has won this time, and is simply happy to live out his life with Lola, watching sunsets. Max encourages Henry to become an actor in the theater's current production of The Cherry Orchard by Chekhov, to assist Max, "volunteering" to work in the theater, in getting access to the tunnel. Max entreats her for forgiveness and she relents. Max escapes and joins Leslie to rescue the others. Max finds his uncle's memoirs, which contain proof of Christie's heritage. Max gets separated in an attempt to hide his attentions to the maid from the father and ultimately finds his way back to the main house where he finds the maid on the father's lap. Max gets updates on office politics from his assistant Gemma, who warns him of the ambitious antics of other employees. Max has two toes amputated. Max invalidates the estate's sale with the farewell letter he gave to Christie, which he forged, along with real photos confirming Christie as Henry's daughter with a valid claim to the estate (as a child Max signed cheques for his uncle, and is able to replicate his handwriting and signature). Max is concerned that she might lay claim to the estate and brusquely interrogates her during dinner at the Duflot house. Max is forced to bunk with Stan, and they share their thoughts about each other's lives. Max is touched by the apology, and reveals that he is actually Michelle, also a zerophiliac. Max leaves, but on the day of Donna's abortion, he arrives at her home with flowers and asks if he can accompany her to her procedure. Max marries Maria, and on the way to their honeymoon, discover Max's one-eyed bulldog, Lucky, in the car with them. Max must have surgery. Max pronounces Westley to be merely "mostly dead", and returns him to life (out of a desire to get back at Humperdinck), though Westley remains partially paralyzed and weak. Max reacts with outrage, and the father reveals the deception. Max survives and tells Lola to get the diamond. Max tells him: "You were the last person I thought would ever come through for me". Max tracks Donna down at the bookstore where she works and they have the first of several awkward conversations. Max tries to defend his action by explaining it as art. Max's uncle suggests the eldest daughter as a good match, but she fears that Max will be more interested in her younger sister. Max, however, is not a man to accept defeat in any of his endeavors, and he retaliates with a vengeance. Maxl gives him the money. Megan goes to Craig's house, and leaves him a note on a box of wine asking him to check one of two boxes labeled 'yes' or 'no' to the question 'Can we try again. Megan goes to the meeting and afterwards asks Annika if, in return, she can stay at her house. Megan is unemployed and single, and one day she joins a dating website. Megan is visibly pregnant again. Megan lies that there was a gap between her lease expiring and her moving to a new apartment. Megan receives a call from Annika asking her to pretend to be her absentee mother at a guidance counsellor's meeting. Megan reveals that she is still engaged after Annika finds the engagement ring in Megan's purse and that Craig has no idea. Megan then explains the situation to him in six monosyllables: "Grace has Bob's dead wife's heart. Megan then performs a cheer for Graham and tells her that she loves her, finally winning Graham over. Megan's father picks her up from the police station. Megan's husband (Jim Belushi) becomes infuriated as he has misunderstood the situation and thinks Bob is married. Megan, believing that their relationship is stifling her, breaks up with him, unfriends all of her high school best friends and proceeds to go to Annika's prom, where she tells Annika to be honest and pursue Junior, a friend whom she is in love with. Mercedes drinks at home after school because she is unhappily married to Dean (Bryan Cranston), a former professor turned writer turned blogger. Mercedes finds out that Talia and Larry are just friends. Mercedes pulls up in a white Volkswagen Golf Cabriolet, while Les says "I already have a Mercedes". Mercedes runs into Talia, who is telling Frances, her English teacher (Pam Grier), that she will be dropping out of college to start a thrift store. Mercedes then passes out. Mercedes walks to her office and sees a note from Larry on the door, which is an invitation for dinner, with the address to his new apartment. Mercedes, meanwhile, warns Larry not to disclose the events of the previous night, and remains under the false impression that he is romantically involved with the much-younger Talia. Meredith and Ben are a couple, as are Everett and Julie and Amy and Brad. Meredith breaks down in front of the family. Meredith defends her stepbrother's behavior, explaining that it stems from the fact their father was a violent man who was physically abusive to them and Randall is overly protective of Meredith as a result. Meredith desperately tries to fit in, but her strained attempt to play charades and a clumsy effort to engage the family in a dinner table discussion about nature versus nurture and sexual orientation prove to be disastrous and their father, Kelly Stone (Craig Nelson), the most understanding of the family, blows up at her. Meredith's partner Randall is the star pupil of the class but is an obnoxious bully who takes an instant dislike to Frank and tries to intimidate him. Meredith, feeling very much an outsider during the Christmas holidays with Everett's family, opts to stay at the local inn instead of with the family and asks her sister Julie (Claire Danes) to join her for support. Merle is given a medal anyway and wins her heart. Merlin & Son's department store on the Mia and Alice have just moved into a trendy apartment but are in desperate need of a housemate. Mia calls Harper to speak to Lance, inspiring him to ultimately break the all-time rushing record in a game-winning performance. Mia challenges Lance to acknowledge the truth. Mia eventually chooses Andrew Jacoby (Callum Blue), Duke of Kenilworth and days later they are engaged. Mia later decides to convert one of the royal palaces into a temporary children's center. Mia proposes the law on royal marriages be abolished, and the Parliament unanimously gives its assent. Mia reenters the church, and after pointing out how her grandmother has ruled Genovia while unmarried for a number of years, she tells the members of parliament in the audience to consider the significant women in their lives (such as their wives, sisters, daughters and nieces) and questions if they would have them do what they're trying to force her to do (marrying people they don't love). Mia reveals to Harper that she was diagnosed with cancer more than a year ago and is dying. Mia then takes off her wig, forcing Lance to also acknowledge the severity of her condition. Mia thinks Nicholas set her up, while he insists he had no idea. Mia tries to calm Lance down to no avail. Mia's best friend Lilly Moscovitz (Heather Matarazzo) surprises her by visiting. Mia's girlfriend Danni (Radha Mitchell) is keen to move in, but Mia fears commitment. Mibs insists on driving Johnny to Mexico, but they are caught. for a living. Michael is upset, thinks that she declined his offer for Charlie and is ready to go. Michael phones Sarah and she goes to stay with him, sharing her Christmas scarf. Michael plays his character as a feisty, feminist administrator, which surprises the other actors and crew who expected Emily to be (as written) another swooning female in the plot. Michael ponders over his continuing charade he puts on for Stephanie ("Charades"). Michael retorts that he will not let this happen, but barely is their engagement party over before he is unwittingly involved in a money laundering scam, and soon the FBI takes an interest in him. Michael reveals that he wants her to go with him and another woman to Utah (where polygamy is legal) so they can marry and support him while he writes. Michael rushes to the dockyard after a brief scuffle with Steve, screaming his love for Toni. Michael starts singing their song as he grabs Julianne and holds her while they dance one last time. Michael suggests they invite Tom to spend time at their country estate, where he can become better acquainted with their son Roger (Tom Sturridge). Michael takes Julie to her hotel room and stays with her when she pretends to be sick after her night outside. Michael takes the job as a way to raise $8,000 to produce a play, written by his roommate Jeff Slater (Bill Murray) and to star Sandy, titled Return to Love Canal. Michael tells Judy he needs time alone, then says he can't help still having feelings for Sally. Michael tracks her to her hometown, and his whistling is immediately noticed outside her house. Michael tries to fend off Renee's advances by steering Fassbender her way, but Fassbender's wife Anna is determined to keep him to herself. Michael walks in on this and has become fed up with his mother and decides to show tough love and tells his mother that she must apologize to Candace, but she refuses. Michael writes Deborah Ann an anonymous love letter in return, and asks Toni to give it to her. Michael's overbearing mother Loretta (Jenifer Lewis) doesn't approve of his engagement with Candace, still thinking no woman is good enough for her son. Michael's plan fails, and when

Vito realises that his execution is a set-up, he orders Vinnie to kill Michael. Michael, however, is suspicious over Elvira's supposed willingness to go on the trip alone, and so hires private detective Peter Virgil (Jack Carson) to see if she is sneaking around behind his back. Michael, who says he has never been with another woman, keeps noticing Lina Broussard (Valerie Quennessen), a French archaeologist on temporary assignment at the nearby Akrotiri excavation. Michelle has doubts regarding that Jim's paternal grandmother dislikes Michelle for not being Jewish, and about Stifler's invite to the wedding. Michelle is furious but, when he saves John Thomas from a potentially dangerous situation, she forgives Harley and decides he may be the better choice for a father after all. Michelle misinterprets when Jim stalls the question. Michelle's parents, who were initially skeptical of Jim, agree to have a preliminary dinner with him. Milly consigns the brothers to the barn "with the rest of the livestock" while the women live in the house. Milly eventually tells her children that she will die and must go into hospice care. Milly finds herself growing increasingly distant from Kit after the surgery. Milly gives birth to a daughter, Hannah. Milly goes through with the double mastectomy but Jess finds herself unable to tell Milly she is pregnant as she feels as though her good news would cause Milly grief. Milly is furious with Adam, as are the six kidnapped women. Milly teaches Adam's rowdy, ill-behaved younger brothers manners and social mores. Milly tracks down Jess and the women reconcile. Milly, busy with her career and her young family, learns that she has breast cancer after a long-delayed checkup. Milo offers Mad Dog a gift in return: for one week, he will have the "personal services" of Glory (Thurman), a young woman who works as a bartender at Milo's club. Milo says that Mad Dog has to pay $40,000 to give Glory her freedom, and sends one of his thugs to enforce the threat. Milt decides to return to the sea while Snug takes a job as a hired hand with a neighboring farmer, Robert "Roarer" McGill (Tom Tully), with whose daughter, Rad (June Haver), he is in love, although the daughter gets her kicks out of keeping him guessing about her true feelings. Mima picks Ace. Mimi Bennett lives with her wealthy aunt Kate on the South Pacific isle of Tahiti. Mimi Glossop (Ginger Rogers) arrives in England to seek a divorce from her geologist husband Cyril, whom she has not seen for several years. Mimi and her father (George Barbier) are in the audience on opening night and they feel insulted. Mimi is crushed when she finds out that Alan is marrying heiress Elizabeth Kent, but swallows her pride to serve as the bridesmaid. Mimi takes pity on him and a romance blooms. Minelli issues a verbal threat to Kevin (thinking he is talking to Blankman), telling him he will kill Kimberly if Blankman does not show up. Mingling, she meets the host, Conrad Nelson (Adolphe Menjou), a philandering meat magnate, who requests that Louise sing a song. Minnie and Daisy are captured in a theater and locked in a chest by the Beagle Boys and the smallest one poses as Minnie, announcing to the public that she is handing the crown over to a gleeful Pete and has a false advertisement that says "King Pete the Magnificent". Minnie and Monroe take acid together and Monroe has a bad trip, convinced they are being watched. Minnie and her younger sister Gretel ask Pascal for money, and though he is irritated, he sends the family a check. Minnie finds a letter from Aline encouraging her to draw more comics. Minnie reflects on her emotional growth and realizes that the only way to find happiness is by loving herself, not by depending on another person's affection. Minnie runs away from home in disgust and begins seeing a risk-taking lesbian, Tabatha. Minnie says she will know that he is "the one" when he makes her laugh. Minnie sleeps twice with her schoolmate Ricky, but he finds her sexual enthusiasm intimidating. Minnie then takes a walk in the palace garden and barely escapes with her life when the Beagle Boys attempt to drop a safe on her. Minnie's stepfather, Pascal, calls from New York City and invites Minnie to live with him, but she declines. Minnie, Kimmie, and Monroe have a threesome. Minutes later, Sharpay meets Broadway star Amber Lee Adams (Cameron Goodman), star of the show, who Sharpay admires. Minutes later, she starts laughing upon seeing the balloon read "I'm sorry, I'm an asshole" and calls Alec. Minutes later, the press box is ablaze with them trapped inside. Miranda Bute, nearly eighteen years old, is another surprise guest. Miranda Presley is an aspiring singer/songwriter from New York City who loves country music and decides to take her chances in Nashville, Tennessee, where she hopes to become a star. Miranda confesses to Ralph her role in the scandal. Miranda flags down a passing car, which turns out to be driven by Denys. Miranda pursues James, and they end up getting married, but they soon realize marriage takes work. Miranda quits her job after the misogynistic new managing partner disrespects her once too often. Miranda reflects on the events of the previous film, when her husband, Steve, told her about his affair. Miranda returns and sings a new song, before tentatively reuniting with James. Miranda returns the money to Graves, but Graves already has pictures of them. Miri corrects him, clarifying that she did not mind that Stacey merely made the offer to sleep with him. Miriam has eyes for Buzzy, who seems to have eyes for everyone. Miriam is furious with Hugh but he doesn't know why. Miriam is pleased with this explanation and they reconcile. Miriam wants to separate because he's addicted to gambling - although he often wins. Mirza is made to leave the room. Mirza is met by Shevket Ben Ali (Ian Keith); Mirza informs Phelps that her father has arranged for her to marry Shevket. Mishaps, including a polar bear in Fate's car, compel all four racers to warm themselves in Leslie's car. Miss Amelia Dedham (Elizabeth Allen) is a "proper" young lady "of means" from Boston, who has become the chairman of the board of the Dedham Shipping Company. Miss Bingley clearly does not want to continue the friendship and Jane is upset though very composed. Miss Jane Bennet also attracts the attention of Mr Bingley's sister Caroline, who invites her to visit. Miss Lily and Bronco Billy spend the night together. Miss MacCracken arrives and informs Isolde and Augie that a baby has just been born and they have been moved to the top of the agency's list. Miss Thing and Bernard's father accidentally get trapped in a timelocked vault full of rare erotica, which horrifies her and causes her to rush out in disarray when the vault opens, giving the impression that Bernard's father made a pass at her. Miss Thing and her new boyfriend, police officer Francis Graf (Dolph Sweet), who also lives in her boarding house, also arrive to confront Bernard's father about what happened in the vault. Miss Thing evicts Bernard, so he moves in with Barbara, although he still can't perform with her and she's starting to treat him badly. Miss Thing goes to the library to tell Bernard's father that Bernard was out all night and a girl called him every 15 minutes. Miss Thing inherited the building on the condition that her late brother's aggressive pet rooster be allowed to occupy the fifth floor, which Bernard must pass to get to his room. Miss Thing reassures Bernard's mother that the rooster only attacks girls, especially young pretty girls, to which Bernard's mother responds that her son isn't interested in girls yet, but arranges that Miss Thing will spy on Bernard and report any "female" activity. Missy's parents storm out, and Drew informs her that their relationship is over. Mistakenly assuming she is now the owner of a small empire, she crosses the Atlantic Ocean by ship. Mistakenly believing the millionaire Henry is impoverished and the sole support of his widowed mother, Toni promises to help him financially, but Howard convinces the family Henry is a fraud. Mistakenly thinking he has killed the man, Slick flees, but is caught and jailed. Mistaking her for the target of the bet, Peter becomes excited, but Jimmy fervently corrects him. Misty shows up at Megan's door with the white dress Megan bought and a few other things left over from the car crash. Misunderstanding, he leads her to a field where George stands. Mitch also meets Jordan, a hyperkinetic female student, "Ick" Ikagami, a brilliant and affable foil to Chris's antics, and the mysterious Lazlo Hollyfeld, a middle-aged man who seems to be living in Mitch's closet. Mitch is accosted by Sherry Nugel, a beautiful older woman who seeks amorous encounters with the top ten geniuses in the country. Mitch must compete against him, bad back and all. Mitch punches Dan in the face, and Marie hurries out. The plot resolves with Dan and his daughters going to New York City, where they finally find Marie at her gym. Mitch puts her on a train but also offers Janet a job as his own secretary. Mitch turns her down, realizing he's in love with Jordan, and the two become a couple. Mitchell in turn offers to sell the store to Joe, admitting that Joe has always loved the place while he himself has always hated it. Mitchell starts to pen a series of articles in Doe's name, elaborating on the original letter's ideas of society's disregard for people in need. Mitchell, who has fallen in love with Willoughby, desperately tries to talk him out of jumping (saying another John Doe has already died for the sake of humanity), and Hanson and his neighbors tell him of their plan to restart their John Doe club. Mitzi relays this to Dorothy, who refuses to believe it. Mix-ups ensue. Mollie and James ask where Mikey and Julie are. Mollie and James tell Mikey that he's got to be potty trained. Mollie and her friend Rona happen to catch Albert fooling around with his interior decorator Melissa and he admits he is planning on living with her after his divorce is finalized. Mollie discovers she's pregnant again and James is working diligently. Mollie exclaims that she hasn't felt that happy about Mikey.

since he was born. Mollie is an accountant living in New York City who has an affair with Albert, a womanizing executive who is married with two children, and becomes pregnant. Mollie leaves upset, and immediately goes into labor. Mollie realizes that she needs James to help her. Mollie takes Mikey to Albert's office to meet him, but when Albert claims he doesn't want the responsibility of being a father, Mollie realizes he hasn't changed and she and Mikey ruin several pieces of his furniture before storming out and putting Albert out of their lives for good. Mollified, Carraway leaves. Mollified, Jeff offers to take her out to dinner to celebrate. Molly (Kate Hudson) and Carl (Matt Dillon) are preparing for their wedding day in Hawaii, until Carl's friend Neil (Seth Rogen) interrupts to say that Randolph Dupree (Owen Wilson) got lost. Molly Mahoney is going home for her mother's wedding, and is bringing her boyfriend to meet her family. Molly Thatcher (Lee Remick) is a stockbroker languishing in a company run by sexist Bullard Bear (Jim Backus). Molly agrees to help Roy rebuild his self-confidence in exchange for the golf lessons. Molly and Henry have trouble figuring out Universal Widgets' reason for existence; its only factory burned down around the time of the Civil War. Molly further suggests that Roy go back to the qualifying school and get on the Tour. Molly goes to a rodeo, where a bucking bronco tosses rider Duke Hudkins right into her lap. Molly grows cool to Kirk after this, believing he fled to avoid meeting her parents. Molly informs Lady Devenish that she has always longed to own her own taxi and plans to use the money to start up in the business. Molly is upset that Kirk is so insecure that he felt he could only be with her if something was wrong with her. Molly learns of Jack's affair after finding a wrapped condom in his pants as she is cleaning up after him one day. Molly meets Henry Tyroon (James Garner), an aggressive wheeler dealer who dresses, talks, and acts like a stereotypical Texas millionaire. Molly responds by describing him as one she could spend the rest of her life with. Molly sets up Dupree with a woman at her work, a primary school, who is a Mormon librarian. Molly then invites herself to Kirk's family lunch, where she charms his family and even Ron after highly intimidating the men of the house with her looks. Molly's attentions to Kirk stir jealousy in Marnie, who feels upstaged by Molly's attractiveness, and takes a sudden interest in Kirk again. Molly, surprised, punches him. Molly, who gained several clients at the tournament, prepares for a career of helping players with the mental portion of the game. Moments after a justice of the peace pronounces the redhead Steve and Caroline man and wife, Maria rushes in, claiming that Steve is her husband and the father of her three redhead children, which she has paraded in at that moment. Moments after they leave, Lee gets jumped on by Gwen's dog. Moments later, the car rolls down the hill and onto a pier, despite Joel's futile attempt to stop it. Moments later, while exploring the halls, Martin is attacked by LaPoubelle, whom he kills in self-defense. Mona is in love with Gary and is furious when she hears about Gary's date with Mimi. Money is tight in the Hopper household, but Eddie, much to the distress of his wife, Lola, decides that it is important to throw a lavish wedding to impress the well-off family of the man Betsy is to marry. Monica is bothered by Tina's meddling, but Whittier momentarily lets her cheerleading ambition get the better of her, and betrays Derek. Monica, in turn, is pursued by the chemist, Austin Lowe. Monique, who is engaged to powerful Count Alfredo Donstelli (Erik Rhodes), makes a public accusation against Philippe, and the priggish head of the Purity League (Eily Malyon) exploits the incident until it becomes a national scandal, with Philippe dubbed "The Kissing Monster". Monroe begins making plans for them to be together when she is 18 and Minnie leaves him. Montana and David seek to further unnerve Celeste by bringing back Jeffrey Anderson (Kevin Kline), an actor who Celeste arranged to be fired from The Sun Also Sets decades before, after his romantic relationship with Celeste went sour. Montana, desperate to stop them, reiterates that she is pregnant with Jeffrey's child, but she is publicly ruined by Rose who, with the help of vengeful Ariel Maloney (Teri Hatcher), who wanted Jeffrey for herself, reveals the secret from a high school yearbook that Montana is actually a transsexual named Milton Moorehead. Months after his stint in the hospital, Axler's agent, Jerry Oppenheim, visits him at his upstate New York home to tell him about an offer to play James Tyrone in Long Day's Journey into Night. Months go by and Mimi has become a happy woman, although she has not forgot about Alan. Months later, Calvin reluctantly takes Ruby to meet his free-spirited mother Gertrude (Annette Bening) and her boyfriend Mort (Antonio Banderas). Months later, Louise calls Pegeen's parents in Lansing, Michigan, to tell them that their daughter is now sleeping with Axler. Months later, Phillip learns from another inmate that Steven is dying of AIDS. Months later, Shep returns and discovers Gillian has lost her magic powers because of her love for him. Months later, the Tramp is released. Monty James is a mechanic with three daughters: 5- year old China, 7 - year old Lauryn and 12 - year old Sierra, who dreams of owning his own shop. Monty accepts help from Maya, an employment agency worker, who recommends he works as a driver for Julia Rossmore, an attorney in Atlanta. Monty and Julia kiss, and the neighbors celebrate Monty's success. Monty drives away and crashes into Jennifer and Joe's car, after which he physically assaults Joe and a crowd gathers. Monty is willing but Julia is too drunk and vomits in the bathroom. Monty later goes to Julia for help, which she does during the court case. Monty overhears Julias friend and is hurt. Monty returns to his day job as a mechanic and finds the owner Willie has been injured in a robbery. Monty tells Julia that he loves her. Moran and Oxford Charlie are arrested. Morgan boards the Reaper and blows out the ship's bottom to get to the gold. Morgan directs hers toward a coral reef. Morgan figures out that the words on the map, when read backwards, spell out half the coordinates to the island. Morgan kills Dawg with a cannon and saves Shaw, forced to abandon the treasure to escape the sinking ship. Morgan suggests that he enlist the help of Leslie, since she did not approve of his previous gorgeous physical therapist, so Leslie moves into their home. Morley (Lyle Bettger) was called in to identify the body at the morgue after the tragic train accident, and he figures out through a series of events that Helen is hiding and now married into money. Morton has invented a helicopter that is easy to fly and gotten financial backing from Nuboult (Paul Harvey). Morton persuades Seattle tycoon Floyd Hendrickson (Ray Collins) to come to a demonstration at the Rose Bowl, while hiring a private detective to search for Maisie. Morton suspects Maisie is an industrial spy when he learns of her deception, but she convinces him she was merely trying to avoid romantic trouble. Most likely to make the Sixers her new team, Scott quickly stops her when he realizes that he is in love with her. Most of the plot involves their numerous attempts to have sex, which are usually successful for Rick and David, but rarely for Gary. Mother Nature reminds her that, in growing older, she is making way for a girl like Izzie to replace her. Mother is upset because she is unable to get customers into her drug store. Motorcycle policemen stop them on the road, and Lucy, plotting to spend more time with Jerry, wrecks the car. Moved by Silent Bob's story, Holden devises a plan to fix both his relationship with Alyssa and his estranged friendship with Banky. Moved by her memory, they decide to settle in Verona's old family home. Moved by his actions, Cadence agrees to have sex with him in a supply closet before the ceremony, but Stifler's presence is delayed by a brief thank-you meeting Jim calls among his groomsmen, citing how he is grateful to have friends like them to back him up. Moved by his declaration, Maggie tells him she did not use her Hall Pass either, and they reconcile and have sex for the first time in months. Mr Collins, a cousin of Mr Bennet and heir to the Longbourn estate, visits the Bennet family. Mr Crowley takes the boy home, where Carl is on the phone to the police; reporting him missing. Mr Darcy accuses her family of wanting propriety and suggests he has been kinder to Bingley than himself. Mr Darcy and his cousin, Colonel FitzWilliam, visit Lady Catherine. Mr Darcy, however, has fallen in love with Elizabeth and proposes to her. Mr Emerson died during the course of the war, shortly after having an argument with the police about Lucy continuing to play Beethoven (a German composer) on the piano during the war. Mr Kholi, a rich, crass, clumsy, and ostentatious Americanized relative, proposes to Lalita. Mr. Mrs Bennet states loudly that she expects Jane and Bingley to become engaged and each member of the family exposes the whole to ridicule. Mrs Gardiner informs Elizabeth that it is Mr Darcy who has made the match and hints that he may have a motive for doing so. Mrs. Ms. Much like Bobby's car race, the race ends with Lenny and Bobby flying over the edge of a cliff, and the car exploding in a fiery wreck. Much of the discord is triggered by the news that Sarah's TV show has been canceled and that Aldous is about to embark on a world tour with his group, Infant Sorrow, for 18 months. Much of the film is presented as flashbacks. Much of the film subsequently takes place in Joel's mind, during this memory erasure procedure. Much of the humor comes from how awkward each boy is at romance and how naive they are about sex. Much of the story is shown in flashback as Peabody tells his skeptical doctor the source of his malaise. Much to her mother Lillian and her best friend Amy's disgust. Much to the couple's surprise, the police know that Johnny won the money; instead, they arrest Mibs, as the auditors tracked the $75,000 to her. Much to the dismay of Kelton, she agrees to go on a date with 'Harold'. Much to the frustration of Dixon, who is being considered for promotion to director of the US Customs branch, Viktor chooses not to break out of the terminal but wait patiently until he can legally enter the United States. Muffin says that she knows about Ellie and Barry, and tells them that she is bisexual, implying that she is interested in a sexual affair with both Bebe and Ellie. Roberts (Jerry Van Dyke) and plain-jane Amanda North (Zeme North) try to seduce each other. Murdoch Glourie (also played by Donat) haunts the castle after dying a cowards death in the 18th century. Muriel agrees to marry David for $10,000 hoping to pay her father off. Muriel doesn't notice her mother at the back of the church and just walks past. Muriel had asked Rhonda to be a bridesmaid but Rhonda turned her down. Muriel immediately leaves the house and moves to Sydney where she shares a flat with Rhonda and changes her name to 'Mariel'. Muriel realizes that she can move beyond her family-of-origin issues, that her actions have consequences and that her choices matter. Muriel then co-opts Rhonda's health crisis as the basis of a deception to obtain a free photo shoot from a bridal shop. Muriel visits Rhonda at her mother's house and offers to take her back Sydney. Muriel's father is accompanied by his mistress and Muriel's mother arrives late to the wedding, missing the actual ceremony. Murphy arrests Pander for speeding and calls immigration. Murphy intervenes, and the police sergeant (Sidney Toler) makes calls to arrange a marriage license and to hire a minister (Donald Meek). Murphy says he only needs $2 and maybe his naturalization papers. Murray is kidnapped by a group of Hassids, taken to a Rabbinic Court, and interrogated. Murray lives with Othella (Tonya Pinkins) and her children, one of whom gets head lice. Murray takes the boy to Avigal, the attractive widow of a Hassidic rabbi, for treatment. Murray tells her Fioravante is a massage healer who can help her and takes her to see him. Murray, whose used bookstore has failed, convinces his friend and former employee Fioravante (John Turturro) to take the gig, as both are short of money. Mutual suspicions result in divorce. NASA decides to replace him instead of delaying the mission. NASA is training for the first manned mission to Mars by the spacecraft Aries. Nadia (Shannon Elizabeth) is coming to visit Jim in August. Nadia also realizes this and tells him, "Go, get your band geek, and I will find mine". Nadia informs John that her real name is Sophia. Nadia, Yuri, and Alexei are criminals, and Alexei is actually Nadia's boyfriend. Naive, Jim is stunned when he finds out that O'Connor is doing all this just to get Glory to sign with Kelsey and that the marriage is just a publicity stunt. Nan is so fond of her brother now that her feelings can't be real. Nana tells the story of her young life when she was sent to a ghetto and then a concentration camp. Nancy (Hayley Mills), the dramatic and kind-hearted eldest, remembers a large yellow house that the Careys had admired when they visited the small town of Beulah, Maine, and makes an inquiry about it. Nancy (Union) is a divorced mother, who is too busy taking care of her three children to take care of herself. Nancy Lee, the mayor's daughter, and Hank have come to California, and Hank tells Ben he took his own advice to "do what a man's gotta do". Nancy accepts the role, though she is unaware that Ricardo has already promised it to her mother. Nancy and David decide marriage isn't necessary. Nancy and Julia promise to redesign the dress as they give her pointers on how to act around boys ("Femininity"). Nancy conceals her identity and begins to observe Eve's romantic entanglements even as she counsels Eve through her radio show. Nancy does not know that Paul is trying to help her and mistakes his paternal concern for a marriage proposal. Nancy laughs, but tells him she doesn't believe he's crazy. Nancy presents the picture Osh had produced: unfortunately, it is a frighteningly ugly woman and Tom feels insulted and angry at Osh. Nancy's post-coital euphoria overcomes her normal intellectual approach, and she encourages Eve to give in to, rather than resist, her feelings. Nancy, the 19-year-old daughter of Frank and Elaine Benson (Bob Hope and Jane Wyman), wants to marry David (Tim Matheson), the 20-year-old son of Oliver Poe (Jackie Gleason). Naomi admits that although her life is better, she still misses her best friend and reaches out to him. Naomi and Ely have a "No

Kiss List" where every guy on the list is forbidden to them both. Naomi and Ely have been best friends and neighbours in the same apartment building for years. Naomi arrives and Ely asks Bruce to hide in the closet while he hastens her out. Naomi realizes that her dream to be with Ely will never come true. Naomi remembers that Bruce 2 chews sugar free gum and Ely doesn't. Naomi says that they both "embrace the hatred" and that's what marriage is about. Narration begins, mirroring the narration done by Eliot in the beginning of the film, with Dan revealing himself to be a Baxter as well, describing his lament at losing the girl (Cecil) to the leading man (Eliot). Nasser sees Tania at the train platform while she is running away, and he shouts to her but she disappears. Nasser visits Papa, and the two discuss their respective failures, agreeing between them that only Omar's future matters now. Nasser visits the laundrette with his mistress, Rachel. Nat and Josh have a conversation about his suggestion of Chloe dating Guy. Nat appears behind Josh, who awkwardly assumed he is the one she wants to speak to, but it turns out she was there for Guy. Nat becomes annoyed when Josh, knowing she would be late, admitted that he deliberately told her the wrong time, causing her to turn up early. Nat becomes more frustrated with Josh's clumsy and patronising attempt to teach her how to play properly, as well as with her growing jealousy towards Chloe, who can play well. Nat brings out the same expensive lingerie for the special occasion, and struggles to do it up because of two broken hooks, remembering the circumstances in which they were broken - her with Guy. Nat comments that she's not the marrying type, still unable to tell Guy she's married. Nat contemplates phoning Guy, but then decides to go to the restaurant, where her friends and family are there waiting to surprise the couple. Nat ends up kissing Guy and Chloe shares a kiss with Josh. Nat tries to discourage Josh from accompanying her to a work party, but he is determined, irritating her. Nat's sister Naomi has issues with her own husband's annoying habits. Natalie (Martine McCutcheon)

Pat is reluctant, and Tiffany, Dolores, and Patrizio conspire to persuade Pat to dance in the competition by telling him that Nikki will be there; it is revealed that his parents have secretly supported Tiffany's attempts to get along with him. Pat leaves Nikki behind after a short conversation, and chases Tiffany. Pat notices that the letter from Nikki also refers to "reading the signs" and realizes that Tiffany wrote it. Pat plans to break his engagement to Susan, but becomes depressed when she breaks up with him. Pat then decides to end the relationship for good for Leslie, an auto mechanic. Pat's therapist, dr Patel (Anupam Kher), does his best to convince him to keep taking his medication, as a repeat of his violent outbursts might send him back to the clinic. Patch starts rehearsals up again using his own money, and when Janie returns and finds out that Tod has deceived her and manipulated things behind the scenes, she dumps him and joins up with her new sweetheart, Patch, to put on the show, which is a smash hit. Patricia and Gavin have decided to split everything down the middle in the settlement, but Gavin reveals that Patricia has not offered up the account containing her $850,000 book revenue. Patricia changes the locks and catches Gavin, Terry, and Marcus moving Gavin's things out, then learns Gavin has taken all their money, including her book money; enraged, Patricia trashes the house with his golf clubs. Patricia does not regain consciousness for several days. Patricia finds the extra bag filled with money in the luggage room and Cici gets a map to the festival. Patricia gets the chief to marry them. Patricia has moved into her own apartment with her dog Fifi and has gotten a job at an art gallery. Patricia informs the sheikh that because of opposition to removing salmon from British rivers they will need to use farmed salmon. Patricia is knocked unconscious and flung overboard. Patricia knocks Victor out with a lamp and Cici calls Fala in Miami for answers about the car but doesn't get any. Patricia refuses to give Gavin any of her book money, but as she leaves, Gavin advises Dianne to tell Patricia to "prepare for a fight", as he intends to get half of that account as well. Patricia tries to stop him, declaring her love for him. Patrick Sullivan (Jeffrey Dean Morgan) is looking forward to a life with Sophia (Justina Machado), until she calls into the show by famed love expert and radio host dr Emma Lloyd (Uma Thurman). Patrick accompanies her to the tasting, where Frau Greta Bollenbecker (Isabella Rossellini) assumes he is Emma's fiancé, Richard. Patrick agrees to the deal, but Kat rebuffs his first few advances. Patrick and Emma continue their argument in an elevator. Patrick attends to her, and Kat starts to open up, expressing her interest in starting a band. Patrick decides to throw out everything related to Emma or Sophia, but instead reads Emma's book, "Real Love". Patrick initially refuses, but relents when Joey offers him more money. Patrick invites them all to Ajay's Upanayana ceremony. Patrick is so upset that when he hears that Emma is about to be married herself, he allows his young neighbour, Ajay, to hack into public records and create a fake marriage certificate between himself and Emma. Patrick still has the annulment papers, so he comes to the book launch. Patrick surprises her with a guitar bought with the money that Joey paid him, and confesses that he has fallen for her. Patrick takes Jenny to what seems to her to be a fashionable, upmarket Italian restaurant but which Amis makes clear is a classless provincial pseudo-Italianate place. Patrick then confesses that he had initially wanted to teach her a lesson about love but then fell for her. Patrick's morals are spotlighted at this point by his going to bed with a girl who, after Jenny's no-show, happens to knock on his door, a girl who is not only still a schoolgirl but is also his headmaster's daughter. Patrick, after ensuring the absence of Graham, waits for her to come to his flat but she doesn't come. Patrick, one of the Lacuna technicians performing the erasure, uses Joel's memories and mannerisms to seduce Clementine. Patrizio hopes to open his own restaurant and has resorted to illegal bookmaking. Patrizio opens a restaurant with the money he has won, Pat and Tiffany become a couple, and both of them are no longer wearing their wedding rings. Patti Petalson (Selma Blair) is a promising writer, but her marriage and conventional job keep her from her dream. Patty, for her part, believes Molly had only chosen Kirk because he was a "safe" choice after being hurt by her last boyfriend, Air Force pilot Cam (Geoff Stults), who assumes Kirk is a waiter and attempts to order drinks from Kirk when they first meet, and then believing Kirk to be a homosexual friend of Molly's. Paul Chadwick (Hudson) is a wealthy American oilman who is in a Parisian court, where he is up against the opposing lawyer Michel Boullard (Charles Boyer). Paul Manning discovers one day that his dear friend and neighbor Ed Stander has been cheating on his wife. Paul accepts the situation and even arranges a meeting with Emilio to make him realize that he has made a mistake with Susie. Paul accidentally sprays himself in the face, alerting Vincent who then holds Paul at gun-point. Paul and Jerry run into each other and she discovers he still loves her and is willing to leave Dorothy to be with her. Paul and Meryl are relocated to the small town of Ray, Wyoming and placed temporarily under the protection of husband and wife/sheriff and deputy, Clay and Emma Wheeler (Sam Elliot and Mary Steenburgen). Paul and Meryl go on a "date" in town and begin to reconcile, but then Paul is hurt when he learns that Meryl had a one-night stand with one of their acquaintances during their separation. Paul apologizes for having hurt his French pride and offers a favor in return. Paul arranges for Gary to meet her, but this proves disappointing, as she fails to live up to the expectations that Gary has built up in his dreams of her. Paul arrives only moments later to find Martin, who coerces him into helping dispose of LaPoubelle's body in the school furnace. Paul begins his "treatment" of Larry and lets others in on the plan. Paul contradicts a tour guide at the Musée Rodin, and insists that his knowledge of Rodin's relationships is more accurate than that of the guide. Paul decides to treat him with a form of shock therapy to "scare him to death" in much the same way someone might try to startle someone out of hiccups. Paul eventually tries to clear things up, but Adams thinks he is just joking. Paul gets close to cheating on his wife Ruth, but he never quite goes through with it. Paul is a decent but plain man with somewhat nerdy tastes who does not need to work for a living, instead indulging in his hobbies of astronomy, beer brewing and cycling. Paul is perplexed by her behavior, and still thinks that Nancy is pregnant and troubled. Paul is speechless over the situation but his need for money persuades him to be a party to the deception, given that it will only be necessary to do this for a few hours. Paul is still upset with her for abandoning him to marry another royal, who has since died. Paul is taken in at first, but then sees that it is only raining on one side of the house. Paul returns, having received a letter from her, apologizing for her behaviour and asking him to come see her before he leaves for Paris. Paul reveals that he has been seeing other people, thinking she was doing the same, and breaks up with her. Paul sadly leaves. Paul stands up for his brother, recalling that Connor helped raise him after their parents' death, and expresses his hope that Connor will someday change for the better. Paul stays the night and has sex with George, resulting in a fallout between George and Nina. Paul takes pity on Nancy and enlists the help of his business partner, Marina Rodrigues (Carmen Miranda), to counsel the young girl. Paul takes this opportunity to flee the scene and run home to his beloved wife. Paul wakes up Maggie that night with a phone call, saying he needs Pete for an assignment. Paul wins the case, but only by seducing the judge, who happens to be a woman. Paul would be the perfect man for the deed: he is the ultimate womanizer. Paula (Natalia Oreiro) is 9-months pregnant and was left by her boyfriend Santiago early in her pregnancy. Paula breaks up with him and Jake is arrested. Paula declines but is happy because she knows that Elliot's invitation is evidence that he loves her and will come back. Paula gets back together with her husband, having been convinced to do so by her counselor. Paula gets suspicious and decides to play a trick on her husband, hiring an actor to pretend to be a gigolo who is interested in her. Paula has to impersonate Clarice until Burton can have the marriage of Clarice and Michael annulled. Paula introduces Raymond to Yolanda (Itz Tiffany), her old friend, and Raymond starts an affair with her as well. Paula is informed of this and is scared that Elliot is leaving her, never to return, like all the other men in her life. Paula pours her heart out to him, and he finally forgives her. Paula realizes that she's had a very bad sex life with her husband, so she makes a sex timetable; infuriates Raymond and he asks for a divorce. Paula struggles to get back into shape to resume her career as a dancer. Paula's vocation exasperates her roommate Kit (Zooey Deschanel), who believes that Paula took the job because she once had her heart broken by a man who lived with his parents. Paula, however, demands a divorce during the confusion, convinced that Margot has been having an affair with her husband. Paula, on the other hand, is shocked when she finds out why Tripp lives at home: his life collapsed when his fiancée suddenly died, and his family has been his source of solace ever since. Paulette dates other people, including a performance artist (Steve Buscemi) and a painter (Jesse Borrego). Paulette wants to give up and go home to her parents but Lionel persuades her to stay because New York is where a painter needs to be. Paulie (Burns), a self-supporting writer, is making plans for his marriage to Sue (Murphy), his girlfriend who is in her 5th month of pregnancy. Paulie is strongly advised by his older brother Jimbo (Logue) to not go through with the wedding. Paulina holds a grudge against Darrin because of his mother and for "stealing" her spot as choir director, as she was next in line and had waited for years for Sally to pass away. Paulo immediately befriends Raymond, with eyes greedily on his cash as he owes the biggest Mafia leader in Rio money and insists that he is prepared to take Raymond wherever he needs to go and whatever he needs done can be done. Peabody Jr. Peabody Jr. Peabody Sr. Peabody goes on vacation with his wife Polly (Irene Hervey) to a Caribbean resort. Peaches (Mo'Nique), a hair stylist from Baltimore, and her estranged sister, Angela (Kellita Smith), the owner of an upscale salon in Beverly Hills, get reacquainted when Peaches decides to attend a celebration for Angela in Los Angeles. Pearl Berman has just returned home from her husband Jack's funeral, her grief disrupted by her many relatives animatedly discussing which parkway offered the best route to the cemetery. Pearl asks his opinion of a poem, and when she argues his interpretation Mickey reveals that he taught poetry, as well as being a photographer and a former soldier. Pearl dislikes the three new friends, but the Colonel accepts them, glad Wilma is happy, and privately gives her a valuable pearl necklace that once belonged to his great-grandmother. Pearl's family tackles any and every subject from body odor to toilets to Tupperware to borscht as if it's worthy of a major debate. Pedigrew later explains that his ex-wife Shirley (Hillary Brooke) intends to marry Henry. Pedigrew wants to remarry Shirley (again) because, after two expensive divorces, she has most of his money, and he needs capital desperately to expand his business. Pegeen

Mike Stapleford, the 40-year-old daughter of two actors he performed with around the time she was born, pays Axler a visit at his house. Pegeen has just moved nearby to work as a professor at a Vermont women's college after ending a six-year relationship with a woman who decided to undergo sex reassignment surgery to become a man. Pegeen is distressed that her parents have learned about the relationship she wanted kept secret. Pegeen's job was secured after she slept with the school's "smitten" dean, Louise Renner. Peggy (Love) is the owner of a lumber camp, and she falls for Clayton, a man from the city (McDonald), who comes to the camp. Peggy Martin (Parker), the daughter of a rich American businessman (Eugene Pallette), persuades him to purchase a Scottish castle from Donald Glourie (Robert Donat), dismantle it and move it to Florida. Peggy Sue Bodell sets off for her 25-year high school reunion in 1985 with her daughter, Beth, as company. Peggy agrees to stay with Pete but tells him "no more cruises". Peggy awakes in a hospital, with Charlie at her side. Peggy goes to the abusive taxi dance hall owner she works for, Nelly Miller (Don Rickles), to whom she is already in debt, for another loan to give to Pete and agrees to prostitute herself with his patrons to pay back her debts. Peggy goes, gets sprayed with seltzer water at her first entrance, and is at first shocked and dismayed to find she is doing slapstick comedy in low-budget "Comet" productions, but she decides to "take it on the chin" and, with Billy's loving support, becomes a success. Peggy grimly but reluctantly tells him "I told you so". Peggy has just separated from her high school sweetheart, now husband, Charlie, and is wary of attending the reunion because of everyone questioning her about his absence as they have been married since Peggy became pregnant right after graduation. Peggy is named the queen and walks on stage, but after they wheel out the reunion cake, she faints. Peggy is then kidnapped by Charlie, leaving everyone at the Lodge thinking that the ritual worked. Peggy makes friends with Richard Norvik, the class geek (and future billionaire), to figure out what is going on with her. Peggy sees how much he loves her and how much she loves him, and they kiss. Peggy warns him that people can't be trusted, but Pete is encouraged when a band auditions him for a job. Peggy witnesses this transformation, and realizes that 'Harold' was actually Danny, one of her favorite students. Peggy's men, however, are too tough. Pellet scoffs at the notion that Jack could ever defeat him in a race, but accepts the challenge. Penelope checks out the wound, realizes that it is fake blood, and leaves with a broken heart. Penelope is thrilled with the idea of becoming a smuggler and convinces the brothers to accept the job, unaware that this is part of the con. Penelope reveals that she has been alone for most of her life and has picked up an array of strange hobbies such as juggling and kung fu. Penelope still wants to go ahead as an antiques smuggler and steal the rare book that Melville told her about. Penniless and in a mad rush to get out of town, the two musicians take a job with Sweet Sue (Joan Shawlee) and her Society Syncopators, an all-female band headed to Miami. Penny and Dodge borrow a car of Speck's and eventually make it to Olivia's family home. Penny and Dodge drive to Olivia's home, where Dodge leaves a letter to Olivia and expresses his feelings for Penny. Penny discovers a letter from Olivia to her parents, which reveals Olivia's address. Penny persuades Mary that her career is more important than whatever attraction she might have felt for Steve and Steve's colleague persuades him that the connection he had with Mary was just the result of pre-wedding nerves. Penny, surprised at seeing this, comes over to Steve. People Will Talk describes an episode in the life of dr Noah Praetorius (Cary Grant), a physician who teaches in a medical school and founded a clinic dedicated to treating patients humanely and holistically. Pepi returns to the shop just in time to prevent the distraught mr Matuschek from committing suicide. Pepé Le Pew becomes saddened, pulls out a gun, walks out of sight and fires the weapon, presumably killing himself. Pepé Le Pew sees her and immediately mistakes her for a skunk. Pepé appears beside her again and he receives one final mauling as the balloon floats upwards into the sky ("If you have not tried it, do not knock it. Pepé chases Penelope into the Louvre, with the ginger cat following. Pepé emerges from a fishing boat, scaring the boatman and sinking the boat. Pepé finds Penelope hiding in the Air Conditioning machine and traps her in it with himself. Pepé finds, embraces and kisses Penelope on a boat but Penelope makes her escape in the sea with a diving mask and oxygen tank. Pepé first tries to lure her out sweetly, then demands that she come out of the cabinet. Pepé follows, wearing a mask and flipper but no oxygen tank (being a skunk, he can hold his breath for a long time). Pepé grabs for her, but she slips through his arms. Pepé plays along the confrontation as a duel, miming a miss and a defeat. Pepé pursues Penelope but slips on the sand and falls down a sea cliff into the sea. Pepé spies Penelope on a beach. Pepé then calls out: "Vive l'amour, we die together" and steps off the window ledge. Pepé wonders where everyone has gone to and immediately picks up on where Penelope went. Pepé's fumes spread through the Louvre spoiling various works of art, the cartoon ending with the fumes causing the Mona Lisa to talk ("I can tell you chaps one thing. Pepé's stench ruins a couple of sculptures (correcting one into the Venus de Milo) as well as thwarting the ginger cat's ambush attempt and he terrifies Penelope in the sculpture gallery, even as he paints a picture of her ("Don't move, darling. Peter Klaven (Paul Rudd), a Los Angeles real estate agent, proposes to his girlfriend Zooey Rice (Rashida Jones), and she accepts. Peter Quince and his fellow players Nick Bottom, Francis Flute, Robin Starveling, Tom Snout, and Snug plan to put on a play for the wedding of the Duke and the Queen, "the most lamentable comedy and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisbe". Peter and Zooey declare their love to each other, Sydney assumes the role of best man, and the wedding commences. Peter and his fiance then decide that they do not want to marry each other and they call off the wedding (much to her father's chagrin) while Christina returns home and back to a newly unfulfilled life of being single again. Peter bails them out and the couple angrily decide to go home to Los Angeles, returning to the opening moments of the film. Peter begins spending time with Rachel and starts to develop feelings for her. Peter bursts in to ask Sarah to run away with him to Seattle, leading to a fight that lands Tom and Sarah in jail – still without consummating their marriage. Peter chases her into a train station, where she hides in the ladies room. Peter confesses that he and Sally are in love and going to get married. Peter decides to go along with the lie as he has just broken up with his long-term off and on again girlfriend Genevieve and wants a clean break. Peter declares his love for her, and literally smokes her out with burning newspapers. Peter feels bad about fighting with Sydney but does not re-invite him to the wedding. Peter feels overshadowed by Catcher's strong personality, and Vikki wants to see emotional commitment in her lover. Peter forces Jimmy to admit in front of everyone what had really gone on, then leaves. Peter goes to Sarah's room to console her where she admits she still loves him and tries to rekindle their romance. Peter helps her escape notoriety. Peter immediately goes to Rachel to confess what happened, but she is hurt and demands that he leave and never contact her again. Peter introduces Sydney to Zooey at their engagement party, but the meeting takes an unfortunate turn when a nervous Sydney makes a very awkward toast. Peter is also depressed as his relationship with Vikki is now apparently based only on sex. Peter joins the cruise and, as part of his job, becomes acquainted with Georgia. Peter leaves for work the next morning only to discover that Sydney has used the $8,000 loan to purchase several ridiculous billboard advertisements promoting Peter's real estate business (using pictures of Peter he took of him on his iPhone). Peter mentions Francey to his father twice, but on both occasions, Mr Morgan interrupts and ignores his son, and when Peter becomes insistent, his apparently ailing mother (Bondi) has a flare-up of her heart condition, making any further conversation impossible. Peter passes out before he can reach the train, which departs with both Francey and mrs Morgan aboard, but mr Morgan, having finally yielded to the combined pressure of his son and wife, stops the train by driving ahead of it with Peter and parking the car on the track. Peter realizes he is indeed like any other man and takes Vikki to Catcher's apartment to take things to the next level. Peter realizes he loves Tammy, finds Tammy's grandfather, and returns to the houseboat, where he kisses her. Peter refuses at first, but eventually he gives in and gives her the money. Peter returns to the party informing the crew that he lost all the money. Peter says nothing at the prom, but blurts the news to his father just as mr Morgan is about to give an important speech, resulting in another argument and another flare-up of mrs Morgan's heart condition. Peter seems to not have any close friends to share the good news with, only family and mainly female acquaintances. Peter soon becomes caught up in the various intrigues of the "theater people", including the charming but mercurial Michael Degan, the beautiful leading lady Grace Hargrove, and a cast of other eccentric players. Peter tells Zooey that he lent Sydney money and asks her if she knows why they are getting married, since he had no answer to Sydney's question. Peter tells her that he has also missed her too. Peter then awkwardly accepts the prize that comes with the award: a date with Kevin. Peter then patches things up with Zooey, explaining to her that while he is nervous, he is ready to get married. Peter turns down the offer. Peter turns to his gay younger brother, Robbie (Andy Samberg), for advice on dealing with men. Peter's father has recently died, and Peter plans to sell the house after this last party. Peter's friends are Andrew (Branagh), now a writer in Hollywood; married jingle writers Roger (Laurie) and Mary (Staunton); glamorous costume designer Sarah (Emmanuel); and eccentric Maggie (Thompson), who works in publishing. Peter's love interest drops by Brentwood Hall. Peter's solution is to threaten the family with disgrace by getting drunk and otherwise misbehaving until his father relents, even if it costs him his job. Peter, thinking that she likes him, rejects her and in defense, she explains what happened. Peter, to get even, announces that Roogle is alive and on his way. Peter, who has never been in a relationship, spends too much time in his dreams and as a result cannot fall in love with a real person. Sam and his wife Miriam are living mundane lives in Naples, Florida. Sam and the maid of honor head upstairs to be alone, where he encourages and enjoys her seductive ways but eventually turns down sex, realizing that he tells Miriam about all the wonderful things that happen in his life, and telling her about this soon-to-be wonderful moment would devastate her. Sam begins dating a co-worker Victoria, whom Jonah dislikes. Sam brings camping equipment, and Suzy brings her binoculars, six books, her kitten, and her brother's battery-powered record player. Sam catches Jjaks in the act and they have a fight. Sam confides in her online pen pal

"Nomad" about her dream to attend Princeton, a dream which he also shares. Sam ends up getting shot when Jjaks and Freddie try to defend themselves. Sam ends up shooting and killing Red after a brief skirmish and collects the $50,000 from a safe. Sam even gets robbed, and the bank refuses to make him a loan. Sam finds that she was in fact accepted by Princeton; the acceptance letter is retrieved from the garbage by her stepsisters, who knew where Fiona hid it. Sam greets Joanna, who has returned with her mother from America, and Daniel is joined by his new girlfriend Carol and her son. Sam has a party for the launch of her book, where Bill makes a speech about the process of writing, quoting What We Talk About When We Talk About Love, his favorite book. Sam has fallen for an American classmate, also named Joanna (Olivia Olson), and, after discussion with his stepfather, decides to learn the drums so that he can accompany her in the big finale for their school's Christmas pageant (the same one that Natalie's nephew and Karen and Harry's children are in). Sam invites Tess on a date to a baseball game, and she inadvertently breaks the "men only" atmosphere of the press box. Sam is a department store manager whose boss,C. Sam is a knowledgeable and informed sports writer. Sam is covering a championship boxing match that evening and tells her he cannot go. Sam is humbled by this and agrees to go out with Lou. Sam is hurt by her lies and states he wants nothing to do with her. Sam is reluctant to reveal her identity to Austin, feeling that he will not accept her due to her being ordinary and Austin being popular. Sam is unhappy, too. Sam meets the maid of honor from the night before, who begins flirting with him to his delight. Sam now calls a friend, Detective Ben Costikyan (Dan Aykroyd), who promptly arrests Jjaks. Sam panics because the quiz contains sensitive information, such as she is a virgin and is saving herself for Jake. Sam passes away while still holding his child. Sam runs away from the airport security and says hi to Joanna, who then kisses him on the cheek. Sam says she can tell everyone he had more important plans. Sam soon finds out that he is one of only two students in Gro Vont High School who can read. Sam splits from his father and rejoins the Wonders, bringing with him an old friend of theirs, Jumbo. Sam struggles to cope socially at North Valley High School, where queen bee, cheerleader Shelby Cummings, also torments her and calls her "Diner Girl" along with other members of the popular clique. Sam takes Gerald outside, the bottle smashes, and Sam returns, claiming to have "launched" Gerald. Sam tells her this is the first time he is disappointed in her, faulting her for going to extremes. Sam then decides to give up her dreams and resigns herself to working at the diner, but Rhonda gives Sam a pep talk not to lose hope. Sam then sees her father's words, "Never let the fear of striking out keep you from playing the game," and regains her confidence (in real life this quote came from Babe Ruth). Sam's a shoulder for clerk Shirley Mae to cry on when her romance breaks up. Sam's stepsisters discover Sam and Austin's email relationship, and (after having failed to convince Austin that one of them is the owner of the phone) convince Shelby that Sam tried to steal Austin from her. Sam, however, has fallen in love with Kitty and has a guilty conscience about what he has done. Sam, wearing a mask and a beautiful white dress, meets "Nomad" at the dance, and is surprised to learn that he is Austin, who had become smitten with her upon her entrance. She abruptly leaves her date and searches for Gyeon-woo at the subway station. She accepts and gives him her address and he replies by telling her he will pick her up at 7:00. She accepts and they kiss. She accepts and they kiss. She accepts him and he tells her to put on the dress Tibby gave her.

She accepts his apology and they share their first kiss as rain falls over the drought-plagued valley. She accepts his marriage proposal, but is disappointed when he postpones the marriage for a hearing on his appointment in Washington. She accepts his offer and is pleased when he offers to wait for her and meet her afterwards. She accepts his offer, passionately kisses him back, and they tumble onto her bed. She accepts with a kiss on his cheek, but says she will need some time. She accepts, and her parents agree that they should now meet Greg's parents. She accepts, and they fly to South Carolina to see a justice of the peace. She accepts, but Dorothy's friend, Carol (Caroline Guthrie), shows up at the rendezvous instead and informs Gregory that something had come up; Dorothy will not be able to make it. She accepts, but sadly believes that, as a princess, she cannot marry him. She accepts, but worries how her family will react. She accepts. She accepts. She accuses him of deception and spying, while he responds by belittling her store. She acts differently around each of the men she is drunk on her date with Doug; she uncharacteristically jumps into bed with Gabriel; she is, at first, irritated with but then moved by ex-baseball star Bobby; her date with Barry gets off to a rough start, but then while on their date, they run into her parents and end up having dinner with them; and her date with Luke is sidetracked when they see a colleague of Luke's who is with his daughter, Eve, who appears to have her own eye on Luke. She acts like a showgirl (recreating a risqué musical number she had seen performed by Dixie Belle) and lets on that Jerry's father ("their" father) had been a gardener at Princeton University, not a student athlete as Jerry had claimed. She adds that her protective older brother, Will (James Wolk), was very popular as a handsome basketball player. She admires from afar her neighbor, publisher Shep Henderson (James Stewart), who one day walks into her gallery of African art to use the telephone, after Gillian's aunt Queenie (Elsa Lanchester) put a spell on his phone. She decides to help Opie by finding him a good woman, initially (and unsuccessfully) by online personal ads. She decides to leave Bill, returns the engagement ring, and leaves for New York to try her own wings of fortune. She decides to let things go and marry Bill as Patricia Winterbourne. She decides to live there from now on. She decides to make Caroline a better match. She decides to marry Captain Barton and withdraws from the show. She decides to stay. She decides to take advantage of the fact that "no limits are set, either by society or one's own conscience, to the amount one may impose on one's relatives", and settles on visiting her distant relatives at the isolated Cold Comfort Farm in the fictional village of Howling in Sussex. She decides to track down all of her ex-boyfriends in the hope that one of them will have grown into the man she wants to marry, and therefore the number of men she has slept with will never have to increase. She decides to try to improve her own skating by applying physics and what she has discovered from watching other skaters. She decides to visit by herself, and is shocked that mrs Lacayo has no idea who she is. She decides to write about her mother but has few sources to go on, which are all confined in a small box. She declares she no longer needs Higgins, saying she was foolish to think she did ("Without You"). She declares, "Oh Oscar. She declines, but when her lawyer boyfriend Philip Booth (Lee Bowman) has to cancel their date, she changes her mind. She declines, saying she is under close guard. She delights in verbally abusing the farm hand Westley, whom she addresses as "farm boy", by demanding that he perform chores for her. She demonstrates her own skills first, and then allows Izzy to try. She denies this and an argument ensues. She describes how she helped him recover by pretending to fall in love with him to help him in a transference of his affections. She describes them and asks his opinion on whom she should choose. She devises a scheme involving amnesia to lure Jeff back to her. She did it on purpose to break up with Will, saying that she is "letting him go" because she does not share his passionate ambitions. She discovers a letter addressed to her by Preston and, moved by its contents, makes it her mission to find him, but she doesn't know what he looks like and no one she asks gives any helpful descriptions. She discovers after an experimental kiss that she no longer loves him and goes to meet Kevin. She discovers instead that Anton wants the convenience of an assistant, not a true partner. She discovers that he is really an Easterner and an Ivy League university graduate; the fake Texan act just helps him with his deal-making. She discovers that none of the performers are real cowboys: they are mostly ex-convicts or alcoholics (or both). She discovers that their friends didn't think her marriage would last. She discovers then that her results were all negative. She does allow him to escort her to one of his aunt's rallies, where she impresses the other women, despite John Pritchard standing up from the audience and asking her some awkward questions about management and labor getting closer together. She does not answer him. She does not believe him at first, but when he shows her his driver's license as proof, she faints. She does not enjoy kissing Jared, however, and prefers looking at her fellow cheerleaders. She does not expect him to marry her; all she wants is enough money to pay for an abortion. She does not feel her Fitz is right for the part, and explains to him why and what she is looking for in the role. She does not intend to mail it, but her friend and editor Becky does it for her and agrees to send Annie to Seattle. She does not tell her mother that she was set to star in Ricardo's play, and instead informs her that she came to Rio to get married. She does, and after a heartfelt speech to his deaf grandmother, which he overhears, the two reconcile. She does, however, capture the heart of Freddy Eynsford-Hill, the young man she ran into in the opening scene. She does, leaving in its place the one-dollar bill that she had received as a tip for washing the agents' windshield (while in disguise). She does, so beautifully that Nelson offers to star her in a Broadway musical. She doesn't connect with Doug, but she does get him to come out of his shell by the end of the date. She doesn't, and an excited João tells her that he's going to be rich, and they will be together for the rest of their lives. She doesn't want to go with him, so he lifts her up over his shoulder and takes her to a taxi. She doubts they are the real killers, but Ace's lackey, Lebec, reminds her to get the map at all costs. She dreams of living on "the other side", among the rich. She dresses up and goes to the Thanksgiving party, where she meets John's uncle, who is clearly interested in her. She dresses up for him and gets back together with him. She drives there and they kiss. She drops him off intending to leave him, however guilt gets the better of her and she stays with him until Kiko finds them and takes them back. She drops him off, but not before claiming to be a stage actress and sneering at his "undignified" accomplishments as a movie star. She drops the key to the lock down her neckline as the startled Pepé says, "Oh, no. She earns a spot on a reality television dating show called The Extreme

Bachelor, the bachelor turning out to be Grant, the man she met in the diner. She encounters a dying ball turret gunner known only as Technical Sergeant Garp, who was severely brain damaged in combat. She encounters the same problem at her first few job interviews - the men are interested in something other than her secretarial skills - so she dresses as dowdily as she can and gets hired by Joseph Morton (George Murphy). She encourages Ellen to marry him because he is so wealthy. She encourages Jon to take night classes to get an office job outside the service industry, and Jon indulges her love for romance movies, which he usually dismisses as unrealistic fantasy. She ends going to Brian's house and apologizes, confessing that she had been afraid dealing with change. She ends the speech with: "Sorry, that I exist". She ends up kissing him in front of Robin and her friends but the two realize the age difference between them is too large for anything romantic to happen. She engages in petty sabotage for example, taking Kimmy and Michael to a karaoke bar after discovering that Kimmy is a terrible singer and later asks her gay friend and editor George Downes (Rupert Everett) to pretend they are engaged, hoping to make Michael jealous. She enlists Captain John Pringle (John Lund), another Iowan, to assist in her investigation, unaware he is Erika's current lover. She enlists the help of Mike Conovan (Spencer Tracy), a slightly shady sports promoter. She escapes her room by window and rushes to Galswells to find a way to help Victor, but fails. She escapes, managing to evade his nationwide search for her with the help of Peter Warne (Jack Lemmon), a jobless reporter, who sees himself getting the biggest story of the year - until he and Ellie fall in love. She even assumes Peter must be gay due to his perceived lack of interest. She even became Prom Queen - and Lucy, her only friend, is actually the original "Tom-Tom" after plastic surgery. She even leaps into the water and swims out to meet him. She even visits the forgiving mother (Chaplin) of her former lover. She eventually allows him to drop her off and he asks her to the prom, which she accepts and they share their first kiss. She eventually becomes his traveling companion. She eventually confesses to Karl that, despite the vast social gulf between them, she has fallen in love with him. She eventually convinces Jenny that she's finally ready to be a parent when she puts her foot down and shows Audrey who's boss. She eventually finds him, but he wants no more to do with her. She eventually gets Blent to fall for her and propose marriage. She eventually pressures Norbit into marrying her, and bullies, insults, and controls him to make sure that she keeps him all to herself. She eventually quarrels with Denys over his decision. She eventually realizes that what he is really saying is, "I love you". She eventually tells Beth, who seems to take it as an attempt to ruin her wedding plans. She expects Mr Darcy to marry her daughter. She expects a large party but quickly realises the Prince's true intentions to seduce her over a private supper. She expects the movie to help her win Blossom Queen, but she is totally disgusted with the movie after only seeing a bit of it. She explained that when she found out that Marni is her fiance's sister, she panicked and decided to pretend not to remember her. She explains in it how she "lost the one person she ever fell for", and when he hears she quit her job at Composure and is on her way to Washington,C. She explains she is looking for "The One" using various dating sites. She explains that he just stopped loving her and that he was never ready to have children. market based in Dublin's Moore Street where she spends time with her best friend Marion, who proves to be a great source of encouragement in her difficulties. She falls in love with Garrick, and he plays along. She falls in love with Vinny while the puppy is licking her face. She fantasizes about her name being on the billboard and gathering up the nerve she goes to 383 Madison Avenue to inquire about the billboard. She fears she may be unattractive, but receives attention from boys at school. She fears that Jill will break Don's heart. She feels most attracted to Matthew, but he mistakenly confronts her for being part of a scheme. She feels passionately and intensely that the dowry is hers and is needed to validate her marriage to Sean. She feels smothered by her husband, who interferes with her career ambitions and goes into a jealous funk whenever she goes on the road. She feels that her life is empty and artificial. She feels the pitch goes badly. She fell in love with Toninho and they opened a restaurant together, with Isabella stuck in the kitchen and Toninho out front taking the credit. She figures a plain secretary will be one less distraction. She files for divorce, demanding a large property settlement. She finally admits she loves him too. She finally admits to Marni that she feels truly awful for bullying and tormenting her and feels like a terrible person, and that she loves Will and his entire family. She finally asks Jesse if he loves Veronica, to which he responds that he does. She finally became a reporter of celebrity gossip. She finally catches up to him outside a dance club, but not before Britney and Mike share a kiss. She finally crashes the governor's ball and arranges for reporters to photograph her embracing Michael. She finally gets an outline from him for the last few chapters, which she uses to finish the novel on her own. She finally gets fed up with the situation and gives him her two weeks' notice of resignation after he sends her a message of an "emergency" while she is at her friend's wedding, since the emergency is, as she finds out, that he is unable to choose what to wear to an event. She finally lets them leave and moves on to Harold and Tammy: Tammy shouldn't talk to Harold so harshly, but Harold needs to toughen up. She finally stops denying to herself that she has loved Steve for a while. She finally succeeded, and at a salary of $300 a week. She finally succumbs to Juan Antonio's advances as they walk through a grove of trees in the dark. She finally takes refuge inside a locked glass cabinet, much to Pepé's chagrin. She finds $20,000, the remainder of what Harris owes Johnny, and goes to see Bob Pulsifer, Jr, the lazy, lecherous son of the bank's founder. She finds Bobby there, practicing a jump and turns on the charm. She finds Charlie with another woman, Patricia, and runs out crying. She finds Freddy still waiting outside ("On the Street Where You Live" [Reprise]). She finds Orlando, asks him to propose again, and accepts when he does. She finds Simon Dermott (Peter O'Toole) holding a Van Gogh that her father made recently. She finds all of her friends that she just left to also be their teenage selves, not just her. She finds he is like no other man she has ever met, and encourages him to stand firm against her father. She finds her relationship with Frederick no longer intellectually or sexually stimulating, in spite of (or maybe because of) Frederick's professed interest in continuing to teach her. She finds herself unable to tell Kit and, after a week, finally confides in Jess. She finds him in a light alley and explains why she was chasing him. She finds out that Alec's girl-friend, Daisy, had written a note to him, saying that she wanted to break up, but hadn't given it to him, but he had found it accidentally. She finds out that she has not been invited because of an indiscretion she mistakenly had with Dove Greenstein's husband on their wedding day and then later revealed Dove's real age to a local tabloid. She finds so much happiness, in fact, that when the vacation is over she decides not to return, ditching her friend at the airport and going back to the hotel where she'd been staying to ask for a job and to live a newly self-confident life in which she is at last true to herself. She finds the now-penniless Donaly living on the street, still clutching his Emmy statuette. She finds this amusing and jokes about the statement with her friends. She first cooperates in the command change but later agrees with the Captain's view on humans. She is at first bullied by the other girls, but she stands up for herself and wins everyone over, including the girl who had bullied her the most, to earn a place in their group, "The Purple Order of Penguins". She is back in their hometown, because her father is terminally ill. She is best friends with Eliza: a well meaning do-gooder, Ferguson: a gay male escort with self esteem issues and a long list of ex boyfriends, and Frangipani: a woman that has been married several times. She is bored and wishes she could write more about important things, such as politics, economics, religion, poverty; stuff she actually cares about. She is bored, however, and finds entertainment in verbal sparring with one of the sailors, Stephen Jones (Crosby). She is born through a c-section and is taken to the nursery. She is called to another meeting and is offered six signs in exchange for the one. She is career-minded and not eager for marriage. She is caught, but somehow convinces the chief of police to let her go. She is certain that Alexis is in trouble and insists on finding out what is going on. She is charmed by it, and decides to move in. She is cold towards him, and they go their separate ways. She is confused and unfamiliar with the rules of the sport. She is deeply touched and begins to like him, but it seems Sam has given up on her and starts dating Marilyn. She is desperate to go, especially when she finds out all of her friends are going. She is determined to convince Cora to abandon the arrangement, but Alex vetoes her efforts for fear he will lose Cora's goodwill. She is determined, however, to be a faithful wife and vows to hide her love for Jim. She is due to attend a fellowship in England at the end of the summer. She is encouraged and supported by Maude, who still regrets leaving her childhood love behind for an attempted acting career in Hollywood. She is encouraged by CCN news reporter Hartman Hughes, who hopes to use Mary's encyclopedic knowledge in his reports to help himself get a promotion to become an anchor. She is engaged to bartender Terry McGowan (William Scott), who gets her a job as a cigarette girl in his cafe after a fire unfairly causes her to lose her job as a theater scrubwoman. She is estranged from her intelligent and sensitive husband, Barrie (Fredric March) who has been driven to drink by his wife's insensitivity and she has neglected her introverted and maladjusted daughter, Blossom (Rita Quigley). She is eventually claimed by Aunt Sarah, who chains her in the backyard as punishment for running away. She is exceptionally close to her older sister Margot and her younger sister Katherine (nicknamed Kitty). She is extremely upset that he could forget about her so easily, and he lets her leave and walk out of his life as if forever. She is flattered when flirtatious Donnie Wainwright urges her to elope to Paris with him, then irked when he abandons her before their ship departs. She is fleeing from a forced marriage to Tangaballi (Nikitin Dheer). She is forced to borrow money from a ruthless loan shark named mr Billy to make ends meet. She is forced to reassess her philosophy when she meets Greg Gatlin (Corbett), a restaurateur who moves into her neighborhood. She is forced to rely on his generosity, and as the two of them work at various low-paying jobs, they stay together in the apartment as friends. She is frustrated, because though she has had some intimate moments with Sean, he has never clearly declared how he feels about her. She is given a makeover by her new employer, and at a fashion show hosted by fashion maven Edythe Dubarry, she meets and feels attracted to lingerie designer Joe Blomfield, who is involved in a tempestuous relationship with Edythe. She is hampered in her efforts to transfer by her current supervisor Professor Leach (Kym Gyngell). She is happy for him to browse and Dominique helps him. She is heartbroken to learn that Gloria is Josh's fiancee. She is hoping to talk her way back into Bill's life, but the rivaling waitress spills vicious lies into her ears, saying that she and Bill are now engaged to be married. She is horrified that he would want to spend Christmas away from his family. She is hurt and enraged. She is immediately accepted to Berklee and forgives Ty after the performance. She is immediately smitten with Mr. Gilbert and decides to work as his secretary. She is in love with her boss, Richard Barclay (Melvyn Douglas), who pays no attention to her unless it has to do with business. She is in love with him and has decided to reform, though she keeps her past a secret. She is in the process of divorcing him to marry Herbert (Donald Douglas). She is initially angry with him, but that night, the two begin a romantic relationship. She is initially unwilling to take him back, but eventually gives in. She is intrigued. She is introduced to the Boynton Beach Bereavement Club by Lois (Dyan Cannon), a talkative and flirtatious decorator who also serves as the club's unofficial social director. She is involved with Don Peterson (Gene Raymond) but is not prepared to sacrifice her independence by entering into matrimony. She is just waking up when Zack walks in, still stinging from Eve's rejection, and he attacks Mickey, pulling a gun and taking back the money he lost. She is keen on reuniting with Steve, but Ann and Steve are starting to get romantically involved. She is left to fend for herself. She is left with her fantasies of dancing in the arms of the man she loves. She is looking for the perfect man but can't find anyone who fits her strict criteria. She is made to leave True Directions and, now homeless, goes to stay with Larry and

Lloyd. She is more than surprised, since he wasn't that successful in his gambling. She is mugged on the way and a friendly police officer, Louis (Kevin Carroll), gives her a ride home. She is named winner of the contest and crowned the queen of the upcoming graduation luau, with Johnny hailed as king for his performance of "Prowlin'" with his fellow T-Birds. She is not expected to survive, and her two sons and daughter gathering at her bedside are more concerned with their expected inheritance. She is one of a group of models doing a fashion shoot with camp photographer (Graham Chapman). She is ordered to her room, and Kenneth asks Izzy why he didn't tell him. She is outraged and runs away, only to hide in the darkroom where Dick is working. She is outside and they have an argument in the street, while the rest of the group come out to see what happens. She is overwhelmed at his generosity, and they agree there will be no physical relationship. She is overwhelmed by the attention and starts dating both brothers, even if she can't forget her previous fiance Bill. She is packing to leave with Steve when Brad shows up, demanding his share of the $10,000. She is part of a travelling band of bohemian musicians who perform gigs in outdoor arenas around the country. She is paying him 2 million dollars to patch up Darren's marriage, in time to win the Stanley Cup. She is persuaded not to leave early by Northbrook, who promises to provide an excuse for her to escape after supper. She is persuaded to stay and production continues with her singing 'Cinderella's Fella' but Conroy is still not satisfied and an angry Lili walks out. She is pregnant by her ex-boyfriend, Randy Cates (William Lee Scott). She is proud that he wants to have sex with her, but admits that she is married, has two kids, and is pregnant. She is provided with money so she can stay the night in a hotel. She is pursued by Tony, a wealthy but irresponsible sportsman, and Jeff, a handsome, if conventional, doctor. She is put inside a box that has swords stuck through it and she disappears, just as she is supposed to, but then she never reappears. She is puzzled (but secretly overjoyed), as she did not write it. She is quarreling with her son-in-law, who had given the dress to his wife. She is reading his book, which she says her friend described as pretentious. She is recognized by two fellow con artists, Gwen and Brad. She is referenced as the family gathers with family Christmas ornaments around the tree. She is reluctant to assist him in his research until she needs a place to hide from the police, who want to question her about her boyfriend, mob boss Joe Lilac (Dana Andrews). She is reluctant to do so, but decides to go if Pendergast does not call for her by 8. She is romantically pursued by Miles (Corbett). She is saved by Johnny, who takes her home. She is scared of death, believing that it will bring an eternity of nothingness. She is sent to investigate who could affect gravity and how it was done, believing it was an attack. She is shaken, but Matt tells her a story about his first game as an NFL quarterback and helps her regain her wavering confidence. She is shocked and insists that he not tell his father. She is shocked to see them, which angers the group, who expected her to be grateful for their presence. She is skeptical of his claim to be king, but Ralph proposes that if he can prove he is, Miranda will go on a date with him, and his appearance on the news proves his claim. She is slightly older and is grateful to receive a proposal that will guarantee her a home. She is so consumed with writing the story that she hardly notices as Bruce realizes his cause is hopeless and returns to Albany. She is soon shocked and requests a divorce, but later admits that she herself has been unfaithful. She is staying in Michael's apartment even though he has moved out to get away from her, and she tells the press of her intention to publish a new book that details finding romance in her small town and searching for someone who will call her "baby" — a story that mimics her relationship with Michael. She is still mad with Jane, as Tess believes that Jane resented her throughout the years. She is stirred by her awakening sexuality and wants to lose her virginity. She is stunned to learn from James' secretary that he is married. She is surprised to learn that this is the reason behind his strange behavior, as she does not consider it to be important, and they kiss. She is surrounded by a support network of well-off friends consisting of Franny (Joan Cusack) — a stay at home mom with a large trust fund; Christine (Catherine Keener) — a successful television writer; Jane (Frances McDormand) — a fashion designer; and their respective husbands. She is suspicious of Davis, believing he knows her father is an art forger. She is taken by Adam (Paul Rudd), a bright and charming young man from one of her auditions, and decides to cast him as a new, nerdy character to fall for the character played by her arrogant and self-centered lead actress, Brianna (Stacey Dash). She is tempted by Archer, as Jeff shows no signs of returning her feelings for him. She is tempted to take a job as a mechanic, with Pop (Arthur Stone), on the highway; but, presses on in to town. She is the only woman he has ever been with. She is then adopted by Margaret Wyndham (Hedda Hopper), her rich and aristocratic aunt, who disapproves of James due to his crude manners. She is then carried in her pajamas through the crowded hotel lobby. She is then contacted at her sister's Boston bar by Banks himself, and decides to participate on the show. She is thought to have migrated from Denmark and Britain. She is to blame just as much as Harper is for the longtime feud between the two men. She is touched by the gesture, but Drew overdoes it, bringing in a full pageant production to surround the tree. She is unaware that Alec has been to her campus and is now on the same train. She is unaware that Sam is the son of circus mogul John Noble, whose ambition is to buy the Wonder Circus for himself. She is unaware that the women paying so much attention to Jason are the wives and girlfriends of his fellow poker players, who confuse his TV role with the real Jason. She is urged on by her friend, Grace Norman (Esther Muir) and an unscrupulous lawyer, Gilbert Wayne (Gayne Whitman) to file for a divorce. She is very gracious when Wai-Tung explains his dilemma, as she, too, is hiding a relationship (with a Caucasian man). She is visited by Ernest Friedman, an art dealer and friend of all three. She is warmly received by his cousin Willie, aunt Emma, and his mother, even after Jack reveals Lee's past. She is wearing her wedding dress, to which he mistakenly concludes that she is looking forward to marrying Glenn. She is welcomed by the seven dorks: Lenny, the one with high maintenance health; Terrence (Jeremy Howard), a genius and post-grad, despite the fact that he still attends classes; Jeremy (Adam Hendershott), who is very shy and only uses his puppet to talk; Gurkin (Danny Strong), a hot-tempered blogger; Spanky (Samm Levine), who has no experience with girls; George (Arnie Pantoja), the childlike freshman who still believes in Santa Claus and doesn't know how to tie a knot; and Embelakbo Akapaktumbe also known as "Embele" (Donté Bonner), a Nigerian interchange student who is highly intelligent but has Jet lag. She isn't impressed by his reasoning, however Zach continues on trying to explain that he loves her and had never stopped. She isn't impressed. She isn't sure where their relationship is going. She joins Riley at Stillman's gym, where Jackie demonstrates a deep knowledge of boxing while cavorting with beefy boxers ("Baby You Knock Me Out"). She joins the cooking team for the seven-day function, while the Prince searches for her in the countryside. She joins the pom-pom girls and attends all the classes taken by Blent to ensure she has maximum contact with him. She joins them at the table and Rusty announces his story is being published. She kicks him out and refuses to see him again. She kisses Cindy to wake her up, and asks for some kind of a response. She kisses Don in front of the window while the private eye watches. She kisses Jim after assuring him that he'll be around and that they'll be together for a long time, humorously stating that she has that information "from the highest authority". She kisses him and the movie ends with Sarah saying "Jonathan". She kisses him repeatedly, confessing that she loves him even more than Tommy. She knocks him unconscious to steal his keys and escape, only to be tranquilized with a dart gun by Wayne. She knows him into confessing his engagement to Judith. She runs to Glenn, wanting to be married immediately. She runs to Piggy Wiggly and Pete's house, then drives furiously towards Richmond to overtake her heartbroken friend. She runs to a window and tries to open it, but it is stuck. She rushes for her train on the London Underground and misses it. She rushes to the Empire State Building just moments after the doors to the down elevator close with Sam and Jonah inside. She sadly replies that she respects Fran too much to let anything happen between them and sends Steve away. She sails away with Robert on his boat, and throws her wedding dress into the Mississippi river. She sarcastically thanks Gail for what she did, because it motivated her to become successful in life. She says it is beautiful, but this would be a difficult to cater, plus Darla wants a formal reception. She says it is hard to sleep with other people with him living in the house. She says it was love at first sight then she went overboard and "surrendered herself completely," which Abby misinterprets as "she went all the way". She says she did not recognize him at the time but decided to write him after catching one of his old movies on TV. She says she is reading a pamphlet on marriage. She says she needs time to be happy and grow up on her own. She says that if their husbands have Hall Passes, so should they. She says that she always has to move for her mom. She says that she knew it all along and decides to marry him. She says that she loves him too, and they kiss. She says yes in broken English as the crowd erupts in applause. She screams for help when he grabs a sword. She screams to rouse her sleeping husband, but it is too late; the zombie attacks. She secretly arranges for Cornelius to meet her there. She secretly visits her publisher, Joel Archer (Allyn Joslyn), to try to get him to stop planting stories in the newspapers to generate interest in the upcoming book. She seduces her wealthy boss William 'Bill' Legembre Jr. She seduces him, dangling before him her jewels, teases him with steamy tales of rooftop escapades, and offers herself as an accomplice who might share his crimes. She seduces him, then blackmails him into throwing a party at her mansion, knowing that no one would dare offend him by not showing up. She seeks consolation in her famous baseball player boyfriend Cal Cooper (Christian Kane), and in her family, but finds little there. She seems to be a person of similar success to Gordon and Jarrod's father even loves her more than Jarrod. She sees Maezumi crying over a collection of letters and photos from Paris. She sees Terry and invites him for supper. She sees her father and mother in the Dodge Caravan next to them having sex, causing her to freak out and demand that Rusty take her home immediately. She sees her old London friends after nearly 20 years and entertains them with Carl's music ("Zigeuner"). She sees him and they sit down and talk. She sees his injuries and while cleaning him up, confesses to kissing Chris while at the cottage. She sees his manuscript, so he starts telling her about his book, overcoming his stuttering in his enthusiasm. She sees that Danny has a wedding ring on his hand, and asks him about his wife and he says how she recently left him for someone else, and the woman from the bar ends up sleeping with him. She sends her assistant Kevin to replace the DVD with the right one, filled with childhood memories. She sends one of the real Ben, and then devises a reason why they can't meet in person, claiming he is working in China. She serves them a collection notice for her boss, a debt collector, but the fast talking O'Neill and Taylor soon have her working for them as their manager. She sets off to attend college at SAU and pledge to her mother's once dignified sorority. She sets up an interview with each woman, in an attempt to learn more about and get closer to Derek. She shares Charlies main interests of horror movies and Kevin Smith, while being outgoing and a bit more vulgar like Rob. She shares the details of her sexual experiences with her friend Kimmie, as well as recording them on her tape recorder. She shows Frank how Grace struggles with the long hours he puts her through, without being able to care for her family. She shows Jjaks her bullet wound and tell him that Sam's a bad shot. She shows off her dance moves, then twerks and bounce and backs up to the couple with her massive rear for them to scream while she bounces and crushing and suffocate them for them to scream more for the screen to cut to the next scene. She shows up and all is revealed. She shows up in a chauffeur-driven car. She shows up late, in high heels and a dress, and is put to work scrubbing the toilet and cleaning pots and pans. She signs off by saying she may lose her virginity to Todd, and proudly declares "it's nobody's goddamn business". She sings "Beneath the Lights of Home" at the benefit. She sings "Wind Beneath My Wings" at Wendy's door, and the two girls join in, forgiving her. She sits next to a man, also wearing glasses, who thinks she's "quite a strudel" and encourages her to put hers on. She skips out without paying Maw the back rent she owes, even though Maisie gives her $20 to do so, and she has just received a $100 money order from Breezy. She slaps him and runs into the club, and Javier agrees to walk her home. She slaps him when he claims to be in love with her ("Snap out of it. She slips off the roof, but Robie grabs her hand before she can fall. She slowly realises that the attraction the two exert for her is irresistible. She sneaks back into Bob's car undetected. She snoops in his suitcase while he bathes, finding memorabilia showing the truth of his stories and travels. She soon becomes a great favorite of Olaf's. She soon becomes pregnant, and Ted tells Gerald about the pills he gave her, but says nothing about telling her they were vitamins. She soon discovers that Martin is alive, but remains happily married to Ferris until, Martin, her former love, re-enters their lives 14 years later. She soon falls for somebody but is left heartbroken and disturbed, largely thanks to her emotionally unstable friends. She soon finds herself writing an article called "How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days". She soon finds solace with a local pet shop owner who steals her heart with his natural charm and his lovable inventory. She soon finds that what he really requires is advice in all aspects of his life. She soon grows depressed as future plans for her living happily ever after now appear doomed. She soon realises that she must choose who she wants to be with, if only to avoid being branded a bigamist. She soon returns, however, and is told by Chris that Lincoln is bothered with functional euphoria too. She spends her free time reading Heidegger. She spends more time with Henry and goes to see some of her old friends. She spends most of her time at night reading. She spends the day with Eddie, his friend and co-pilot, Dave Campbell (Jack Carson), and Dave's wife Jean (Jane Wyman) (who had put Maria to bed). She spends the night crying and close to dawn Manise tells her that Alain is at Claire's. She spends the night drinking wine, and in a drunken fit of anguish, she posts a comment on John's social media wall while using her fake profile, posing as a scorned young woman whom he had a torrid love affair with. She spurns all of his advances until he learns to respect her views. She spurns his initial advance as her past relationships with men have not gone well, but after a heated exchange in the men's restroom, she meets him for dinner. She stabs him in the leg with a fork in retaliation for a treacherous trick he played on her, but they have a friendly chat early in the story, and a longer, more heart-to-heart conversation later. She stands there; heartbroken, sad and crying, realizing that maybe it was not meant to be and she walks away happy. She stands up to Fiona, quits her job at the diner, and moves in with Rhonda, who also quits along with the entire diner staff, all of whom had only put up with so many years of Fiona's abuse after Hal's death for Sam's sake. She starts off well, but during the jump she lets go of the handle and crashes into the water. She starts to cry, so the chef conveys to her to sit down. She starts to feel socially awkward and out of place, alone in the room full of strangers. She starts to make friends in the popular crowd as they get a chance to know her. She starts to think of suicide as an escape from her torments. She states that just because she stopped being friends with her in 6th grade didn't mean she stopped being friends, she figured Dylan's decisions were affected by the death of her mother. She states that she feels like she is being treated like Sophie and gifted by Billy to Paddy, which Paddy overhears. She states, "If you love someone, set him free; if you have to stalk him, he probably wasn't yours in the first place". She stayed at home and learned how to cook, becoming a renowned chef as an adult. She stays for the adventure and revenge against her father, suggesting that they extort a huge ransom. She steals the diamond, worth fifty thousand dollars, her Father used as collateral for a loan, which the brokers plan to cheat him out of; and, the chase is on, with the crooked loan sharks and police after her. She still considers the country the enemy responsible for the death of her son during World War II, but her feelings change when she meets Mr Asano on board the ship. She still has alcohol on her breath from that morning and is arrested. She still hasn't forgiven him for leaving her several years ago. She still plans to marry Rudi, though, whom she has finally gotten to propose, after refusing to be his mistress. She stops him, but without a boyfriend decides to take him as her date to Daisy's wedding. She storms off angry at the news, and later that night, she and Ryan take an evening swim in her pool as it's raining, falling in love with each other, before being chased off by her dad. She storms upstairs to complain, whereupon Jerry falls hopelessly in love with her and proceeds to pursue her all over London. She struggles to come up with excuses, and they take the afternoon off, during which Richard and Julia are married. She stumbles and balks and can't really explain where the idea came from. She subsequently confesses to Hemant. She subsequently takes Gregory's place as centre forward, and Gregory in turn replaces his friend Andy (Robert Buchanan) as goal-keeper. She succeeds and the Harriers win the tournament. She succeeds in convincing him that she has an intelligent, inquiring mind that he admires, although this is all done through deception. She succeeds in hurting Kiki's feeling and causing her to eat again. She successfully contacts

Jake and the two begin to date again. She suggests that they can buy a house and her therapist has organised a job interview for a statistic analyst post at a university. She suggests that they go to a restaurant called Taco Butt. She suggests to Wyatt that he break up with Kim by sending her a scathing letter and a topless picture of himself with Ivy. She surprises Mickey by attending the burial so he won't be alone. She survives and is supported by Isabel and her lawyer. She survives and the incident brings all closer together, although the men constantly bicker about each other's sexual misconduct. She takes Bobby to several places that put him completely out of his element and then he takes her to a baseball card show where she discovers a different side of him. She takes Jill out for a lunch and tries to talk her out of Don's life. She takes Kim to a club, where they get drunk. She takes Scott out into the hallway and they kiss, which turns Scott back into himself. She takes a closer look at the presents he gave her. She takes a seat at Godfrey's table and attempts to negotiate a peace with him but only on her terms. She takes her mom's and sister's feedback and decides to try to carve out a new future for herself. She takes her to an outdoor craft market and "accidentally" runs into Randy, who questions her about her marriage. She takes him back to her apartment, leaves to get wine and as she is in the kitchen he discovers her "PLAN" sheet that has all the details about her seducing him on it. She takes him to church where a Bony preacher sees them, and marries them on impulse. She takes him up on his offer, only with Davis, not Gaspard. She takes the blame and tells Michael that she is the one who has fooled around in the recent past. She takes the earrings off easily and gives them to the robbers. She takes the general to a nightclub, tries to get him drunk, coaxing him to sing and dance in a vain attempt to humiliate him. She takes the lead in a play which is being directed by Rick Sommers (Steve Cochran), the man who was both her Svengali and her lover. She takes the letter back and runs into the bathroom to read it. She takes the woman to the city, ostensibly to have an operation to cure her shortsightedness, but blinds her instead. She talks to Caleb, relaxing and seducing him verbally while Marc takes advantage by performing oral sex on him. She talks to Jonathan at the bookstore and a new relationship blossoms. She taps him and he jumps up and yells "Boo. She teaches him what kind of men Ashley likes. She teaches them to conga and demonstrates to Bertram the meaning of the phrase "yum yum" (kisses). She teases him about his baseball uniform that she saw him in earlier, and they share their first kiss. She telephones Finch that she is in town and will call on him at 4m. She telephones the police, then tells Steve that the contract is nothing but a scam; she then confesses to Steve that she herself is a crook and that she only married him in order to fleece him. She tells Anne she doesn't know what the big deal about sex saying why should two people huff and puff, rubbing up against each other when she can accomplish the same thing by herself in two minutes. She tells Barry that while she gave Barry's father 35 of the best years of her life, she's going to start living life her way with the man she really loves. She tells Brooke she had the letter in her purse, but at the last moment, could not bring herself to take it out. She tells Candace maybe it was for the best and that if she really loves her son, she would finish packing and leave him, making Candace more overwhelmed and fed up. She tells Charles that she mistook Robert for someone else, thus ending the battle. She tells David about her blindness. She tells David that her Aunt has given her the million dollars, and she wants to donate it to the museum, but David is more interested in telling her that the day spent with her was the best day of his life. She tells Don that her favorite quote is: "I only ask to be free. She tells Gerry the news, but does not manage to tell him of her pregnancy. She tells Gyeon-woo that the Girl can give advice to him about his impending trip to England, to which he replies, "I don't have to go anymore". She tells Josh it is him and to all of their surprise, runs into his arms and kisses him before bolting off. She tells Kenneth about the death of her mother when she was young and that her mission is to prevent it. She tells Luke how guilty she feels about what happened, and that she really loves him and wants to marry him. She tells Mark she is not attracted to him, because of his looks and failing financial situation, but is going out with him as a favour to his best friend Greg Kleinschmidt (LouisK). She tells Mickey she bought the bar after the old owner killed herself, "over some guy". She tells Mr Darcy immediately and departs in haste, believing she will never see him again as Lydia's disgrace would ruin the family's good name. She tells Patricia that she knows someone who wants to meet her, a philanthropist, but Patricia refuses. She tells Quinn she started dating Guillaume (Ebon Moss-Bachrach), and she doesn't want to be back with him. She tells her sister Cassandra that she wants to live in a Jane Austen novel. She tells him about Bandslam, an annual music competition in which the winning band gets a recording contract. She tells him he is in for a great reception. She tells him he will not be able to stop the wedding and then calls the police claiming that her house is being burgled. She tells him her true identity, but he still wants to marry her. She tells him sadly that they've broken up, to which Josh says that isn't what he heard from Peter. She tells him she can't be with someone who isn't 'into' her, and he, after a passionate kiss, offers to have sex with her to prove he is into her, in every possible way. She tells him she did this to be different from all the women he knew, and make him love her. She tells him she feels the same way, but refuses to marry him, as they will soon be forced apart. She tells him she feels the same way. She tells him she hopes to pick it up again as she is also now staying in New York, with Jake clearly thrilled. She tells him she is leaving Leo, and they exit together. She tells him she still plans to marry the wealthy Brice. She tells him she's divorcing George's stepfather. She tells him that a zerophiliac can become "a-morphic" and stop changing sex only by having sex with another zerophiliac. She tells him that after talking to her friends, she realizes she can't continue lying to herself and ends their relationship. She tells him that he must do something, but by then his paranoia has kicked in and he has begun adding up facts into a big scheme to kill him, which also involves his children, based on the song that they sang to him at his birthday and the changes that they made to fit him (the song involves the story of a poor boy who has to steal flowers for his dying mother in the hospital, only to find that when he finally arrives, she is already dead), Alain changes his will again: all goes to Claire. She tells him that if he wants to succeed, he needs to take bigger risks. She tells him that if she fails to find a mate, she will kill herself by jumping from a hotel window. She tells him that she is engaged to Richard and Don storms off. She tells him that she is in fact a widow, and that he has passed the test with flying colours. She tells him that she wants to keep on seeing him; he jokes that it will cost her. She tells him that she wished the money was only a small portion of what he owned and it wouldn't matter that she took it, and tells Raymond he's a "common crook". She tells him that, underneath the fancy clothes, she is a "people" too. She tells him to leave. She tells him to never contact her again, as he sees how shallow she is and realizes he is better off without her. She tells him what she had done, claims that Taft managed to get the gun from her and hit her and she is now afraid of the repercussions. She tells the newlyweds to appreciate each other, to be patient, and to try harder, like she should have. She tells them that back in her homeland, she was a violinist. She tells them to wait and goes to him and the two embrace. She then angrily reveals to her parents the truth about dropping out of law school and living with Marcus for the past few months when Miguel offers to 'toss the ball' and Lucia's mother Sonia refers to it as 'our wedding'. She then breaks down and laments over Keith being married and expecting a baby while she is still alone and miserable. She then bumps into George and demands to know where her mother is. She then calls Cynthia from her office overlooking Manhattan to say she's landed her dream job. She then calls the police to report her missing jewelry. She then continues to tell him that she doesn't care what he is employed as and that she misses him and wants to be together with him. She then creates a list of things and places for Ely to avoid in order for them to stay away from each other. She then discovers a mixtape in her mail from an admirer. She then does a song and dance number at a school pep rally to get people's attention to watch her via web cam, where she confesses what she has done (the web cam is the framing device of the film). She then duels Dawg while Shaw gets trapped below in rapidly rising water with the treasure. She then figures out that Bruce 2 is in Ely's apartment and their kiss wasn't just a kiss. She then flies into an angry outburst when a man copying down her speech is pointed out to her. She then gets to know him. She then goes to Richard to say goodbye so she can stop messing up her life and everyone else's since the reason Charlie stopped singing was her becoming pregnant right before they graduated. She then goes to church and confesses her infidelity. She then happily embraces him. She then has to take a quick work-related flight. She then hugs him and he says he will make her a crème brûlée. Successfully routing all but one plane that has lost radio contact, Nick leaves the building as the deadline approaches, while Russell instead remains inside to make contact with the plane by calling one of its passengers via Airfone. Such tales continue the fairy tale into what is in effect a second episode. Suddenly Gwen, who's stuck at a friend's house and bored, calls. Suddenly Patrick flaunts his NYS Fire Department badge and asks the other occupants to leave the elevator. Suddenly he hears Dino singing one of his songs on coast-to-coast television. Suddenly in charge of taking care of the New York family's affairs and her younger brother Ben (whom Annabel has not-so-affectionately nicknamed "Ape Face" and said "He's so neat, it's revolting. Suddenly inspired, Mark runs out of the store, jumps in front of a news crew covering the holdup, and announces a late night benefit party to "Save the Empire". Suddenly out of nowhere, an alive Freddie walks towards them, calling out Jjaks' name. Suddenly realizing he is involved with the wrong sister, Ray is in a fix. Suddenly the pink lights of "The Universal Joint," a bar, come on. Suddenly they find themselves in the spotlight; Zidler improvises and convinces the audience that Christian is the sitar player in disguise. Suddenly, Nick picks up a phone from a phone booth and, like an earlier joke, uses it as a "time machine" and pretends to call himself saying that he will meet a woman that he should stay with for the night. Suddenly, Viola's own dreadful mother-in-law, Kevin's grandmother, Gertrude

Fields (Elaine Stritch), appears and they have an indignant argument, while Gertrude takes a liking to Charlie, saying she is stunning, her grandson is a lucky man, that she is an "exotic Latina", and if only her son, Kevin's father, was as lucky to find a woman like Charlie. Suddenly, she falls through the door (as she was seen trying earlier) and lands in Griff's room. Suddenly, some Boneys arrive. Suddenly, the crowd's attention is distracted by the sound of an airplane. Suddenly, the death of a father, a wifes infidelity and a daughters wedding affects them and brings them closer together. Suddenly, the moment is interrupted by Grigio, who is quickly descending into madness. Suddenly, they start making out in the parking garage standing by her car. Sue and Grey return to their apartment, and discover a tin ring (the one which was stolen earlier), which Sue takes as a sign that Bill chose to leave her behind with Grey. Sue happily turns to find Bill, realizing that the ring is not a sign that he will leave her but a sign that he is going to abandon his old lifestyle in order to give Sue the home she needs and in order to pursue a romance with Grey. Sue initially turns him down, only to be found later in the driver seat of his limo to show her acceptance of his proposal. Sue is quite immune to social norms; she speaks bluntly to all, particularly to Rocky, Rahul's driver, who she knows as a famous drag queen. Sue is so hurt that he would question her honesty and integrity that she leaves him. Sue-Lin feigns illness so that nurse Diane will come to their apartment and examine her and see Mike again. Suffering from writer's block, he has barely begun the play, but starts auditioning players. Sugar confides that she has sworn off male saxophone players, who have stolen her heart in the past and left her with "the fuzzy end of the lollipop". Sugar runs from the stage at the end of her performance and manages to jump into the launch from Osgood's yacht New Caledonia just as it is leaving the dock with Joe, Jerry, and Osgood. Sugar tries to arouse some sexual response in Junior, and begins to succeed. Sugar-puss takes refuge in the house where the professors live and work, despite Bertram's objections and their house-keeper's threat to leave because of her. Sukhi, unable to control his anger, shows himself and is instantly shot. Sullivan (Reynolds) is the operations manager of Satellite News Network, a fictitious cable TV news channel. Sullivan decides to thank the homeless by handing out $5 bills, but one man, who had previously stolen his shoes, ambushes Sullivan and steals the money. Sullivan dresses as a penniless hobo and takes to the road, followed by a fully staffed double-decker coach at Lebrand's request. Sullivan is dissatisfied despite his success and tells his studio boss, mr Lebrand (Robert Warwick) that he wants his next project to be a serious exploration of the plight of the downtrodden. Sullivan is knocked unconscious and thrown onto a train boxcar leaving the city. Sullivan slowly regains his memory. Summer writes an offensive article about one of Will's clients. Sumner denies it, but then Watson puts him to the test, setting the machine to self-destruct. Sumner resists the urge to fix it as long as possible, but finally gives in. Sun Valley Serenade is the first of the only two movies featuring The Glenn Miller Orchestra (the other is 1942's Orchestra Wives). Sunny then drops her home, and wanders off. Sur le rythme is a romantic comedy about the world of dance. Sure enough, Key gets orders to go to Italy, so Amy refuses his marriage proposal, though they love each other. Sure enough, The Wolfman eventually reads the message on the radio for "The Blonde" to meet Curt or call him at a number which happens to be a telephone booth. Sure enough, it does when it gets wedged in a man-hole cover. Sure enough, just then, a giant named Willie emerges from the shadows, grunting angrily but then suddenly breaking into a happy song ("Fee Fi Fo Fum") and bouncing a ball about while demonstrating rather amazing powers like flight, invisibility, and shapeshifting. Sure of himself, the millionaire promises to give the st Bernard to Tommy if it wins. Sure, he's slept with lots of them, including the excruciatingly obnoxious Tammie (Tori Spelling). Surprised and pleased, Elle plays along, leaving at midnight when she receives a text from uncle Allen. Surprised but pleased, Isolde asks for the money to be repaid for preparations for the baby. Surprising Don with a visit, mrs Baker sees that Don has attached himself to Jill. Susan (Joan Crawford), a flighty society matron, returns from Europe earlier than expected waxing enthusiastic about a new religious movement. Susan Manning Middlecott is dean of a New England school called Benton College and it is her whole life, apart from living with dad Mark and raising an adopted daughter, Louisa. Susan Miller (Gene Tierney) works as a girdle salesgirl in a big department store. Susan also arrives, determined to win Mark to a real marriage. Susan also insults Irene by telling her that she's unsuited for her lover, Mike (Bruce Cabot). Susan becomes popular with the young students, especially cadet Clifford Osborne, unaware he is the son of the client who prompted her to quit her job. Susan believes that Alec is a publicity seeker, rejecting his attempts to explain. Susan confesses that it was all arranged by her friends, including Dorothy. Susan consents and agrees to spend the summer with the family, thus making Blossom very happy. Susan eventually confesses to Mark that she just likes that combination. Susan feels neglected and has been trying to make Philip jealous by demonstrating a romantic interest in Henry, who begins taking her seriously. Susan had been abandoned by her mother and was arrested for vagrancy and hitting a sailor over the head with a beer bottle. Susan is an intelligent 17-year-old high-school student with a habit of forming short-lived interests after hearing the regular guest lectures at the school. Susan is livid, hits Alec with her purse and Teddy makes sure their spat makes the newspapers. Susan is miffed and boards a train to Boston to confront him. Susan refuses to sign the annulment papers, while Mark still will not consummate the marriage. Susan returns home, but continues to fantasize about Philip, much to the dismay of her fiancé Will Duffy (Richard Fiske). Susan sees an opportunity to experience life among the rich, and wear the expensive clothes she could never afford. Susan tells

Harvey that as her step-father Brian has been more of a father to her in the last few years than he has, she is going to ask him to give her way at her wedding. Susan tells him all the reasons that they should stay married and pulls him into the bedroom. Susan wants him back and is willing to break up his marriage if that's what it takes. Susan's aunt, Elizabeth Random, arrives. Susan's brother, Mark, has sent her a tame leopard from Brazil named Baby (Nissa) to give to their aunt. Susan's dad takes a shine to Alec and wants to encourage her to find time for a love life. Susan's dream of a second honeymoon turns into a nightmare when everything that possibly could go wrong does. Susan's job is now in jeopardy from the continuing bad publicity. Susan, thinking that Trent too is leaving, gets on the train, but Em, seeing that Susan loves Trent so much that she is willing to give up everything for him, stops the train and points out Trent, riding toward them on his horse. Susan, who during a police interview contrived to sneak out a window, unwittingly drags the irritated circus leopard into the jail. Susie Higgins (Pamela Tiffin) arrives and moves in with her old friend Maggie Williams (Carol Lynley) and roommate Fran Hobson (Ann-Margret). Susie comforts her by informing her about her engagement to Emilio. Susie experiences a culture shock, when she is informed by Maggie and Fran that all rich, attractive men are taken, and all attractive but poor ones are too proud to take on American women. Susie is stood up by Emilio on an afternoon when she is scheduled to meet his mother (Isobel Elsom). Susie sets out to make Emilio believe that she is falling for him. Susie, whose emotional pain and insecurities have healed somewhat with time and effort, builds a happy relationship with John, and a pregnant Franny asks them to raise her and Junior's impending baby. Suspecting that Lena will leave him if she finds out about the phone-sex fiasco, Barry leaves Lena at the hospital and tries to end the harassment by calling the phone-sex line back and speaking to the "supervisor", who turns out to be Dean Trumbell, who is also the owner of a mattress store. Suspicious, Brad takes a taxi, but gets out a short distance away and returns to his suite. Sutter Keely (Miles Teller) is a high school senior, charming and self-possessed. Sutter and Aimee begin to get serious, having sex for the first time, and Sutter buys Aimee a flask as a gift when they attend prom. Sutter asks her to have a drink with him, but Cassidy soon leaves with her new boyfriend Marcus (Dayo Okeniyi), so Sutter returns to Aimee. Sutter crashes into his mailbox after a night of heavy drinking and tearfully breaks down in front of his mom, saying he is exactly like his father and that he is an awful person, but his mother assures Sutter he is not like his father as he has the biggest heart of anyone she knows. Sutter helps her with her paper route and ultimately invites her to lunch and asks her to teach him geometry to get closer to her. Sutter honestly states that he does not feel he is capable of keeping such a promise and shakes a disappointed and concerned Dan's hand. Sutter invites Aimee to a party, but temporarily loses interest when he sees Cassidy. Sutter is forced to pay the tab and wait for his dad to return, but after waiting for an hour, they return to the bar to see that Sutter's dad has forgotten about them and is back to drinking with his friends. Sutter suggests he pay them a visit, but Cassidy declines, telling him she must stay out of his influence for her own good. Sutter teaches Aimee to stand up to her mom and the two kiss. Sutter's father (Kyle Chandler) shares similar hedonistic views of life as Sutter, but after revealing that he left his mother (instead of being kicked out as Sutter had thought previously), he leaves to go off with a woman. Sutter, lacking the commitment to take Aimee to prom, avoids her until Aimee's friend Krystal (Kaitlyn Dever) tells him not to treat Aimee badly as she is a genuinely good person. Sutter, taking her advice, asks Aimee to dinner with his married sister Holly (Mary Elizabeth Winstead), where Aimee talks frankly about the death of her father and her dreams of a perfect marriage, charming everyone, including Sutter. Sutton loves it, then rejects all the applicants until he decides that Janice herself must return to be "Mrs. Suzanne finds herself now being courted also by the two brothers' father, who has fallen for the charming former waitress head over heels. Suzanne starts betting on horse races, using her "lucky pin" to pick the right ones for the infamous and not always apt gambler Jonathan Tuttle (Frank Darien). Suzanne takes the money to Bill, offering him to use them to scale up his business, but once again his pride comes in the way. Suzanne's problem is that Bill doesn't want to decide on a wedding date. Suzy Bishop, also 12, lives on the island with her parents, Walt and Laura, both attorneys, and her three younger brothers in a house called Summer's End. Suzy and her brothers are called to dinner. Suzy's parents take her home and when Sharp contacts the foster parents he is told that they no longer wish to house Sam. Suzy's parents, Scoutmaster Ward, the Scouts from Camp Ivanhoe, and Island Police Captain Duffy Sharp find Sam and Suzy in their tent at the cove. Sweetland overhears this and orders Ash to saddle his horse because he is going to try number four on the list, Mercy Bassett, a barmaid at a local inn. Swift arrives at the casino pretending to be Aggie Bruno's love interest. Swift suggests that Aggie be "caught" with another man. Swift suggests that Wattles dress as a woman in order to avoid being found by the gambler. Sybil (Diane Keaton), who originally refused Everett's request for his grandmother's ring, reconsiders her position and offers it to him; but, by now, his feelings for Meredith have shifted to her sister. Sybil asks Axler whether he would be willing to kill her husband and he tells her he fears he would "botch the job". Sybil explains that they are one family and that Polly went to school with Jean, and has known them for years. Sybil, however, doesn't notice his odd behaviour, as she tells Basil that she has heard a burglar downstairs. Syd comes to Dex's house to console him, and they end up sleeping together. Sydney White (Amanda Bynes) is the daughter of a plumber, Paul White (John Schneider). Sydney congratulates Kid and tells him that Veda is good for him. Sydney fails to become a member of Kappa when Rachel humiliates her in the pledge gala and lies that she has disobeyed the rules: lying about her background and cheating on a Kappa quiz. Sydney finds Lenny (Jack Carpenter), one of the seven dorks who live in a run-down house known as the Vortex. Sydney is then picked by Rachel to ditch her date, which ended in Lenny paying. Sydney leaves that night in the rain, unintentionally sitting in front of the Vortex. Sydney replaces him as a presidential candidate and starts her campaign. Sydney wins the debate and the election, becoming the new president, while Rachel is stripped of her Kappa sisterhood by her sisters because of the years of cruelty she has treated. Sydney's speech defends the underrated people, including dorks, and concludes by stating that she herself is a dork. Sydney's tomboyish upbringing proves to be an asset as she stands out among the other girls and manages to overcome the difficult initiation tasks. Sydney, together with the seven dorks, tries to bring Rachel down from her student council position by running Terrence for president. Sylvester also makes a success of his uncle's business by introducing modern business methods. Sylvia Brenner (Constance Bennett) is a plain secretary sharing an apartment with two other girls, one of whom is her friend Annie (ZaSu Pitts). Sylvia Dennis (Rogers) questions him. Sylvia Scarlett (Katharine Hepburn) and her father, Henry (Edmund Gwenn), flee France one step ahead of the police. Sylvia finds him and pleads for him to come back to the Studio but returns without him. Sylvia gives Karel blankets to sleep on the roof, and she explains about the Depression. Sylvia goes to court for Frank. Sylvia impersonates Lili's version of the song and ends with an imitation of Lili's tantrums. Sylvia says no but changes her mind. Sylvia says no. Sylvia tells Karel that she and Frank are leaving. Sylvia tells Nora that she is quitting so that she can accompany her husband, Phil Vernon (Allyn Joslyn), whose job requires him to move to Washington. TJ, Kat's cousin also apparently enjoys a moment with Woody after the wedding. Ta-Da is announced as the winner of the contest and Spectacular. Tad is overjoyed and convinces her to come to

LA with him by using Pete's "six smile" speech. Tadd shows up to take her out, and she confronts him about what he did to her, but he is scornful and unrepentant. Taken aback, Rosemary replies she doesn't think she is ready for love, but is really happy to see Gabe. Taken aback, she sends him to get the approval of her father, a tough, hardworking steel magnate. Taken off the train, Robert reconciles with her. Taking a taxi home, they discuss what to do to avoid a scandal. Taking advantage of the canine DNA that crossed with Buddy's, Sherman uses the tennis ball to play fetch. Taking her belongings, she picks up Ariel from school and works another shift. Taking his gun, she runs to the cabin and confronts her father, while Mayhew holds Robert at gunpoint. Taking pity on her as she is about to be kicked out by security, Jake (Jason Sudeikis) claims her as his guest. Taking pity on him, hotel concierge Rachel (Mila Kunis) offers him an expensive suite for free in exchange for cleaning up the room himself. Taking the advice of colleague Barb (Holly Hunter), she looks at his Palm Tungsten C and its record of the names and numbers of three ex-girlfriends: a French supermodel (Josie Maran); a gynecologist (Rashida Jones); and a cook (Julianne Nicholson). Talking about their different points of views and stances on relationships, Eleanor reveals that she is secretly dating a commitment-free married man. Tallulah Winters is a dancing star who is hired to perform on an ocean liner. Tamara Drewe, a young gossip columnist has returned to her family home nearby. Tambrey "Tammy" Tyree (Debbie Reynolds) is a seventeen-year-old girl living in a houseboat in Mississippi (within sight of Louisiana) with her Grandpa, John Dintwitty (Walter Brennan). Tami, Mary's only friend serves as the fairy godmother. Tammi reveals to Royce that she had only used him to win the contest and breaks up with him. Tammy and her grandfather help Peter recover at their home, during which time Tammy falls in love with Peter. Tammy learns that Peter is busy with "Brentwood #6", an experimental tomato he is growing in hopes of making Brentwood Hall self-sustaining once again. Tammy, the only girl boxer in the gym and subsequently the object of much ridicule, confides to him after beating him in a match that she knows about his practicing, and promises to keep it a secret in exchange for ceasing the jokes about her, particularly around Chuck, whom she has a crush on (which is reciprocated). Tangaballi catches Rahul as he tries to leave, but the villagers help them escape again. Tangaballi challenges Rahul to a duel that Rahul unknowingly accepts, due to his lack of knowledge in Tamil. Tank Martin, who is now flying with the United States Air Force Thunderbirds air demonstration team. Tansy chances to meet American Cornelius Allingham (Rad Fulton) at her father's office. Tanzania "Tanzie" (Hilary Duff) and Ava (Haylie Duff), two rich, spoiled Hollywood socialite sisters who enjoy material things such as shopping and dating, rather than caring about the family cosmetics company Marchetta Cosmetics which was founded by Victor Manchetta (Philip Casnoff). Tanzie, on the other hand, takes her father's TiVo which had a recording of her father talking about his cosmetics on the news and doesn't grab any clothes. Tash (Claudia Karvan) is a science journalist for a national newspaper, studious, intense and self-conscious. Tash has to try to keep Brett's high-profile career on track. Tash is still trying to write serious scientific articles for a paper more interested in gossip and sex and struggling to prevent her articles being buried on page 12. Tash tells him: 'I wish you could be me, so you could see how I feel for once. Taylor (Alyson Michalka) and Courtney Callum (Amanda Michalka) are two thoroughly spoiled yet well-intentioned sisters whose widower father, Reed Callum (Jack Coleman), owns Callum Dairy. Taylor Worth is a devastatingly handsome and charming weatherman for a Philadelphia television station. Taylor and Courtney are at a meeting with the other employees when Taylor tricks Courtney into leaving to get her cell phone, she says that she will get the money, but still no one believes her. Taylor and Gabriella invite Ryan to the baseball game, where he persuades the Wildcats to take part in the talent show ("I Don't Dance"). Taylor faces humiliation of her own when Brock informs her their relationship is over, and that he only used her to increase his own popularity (which proves successful with the producers of MTV offering him his own show). Taylor first needs to break it off with Erin, disappointing her desire to start a family, which he does by pretending to be impotent. Taylor goes to Las Vegas and locates Amanda and realizes that, even though she is involved in a dangerous profession, she has accumulated wealth and retained a relatively refined attitude about life. Taylor has changed her nature and asks Courtney if she can use her party money to pay for the employees' paychecks, or else they will leave Callum Dairy. Taylor has just gotten her license, after almost failing the test at the beginning of the movie. Taylor is dumped by his fiancees. Taylor is then crowned Prom Queen with just over half the votes; she begins a long berating speech which is interrupted by the microphone being turned off by a teacher. Taylor makes up a serious-sounding name for the condition and gives Fini a shot to cure it (which she reveals to Fini's business manager is harmless vitamin B12). Taylor takes the bet, putting up his weekend cabin against a valuable painting that Ned and Clair Broudy own. Team captain Troy rallies the team's spirit ("Now or Never") and, with the help of new transfer Jimmie "Rocket-man" Zara, the Wildcats win the championship game which is the last one for the seniors on the squad at East High. Tearful and elated, the Tramp smiles at the girl shyly as the film fades to black. Tears streaming down his face, Gary drives home alone, emotionally broken and defeated. Ted (Chester Morris), Jerry (Norma Shearer), Paul (Conrad Nagel), and Dorothy (Helen Johnson) are part of the New York in- crowd. Ted Barclay (Chad Everett), the son of Roger Barclay, takes a special interest in Maggie. Ted Barclay decides to fly out to Paris to win Maggies heart once and for all. Ted Scott (John Payne) is a band pianist whose publicity manager decides that, for good press, the band should adopt a foreign refugee. Ted also swings a deal with the Fire Department to supply costumes for the fireman's ball. Ted and Bryce leave it up to Cliff to deal with the jocks. Ted and Jerry have been married three years when she discovers he had a brief affair with another woman and when she confronts him on their third anniversary, he tells her it did not "mean a thing". Ted and Regi confess to each other that they intend to marry for money. Ted and Regi play fun pranks on each other. Ted and his gang get in but they make a big mistake by knocking over the jocks' beer can pyramid. Ted confronts Healy and Tucker, and Mary is accosted by Dom, who is revealed to be her former boyfriend "Woogie," who "got weird on her" back in college, stealing all her shoes. Ted is hypocritically outraged and they argue, ending with Ted leaving her and the couple filing for a divorce. Ted seems to have won Mary's love, until an anonymous letter exposes his connection with Healy, and she breaks contact with him. Ted's boss reports the car stolen, and in an unfortunate event, they crash into a police car, resulting in their arrest. Ted's friends filmed Ted and Caroline making out. Ted, however, asks to be released from their engagement. Teddy accidentally falls asleep at Buzzy's cabin and stays overnight. Teddy plants a story that Alec is the real father of Susan's little girl. Teglash revisits his prior dream, but this time the knife falls from the clock and Angelina stabs him with it. Tej Puri (Rajat Kapoor), Lalit's wealthy brother-in-law, arrives. Tej's wife protests "For such a small thing. Television stations also want to interview Jane. Tellman then follows the sisters on a family outing to the Eiffel Tower, where he corners them and pulls a gun, demanding an opportunity to explain to an absent Roxy why he killed her husband. Tempers rise following the arrival of ex-wife and Cole campaign spoiler Charlotte. Templeton later recognizes Jennifer at the research laboratory and hires her for a new full-time assignment: to be his biographer and write his life story. Temptation is naturally there, but Hogan does his best to prevent David and Robin from consummating their relationship. Ten months later, Harper and Lance are closer than ever and Harper has written Lance's biography. Ten years ago, they all acted together in a Cambridge University student comedy troupe. Ten years before the novel begins he took out a forty-year lease on a dilapidated but beautiful castle, hoping to find either inspiration or isolation there. Ten years later, Chris has lost weight, is handsome, and lives in Los Angeles; he is a womanizer who has dated supermodels, starlets, and socialites, works as a highly successful record producer and also holds a position of senior vice president of the same record corporation he works for. Ten years later, Hannah and Tom are best friends. Tenley follows him out and he asks her to meet him on the field after the game. Tenley's dad (Bruce Davison) smugly tells her that he invited her ex boyfriend to come visit. Tennessee, however, believes certain inanimate objects to have hearts and minds of their own and tries to befriend the car, naming it Herbie. Tension increasingly builds at home as the two battle each other in court. Terence and Jeremy, who are witnesses of the kiss, are shocked that she prefers a pennyless attorney over them. Teri returns home, to be envied her adventure by her friend Marianne (Helen Vinson). Terri Fletcher (Hilary Duff) is a teenager with a passion for singing and dreams of becoming a professional singer. Terri Griffith (Joyce Hyser) is an aspiring teenage journalist living in Phoenix, Arizona who feels that her teachers don't take her school newspaper articles seriously because of her good looks. Terri and Jay then perform the song they wrote with Terri, dedicating it to Paul. Terri arrives in Los Angeles and weathers some difficult ordeals: her jacket is stolen, her cab driver is crabby, and when she arrives at the music school, the door is locked; fellow student Jay (Oliver James) lets her in and Terri arrives safely. Terri awakens in the hospital, where she learns that Paul was killed. Terri is very close to her elder brother Paul (Jason Ritter) who fully supports her dream, despite what their dad says. Terri loses interest in her singing, and also in the music program. Terri sneaks Paul out of the house to attend a Three Days Grace concert. Terri's teachers hope to see her next year; Simon replies that they just might. Terrified and once again surrounded by Azhagusundaram's sickle-wielding henchmen, Rahul pretends to take Meena hostage and escapes with her in her father's car, battling Azhagasundaram's men. Terrified of having a child and being a parent, Samuel sees Mathilde's pregnancy as a nightmare. Terrified of scandal, he leaves her some money and his business card, along with a note telling her to not mention their meeting to anyone; but when Mabel discovers that Horace is Barbara's father, she blackmails him into backing Jimmy's show. Terrified, Mike tries to get Amanda back, but she is happier without him and humiliates him in front of everyone at the party. Terry and Bobby skate their routine and win. Terry becomes jealous when Amarilly starts hanging out with Gordon, and he breaks off the engagement. Terry decided to run away. Terry departs, and moments later Consuelo receives a call from Tony and invites him to the house. Terry finally confronts Dianne about her infidelity; she reveals that she has been having an emotional affair and begs for forgiveness. Terry gets reprimanded and punched by her father for her running away, as well as for hanging out with her radical friends. Terry goes home and has a row with her mother. Terry later finds romance with the "new" Jenny. Terry wants to pay him to teach her how to skate for the Roller Disco contest. Tess Harding (Katharine Hepburn) and Sam Craig (Spencer Tracy) are journalists for the fictional New York Chronicle, with two drastically different backgrounds and worlds. Tess McGill (Melanie Griffith) is an Irish American working-class stockbroker's secretary from Staten Island with a bachelor's degree in Business from evening classes. Tess also rushes off, leaving her appointment book, which Katharine reads. Tess arrives alone, only to be told that her aunt and her father are to be married that night, after 15 years of "making the same mistake" and saying nothing of their mutual attraction. Tess confronts Katharine and starts to tell everyone her side of the story. Tess enters Sam's Riverside home the next morning and starts to prepare breakfast. Tess happily agrees, and they reconcile. Tess insists they work together as colleagues, showing she will be very different from Katharine. Tess is an educated, well-travelled political affairs columnist who speaks several languages fluently. Tess is excited but trepidatious about Sam's reaction. Tess learns that she has received the award of "America's Outstanding Woman of the Year", to be awarded at a gala ceremony. Tess offends him by asking if anyone would believe he could find something more important to do. Tess overhears Katharine asking Jack to confirm his love for her, but he avoids answering and hurries out. Tess pretends to like the same things that George does to get him to like her. Tess protests but leaves, apologizing. Tess reveals that the reason she stayed in New York was because she got fired from her job and her boyfriend dumped her; she explains that when she met George she'd tried to be like Jane since she fell in love with him. Tess sets up a meeting with executive Jack Trainer (Harrison Ford), using her boss's name as an entrée. Tess starts her new job, armed with a lunchbox prepared by Jack. Tess suggests that a client, Trask Industries, should invest in radio to gain a foothold in media. Tess then gets angry at Jane for giving Kevin material about her, whom he describes as a bridezilla. Tess then invites Sam to her apartment later that night. Tess wants to explain her true situation but keeps quiet after learning Jack has been in a relationship with Katharine, which he says is all but over. The True Directions program involves the campers admitting their homosexuality (step 1), rediscovering their gender identity by performing stereotypically gender-associated tasks (step 2), finding the root of their homosexuality through family therapy (step 3), demystifying the other sex (step 4), and simulating heterosexual intercourse (step 5). The Tsar, as all other rulers, has to leave. The Tsar, having fallen in love with Christel, uses the visiting card, in order to visit her in her business. The Vortex is coincidentally the target of Rachel's plan to open a luxury center that will benefit only the top Greek sororities and fraternities. The Waponis treat them to a grand feast. The Warner Bros. The Waverlys leave the house for the helicopter, taking Chaz with them. The Wheelers invite them to a rodeo, but the Morgans are at loggerheads, so they decline. The Wildcats and Chad forgive Troy for his absence and convince him to sing in the talent show, which he does only under the condition that they are all allowed to perform as well. The Wonder Circus comes to a town in the Midwest with its featured attraction, Jumbo the elephant. The Young Kieslowski is a relationship comedy about Brian Kieslowski and Leslie Mallard, both undergraduates at Caltech, and both socially awkward virgins. The Zetas then feel guilty, and decide to give themselves a second makeover, this time being "Half-Shelley and Half-Themselves". The actions and attitude of Chipper, with whom Franny is in love, are contrasted with those of her rescuer, Junior Jones, a black member of the team. The actress Susan (Susan Petry) is in love with the video producer Gil (Everado Gil), but he is in love with the model Toya (Toya Cho). The actress soon tires of her frivolous life and returns to Crooning Water, where she too is forgiven, and then returns to London to marry the doctor. The advertisement has been placed by Helen Cooper, a thirtysomething bisexual art gallerist who is seeking a lesbian relationship to replace her unsatisfying and meaningless sex with men. The advice of Samuel's friend, Marc, a womanizer and a bachelor, does not help Mathilde's anxiety. The advice repeatedly backfires, always leaving Danny depressed. The aforementioned overweight client, Fluisa, shows up, comes between the two men, and saves Deuce's life (she is not killed because the bolt hits her breasts, between which she has hidden a roast chicken). The afternoon continues in a downward spiral. The age-gap between Brett and him is made clear through their different lifestyles, such as his lack of understanding how to use a Blackberry and Brett taking him to a candy shop. The aggressive, extremely obsessed, and equally snobby Britt and air-headed Bree serve as the two stepsisters, and Joey Parker, now a famous celebrity and pop star has returned to school for his senior year and to remember why he started dancing, acts as Prince Charming. The airline arrives with the luggage that Greg lost, but it turns out to not be his, and while Greg is on the phone attempting to solve the issue, he accidentally causes Jinx to get loose. The airplane is Rs house where he can have some privacy, and hoard the interesting objects he finds. The aliens need to save their planet, Nil, from an energy crisis. The alternate scene is she has backup dancers and she bounces and shows off her dance moves until she shakes her massive booty right to them for them to scream and knocks them over with her right and left buttcheek to end it. The alternate-future Otávio disappears, as well as the original-future João and spaceman-João. The ambassadorship is accepted by Ron, who departs for Celeste's world in a spaceship served by several flight attendants, all of whom look like Princess Stéphanie. The angel advises Susan to take a greater interest in Lorenzo's career, so she agrees to accompany him on a camping trip to test the revolutionary new insecticide he's developed. The angel comes back to see him, finally confirming that it was her original intention to take him to heaven. The angel leaves once again, leaving Kate in Purgatory. The angel's superior, mr Jordan (Claude Rains), confirms this, but since there is no more body, Joe will have to take over a newly dead corpse. The angered voodoo spirits claim Facilier himself as payment for his debts and drag him to Hell. The anguished Karl signs the document for the wedding. The animal is then moved into a travel crate and carried on a third truck, driven by Brandy. The announcement that Lola is pregnant pushes him to the brink, making living under the same roof next to impossible for all three, but after a lot of acting out and flippant commentary Hlynur begins to see life little differently. The area is threatened with extinction due to exploitation of Morel skin smugglers and his foreman Juarez. The area suffers from political corruption and the police are on strike. The arrest deepens the Kids's resentment of Danny, even though Danny insists that they be released. The arrival of the boys, however, changes things, and in addition to being set free George wins Dolly. The article is seen by Ira Grushinsky (Ian McNeice), a diplomatic representative of a small Eastern European country called Slovetzia (bordered by Hungary, Romania, and Ukraine), a country she never heard of. The atmosphere between Phileine and the other people is hostile at the Gala. The attacker and his gang flees to avoid the dangerous scene when the cops' siren signals are heard nearby. The attorney returns to New York City, where he promptly is fired. The attraction the two men feel for one another is instantaneous and propels the rest of the plot forward. The audience is introduced to the ritzy country club crowd, including the WASP-y Lester (Ed Begley, Jr) and the roguish rake Halsey (John David Carson). The audience vibrates with the mess and play Quartet. The aunts become drunk through the machinations of the gigolos and when the club is raided they manage to escape with their aid. The author is the Sommerfields' young maid Martha Lindstrom (Marsha Hunt). The auto mechanic takes one last shot at the lucrative robbery with his Irish cohort to pay off his debts. The awkwardness is ended when the event MC announces the reunions "king and queen". The baby doll then attacks the investigator and the scene cuts to black. The bachelor party goes into full force as Paddy gets ready to be social again, finally removing his wedding ring. The back half (carrying Tennessee and the engine) crosses the line just ahead of Thorndyke, while the front (carrying Jim and Carole) rolls over the line just behind, meaning Herbie takes both first and third place. The bad night continues when he goes to see Tenley at home, meets her ex-boyfriend, and is embarrassed by her parents in front of him. The bag is able to create any object, such as diamonds and designer dresses almost instantaneously. The bag is later pulled out of the water by two passing fishermen, who take Rover back to shore and place him in the back of their pickup truck. The bailiff instructs him to remain in Crystal's mansion to keep an eye on the seized property until the next day, but also to provide any reasonable assistance to the woman. The ball appears to be inside a castle. The ball is covered with the new formula, which takes Buddy back to an infantile state and eventually to a glowing mass of genetic material. The ball, thrown in the ocean by Number 2, is retrieved. The balloon takes off while they argue. The band continues with the production number and accompanies Dorothy Dandridge and The Nicholas Brothers in their song and dance routine. The band goes to Ellis Island to meet the girl and soon discovers that the refugee isn't a 10-year-old child, but a young woman, Karen Benson (Sonja Henie). The band is intrigued by Doris and invite her backstage, where they spend a fun evening meeting young artists in the area. The band members are hurt by this discovery, as it means she did not genuinely like them, but they decide to go on nonetheless, with Sa5m taking over as lead singer. The band then shows up and fires up the crowd with an upbeat ska version of "Everything I Own". The band's lead singer, Eugene Hütz, portrays the main character a character with a philosophical attitude towards life. The band, which also includes a bass player (Ethan Embry), adopts the name "The Oneders" (pronounced "wonders", but often mispronounced "oh-NEE-ders"). The bank sends Dodd to Hollywood as the new head of the studio. The banker immediately rushes to her rescue and Claire's mission is accomplished. The bar is a popular spot for patrons looking for one night stands as well as streetwalkers looking for potential johns. The bar's owner, Lucy, takes a shine to the plucky newcomer and gives her a job as a waitress. The bass player (who was leaving to join the United States Marine Corps in a few weeks) goes to Disneyland with a group of Marines and never returns; he is replaced in the broadcast by a session bassist. The battle soon begins, though at the conclusion of the movie, Shante and Keith get back together. The beam of the redesigned laser has unlimited range and produces an estimated six megawatts of power, exceeding the original requirement. The beautiful Princess Veronica (Hedy Lamarr) travels to New York City to find the American newspaper columnist she fell in love with six years earlier. The best man is none other than her former fiancé, who unexpectedly dumped her two years ago. The bewildered Victor learns the story of how Emily, his new bride, was murdered years ago by an unknown criminal on the night of her secret elopement. The big city does not work out for either of them, and when Eddie finds Perry working in a Coney Island girlie show, he pulls her out and they find happiness together, buying a ranch back in Texas. The bishop, who is writing a book on the history of marriage, suggests that Edith and Cecil should revive the Roman concept of marriage by contract, but he thinks a traditional marriage is better. The black market is raided by the authorities, and he is rounded up with the rest. The blind woman waits at the table for him to return. The blossoming romance is shaken, however, when Rahul is told that Sue was not only an escort, but a prostitute as well by a drunken friend at Bobby's bachelor party. The board members vote to accept his scheme and return control of the business to him. The body is hidden, and Joe returns to a ghostly existence. The bodybuilders take advantage of this unexpected attention to put on an impromptu posing routine for the crowd, and the members of the crowd join in, imitating the athletes' poses and enjoying themselves - an embracing of the bodybuilding lifestyle by 'normal' people which arguably represents the real-life 1970s boom of personal fitness. The bogus charge, brought by Consuelo in order to stop Terry from leaving, is dropped, and the two embrace. The book (and especially the film adaptations and its second sequel, Summer Switch) might be considered a modern retelling of Vice Versa, the 1882 novel by Anstey, in which the protagonists are a father and son. The book also contains some motifs that appear in almost all John Irving novels: bears, New England, Vienna, wrestling, people who are uninterested in having sex, and a complex Dickensian plot that spans the protagonist's whole life. The book closes on an ambiguous note, with Cassandra reminding herself that Simon has promised to return and closing her journal for good by reasserting her love for him. The book is regarded as legendary, but unfortunately has been damaged by the water. The book is serialized in the local newspaper, and the Literary Circle, led by outraged busybody Rebecca Perry (Spring Byington), forces the newspaper's owner Jed Waterbury (Thomas Mitchell) to stop printing the salacious installments. The book's main protagonist is Nicholas "Nick" Twisp, a 14-year-old boy of above-average intelligence from Oakland, California. The bookstore closes for summer holidays, and Don and Prudence leave on a bus tour, where Prudence grows closer to Don as she understands his passion to become an architect. The bottle changes hands several times as the parties race across Europe from the Scottish Highlands to Èze. The boys almost get arrested by two cops due to Stacey's broken taillight. The boys explain that it was an attempt to make Jim seem like a hero that went wrong, and Michelle's parents accept this and tell him that if he puts that much effort into the upcoming marriage, she can give her blessing. The boys finally make it to the wedding and Roland apologizes to a furious Lisa for leaving her worried. The boys go on a road trip when they discover there is only one designer who makes the dress that Michelle wants. The boys have a friendly game of football, though Pam tries to tell Jason about Claudine and Geneva's secret. The brain is the best part, because if they eat it, then they can relive the memories, feelings, and thoughts of their prey. The bridesmaids put their best-laid plans in motion only to see them go outrageously awry. The broke British card counter Charles "Charlie" Beck (Jason Isaacs) arrives in town to stay with and mooch off some wealthy friends and gamble at the local casino. The broker goes up to the actress, Anna, and introduces himself which spawns a romantic relationship. The brother offers to show him the way, but stops at every shop in search of a pistol to shoot the unsuspecting Willie. The brothers fight and a gun accidentally discharges, wounding Stephen. The brothers have been named alphabetically from the Old Testament in order of birth: Adam, Benjamin, Caleb, Daniel, Ephraim, Frank (short for frankincense, the Old Testament having no names beginning with F), and Gideon. The brothers tell Bang Bang to set off a small explosive in Prague Castle that will trigger the fire alarm, allowing Penelope to sneak in and steal the book. The brothers will masquerade as antiques dealers and target Penelope Stamp, a rich, socially-isolated heiress who lives alone in a New Jersey mansion. The budding relationship between Tony and Amelia is further complicated when Julius' brash son Paul (William Orr) discovers that Tony has been mailing company checks to Amelia, unaware that these "scholarship" checks were mailed at his father's request. The building is evacuated as both Nick and Russell volunteer to stay behind to handle the daunting task of landing all the planes on approach in their airspace before the alleged bomb is set to go off in 26 minutes. The businessman changes his mind about George's initial proposal. The butler overhears, and soon the joyous "news" has spread to the village. The butler, his old former servant, sees him do this. The butler, who was previously indifferent to Joan's affections for him, now finds himself falling in love with her. The butterflies are free. The cab driver, Paulo, takes him to a fairly run down hotel. The cab falls into the river; Phil and the driver escape, but without the flash drive. The call brings up bad memories from his disastrous appearance there seven years earlier. The camera freezes on Daniel's face and zooms in, Lauren's last memory of Daniel until they can see each other again. The camera then pans to reveal to the audience that he's as usual naked below the waist. The captain and Number 3 reveal themselves to the police officers who stand down. The captain challenges Carl to a duel and easily kills the musician with his sword. The captain is her half-sister Patricia. The captain of the ship is Lancelot Spratt's brother (Robert Morley). The captured animals are held in pens in the compound, tended by native workers, until they are shipped out at the end of the hunting season. The car careens through the city to a brick-yard, where Richard picks up bricks, and then returns to the store. The car he wrecked turns out to be a loan. The car momentarily breaks down, prompting Cindy to run on foot. The career change forces her once again to borrow money from Hannah, a dependency that Holly resents. The carnival is destitute and menaced by loan sharks. The carriage transports the passengers to the Belle Époque, an era Adriana considers Paris's Golden Age. The case is dismissed when it is determined that all the shares are in the hands of a few people, not the general public; the Texans are bought out at a sizable premium. The cast also includes Ann-Marie MacDonald as Frances, the owner of a lesbian bookstore where Maggie works, and Peter Outerbridge as Judy, a trans woman with a crush on Frances. The cast and crew—particularly Gwen—are offended by the direction that Weidmann went with instead of sticking to the movie script and demands an explanation. The cat falls into a barrel of water under a rain-spout, while Pepé lands in a can of blue paint. The cat slides into the shop, hitting a bureau and causing a bottle of white dye to spill and run down her back and tail (a black cat acquiring a white, skunk-like stripe is a running gag in most Pepé Le Pew shorts). The cat smells Pepé's odor and immediately tries to run away, chased by Pepé. The catch is that if he wins the championship Stroker has to sell chicken for the next two years; if he loses is he out of the contract. The catch, which Charlie does not reveal to Herb until the ship has left port, is that they are required to work as dance hosts and must sleep in a cramped cabin in the bowels of the ship. The cause of the explosion is a mystery, with all crew accounted for with the exception of two unidentified stowaways. The ceremony passes and Elsie refuses to tell the Prince Regent details of the treasonous plot. The championship bout is refereed by boxing promoter and former champion Jack Dempsey (himself). The character is referred to on several occasions in the film as either "Ted" or "Farmer Ted", but is credited simply as "the Geek". The characters in the film spend much of their time trying to decipher the word "pompatus," wondering whether they are mis-hearing the lyrics: "Prophetess". The characters, Mark, a therapist (Jon Cryer); Runyon, a playwright (Tim Guinee); Josh, a playboy (Adrian Pasdar) and Phil, a plumber (Adam Oliensis), try (generally unsuccessfully) to sort out their troubled love-lives. The charade is finally revealed when the colonel and Don's mother meet. The charmingly self-deprecating Pete confesses he loves Gladys, acknowledges that his profile is not as good looking as Adams', and says goodbye. The chase continues until Pepé finds the cat on the windowsill. The chase results in the wave of bodybuilders pouring out into the streets of Birmingham, to the amazed crowd of onlookers which sees them. The child's mother, Amy (Shirley Jones), is an attractive widow, and Key develops an immediate interest in her. The children bond, finding in each other a confidante and kindred spirit. The choice of Eleanor is a dirty trick on Ned's part, inasmuch as she is already married. The choir assembles at Nikko's house every night to practice while still attending practices with Courtney every afternoon. The choir decides to make the most of its opportunity on the grand stage, and sings another song,

"Swinging on a Star". The circumstances and risks of the opportunity are unclear, but Ceghe becomes increasingly determined to make a fortune by stealing and selling the item. The circus troupe is sent to perform in New York City. The city council start making bold plans to expand the town, and both Rip and Mary feel ashamed of what they have done to change the town structure. The clairvoyant apparently had a vision in his sleep during Stiva's visit and gives Karenin a cryptic message that he interprets in a way such that he must decline the request for divorce. The class rushes to the concert to find Lizzie. The classmates applaud in approval at his romantic gesture. The clerks discover that due to the fathers of Bob and David fighting when the children were born, the two infants were mixed at the hospital with David being a Harrison and Bob being a Conway. The clever Don Elbie has invented a new rangefinder that he hopes to have adopted by the army. The clients include Carol, a woman who is severely narcoleptic, Ruth, who has Tourette Syndrome with coprolalia, and therefore is afraid of socializing, Fluisa, an obese woman weighing close to 750 pounds, and Tina, another woman has a pituitary gland disorder and is extremely tall. The climax comes at the eighth grade basket boys' luncheon, an auction in which boys are sold off to win money for charity. The climax of the film is Laughtons recitation of the Gettysburg Address in a saloon filled with rough Western characters who are held spellbound by the speech. The climax of the film takes place during The Funeral of Grimaldi, a jovial memorial service in which many clowns gather to celebrate the life of Joseph Grimaldi. The coffin is accidentally sent to Jamaica instead of London and the couple miss their plane. The conclusion of the agent scene is that Tad must clean up his act to convince a director to cast him in an upcoming film; the solution, a competition to win a date with Tad, is found out by Rosalee as she surfs the internet. The conclusion reveals thatS. The conference turns out to be an attempted seduction. The confrontation with Laida was a rude awakening for Miggy as well and he realizes why people are so put-off by him. The confusion created by the gun-happy gas station worker allows Al to escape unhurt. The confusion is heightened when Frances misunderstands her daughter's anguish and concludes that she must be pregnant by Paul. The conscientious Miss Partridge, discovering there is nothing for her to do, decides to write the stockholders herself. The contest stops as everyone flees the club, and Javier has to save Carlos from the police. The contrast between their two personalities is a source of comedy throughout the film until Lisa returns and tells him she wants to reconcile their relationship. The conversation brings Bridget and Greta closer together, and allows Bridget to reconcile with her father. The conversation is accidentally picked up and heard by many other people in the neighborhood. The conversation moves towards Jesse's experience in Iraq, but it is obvious that he does not want to talk about it (important later). The conversations between Wes and his guardian angel further help Wes to understand himself, and to realize the deeper meanings of life and the cosmic connections between eternity with Alison. The convicts Steinbock (Til Schweiger) and Hammer-Gerd (Detlev Buck) succeed in doing so. The cop tries to have him committed to the mental hospital, but Buster makes his escape with his camera intact. The cops show up and take her away. The counselor (Nancy Carell) remains sympathetic, while the other patients in the clinic laugh at Marla. The countess distracts Steve as much as she can to help Dan. The country tunes in each week to watch Beauregard, who appears with Caesar on the covers of Look and Life Magazines. The couple admit their love that evening but feel mismatched. The couple also are having to deal with their daughters; Sadie, a young teenager, and eight-year-old Charlotte. The couple are last seen happily together in a small plane taking off from Pittsburgh airport. The couple are later reconciled, realising that Moscow society life has had a negative, corrupting effect on Levin. The couple are reconciled and the President, accompanied by Wade, leaves to give his State of the Union Address. The couple become trapped in their masquerade as newlyweds when they run into Don's commanding officer, Colonel Michael Otley (Sydney Greenstreet), who lives just a few doors down with his wife. The couple bicker over domestic issues; Josh leaving the toilet seat up, Nat's inability to sing the right words to popular songs and their different definitions of the rubbish bin being full. The couple finally emerge from their rooms. The couple follow his advice and wed. The couple get a lift to her aunt's cabin from the policemen. The couple grow apart; Herb has an affair with one of Pippa's friends and middle-aged Pippa has encounters with a younger man named Chris. The couple have only enough money to clear their hotel bill and to book passage home to England on a tramp steamer. The couple head off to Niagara Falls to get married. The couple is overjoyed when Catherine starts using the same language they used previously and the principal dismisses them. The couple kiss and plan to marry. The couple kiss. The couple make their peace and profess love for each other, and then Anna smacks Edy for being stupid and not telling her sooner. The couple marry, have two children and later move into a retirement home in Connecticut. The couple meets up with Nora, and they flee to a roof where they see the battle between the Boneys and the Living. The couple moves to California, where Albert attaches himself to a famed Hollywood producer, who entrusts him to film a romantic script the producer has kept shelved for a long time. The couple rejoice at the situation, and immediately leave the party one after the other. The couple remain married from 1937 until 1942, when this story begins. The couple return to New York, where they attempt to divorce. The couple secure a nice Venetian hotel with the grudging financial help of Sarah's father. The couple stage an escape, Harry fighting off Aziz's men with an improvised flamethrower. The couple storm out of the hotel and each go their separate ways: Tom going back to the bar, where he meets American tourist Wendy, and Sarah going sightseeing, where Peter follows her. The couple suddenly run off to Atlantic City, with help from Ted. The couple takes one last desperate try to revive their passion and save their relationship. The couple then put up with each other's quirks over the next few months, eventually making it to their anniversary. The couple throw a dinner party to use their wedding gifts. The couple welcomes a baby girl (a boy in the alternate ending) and settle down happily together in a new apartment in Los Angeles. The couple's efforts include Ben making an awkward marriage proposal with an empty ring box, promising to get her one someday. The couple's spirited dancing brings down the house. The couples decide to resolve their problems, except for Bennett and Tish. The couples decided to have a memorial service for Gavin in the Bahamas. The couples then wed on stage at Neil Diamond's concert; Darren to Sandy, Wayne to Judith, andD. The court reporters seize upon the story, and the courtroom is packed with the elite of society. The cramped, dark and oddly furnished house in which Hlynur and his mother live features a bath which transfigures into a sofa as Hlynur steps naked out of it, in the middle of the lounge with his mother watching. The credits scene suggests that the two graduated from college and became a couple. The credits start rolling in yearbook-style, as in the original film. The crew goes to a bar to celebrate. The crew is stranded in the town after a member's motorcycle breaks down and has to be left at a local repair shop. The crew makes it to Mars, after Overbeck barks at Fred for being awake the whole time and using all the food, except food that the former despises (anchovy paste, creamed liver, and gefilte fish), for painting. The crew safely return to the Aries orbiting Mars. The crew then goes to Mordechai in Spittlefield Harbor. The crew then tries to sneak attack the Reaper, but Dawg counterattacks. The crooked mayor (Clarence Kolb) and sheriff need the publicity from the execution to keep their jobs in an upcoming election, so when a messenger (Billy Gilbert) brings them a reprieve from the governor, they try to bribe the man to go away and return later, when it will be too late. The crooks are captured, and an impressed Parsons gives Lambert his job back. The crowd, seeing his failure, turn on him, chasing him down the street. The cruel, self- obsessed, snobby, and washed-up pop singer Dominique Blatt takes the role of the stepmother, even though she is just her legal guardian and Mary's mother was one of Dominique's dancers when she died; Dominique took Mary in as her legal guardian and turned her into the hired help. The customer threatens to call the cops, so Slick whacks him over the head with a bottle. The customers, who witness the entire scene, promptly leave in disgust as well. The date does not go well, but Fini is persistent, visiting the hospital where dr Taylor works. The date progresses back to Sarah's house where they discover that neither has a condom. The date proves to be awkward: Jake shows up with a borrowed terrier and offends Sarah when he begins to analyze her profile. The daughter of a neighbor peeks in the window, sees what is happening, and quickly leaves. The daughter of wealthy and famous novelist Meg Swift, Mimi is a young woman who seems to have a perfect life. The day after her twenty-seventh birthday, she awakes to find a note, seemingly from Hugh Hefner, asking her to pack up and leave. The day after pledging to Kay that he will make certain that none of the in-laws will interfere again, Stanley drags Ellie to Kay's physician, dr Andrew Nordell, anxious over the "modern" ideas Nordell has about a more natural method of childbirth and infant care. The dead man's fortune is to be divided between the two children. The dead townspeople are unable to interfere with the affairs of the living. The dead, now able to intercede, happily drag the "new arrival" back to the Land of the Dead for retribution for his crimes. The deadline for payback is over and an extension of three days was given, during which she has to steal money from her father's account to save him from the investor's goons. The deal appears to be in jeopardy as Moran arrives with Charlie. The dean and the police come in to stop the party. The dean tells Kid, Play, Bilal and Jamal to clean up the faculty dining hall or they will face expulsion. The dean's assistant helps Kid with an extension and a job in the dining hall. The death of the family dog, Sorrow, provides dark comedy as he is repeatedly "resurrected" via taxidermy, literally scaring the family's grandfather to death at one point and foiling a sexual initiation of John's at another. The deception works, but once underway, his disguise is discovered, and he is arrested. The deception works: Joan opens the door and rushes to his side. The defense tries to use her past relationships to discredit her, but the judge allows her to cross examine the witnesses herself and in doing so she wins over not only the judge and jury, but also Jack. The denouement shows Vida and Wilder (the latter now wearing Vida's house arrest ankle monitor) watching Wallace on a successful Letterman reappearance as dr Napalm. The deputy director of that company, Debra, preys on the job of Richard and has come up with a plan to frame Richard for sabotage, in order to take over the company. The description declares she is voluptuous and that her dates "must love dogs" (Sarah is currently caring for her brother Michael's Newfoundland dog, "Mother Teresa", while he goes through his own marital problems). The designer agrees and purchases Maison Elegance from Sherwood, who assures Lynn he'll never get involved in another illegal activity if she returns to America with him. The desperate and self-loathing writer, Richard, begins to be awakened and inspired by the beautiful Gabrielle, and starts to come up with various scenarios for his screenplay, called The Girl Who Stole the Eiffel Tower, which is based on their unfolding romance. The device resembles a View-Master stereoscopic toy. The dilemma is further inflamed when Rose who by now is no longer angry with Celeste shows her a tabloid newspaper proclaiming that Montana is pregnant with Jeffrey's child. The dinner does not go well. The dinner is a disaster; Beardsley gets drunk, dr Crutcher thinks she is George's date, and Victoria is distant. The dinner is very enjoyable, with the two discussing old times. The director informs Cody that Diaz stole disks containing plans for a secret mind-control device, and sends Cody to recapTURE him. The director of the film company asked Qi-sheng to take over this work and continue to produce the film. The directors agree and the production is back on. The discovery leads him to pursue his romantic interest in Sara. The disguise works. The disguised Cinderella's 'fur slipper' was of unique appeal to the Prince who sought her thereafter through sexual congress (a variety of sources including Joan Gould). The disputed family painting of Saint Ursula by Georges de la Tour, rejected by the Louvre as worthless, sells for 45 million Euros, and because its ownership is no longer disputed on Claude-Henri's death, the money goes to the Walker family. The divorce is granted, but Marylin gets nothing, and Miles' ancient boss, Herb Myerson (Tom Aldredge), congratulates him. The doctor informs Georgina that she only has one egg left and that she'd be ovulating for four days. The doctor invites himself to the little soirée. The doctor says Charles might be paralyzed for life and asks if they should resuscitate him if things deteriorate. The doctor suggests that Jonah uses a sperm bank in the event that he would like to have children after the operation. The doctor takes the old man home to his patient wife. The doctor tells him he is not actually injured and has only "hit the wall". The doctor's office has called; they tell Phil his sperm is "no good". The dog angels are alerted of the horn's theft by Anabelle, the head angel (Bebe Neuwirth), who sends Charlie and Itchy to Earth to retrieve it, and gives them one miracle to use. The dogs are able to track down the wagon and scare the horses, causing the wagon to crash. The dogs return to the junkyard, where Scamp retrieves his collar and traps Buster under piles of junk, and the pack members abandon Buster to find owners. The dolls come alive and hold them hostage with guns, ordering them to keep driving. The don is also still demanding a large sum of money from Irene for her unauthorized activities in Nevada, which she doesn't want to pay. The novel begins with one of its most often-quoted lines: The novel opens with a scene that introduces Prince Stepan Arkadyevich Oblonsky ("Stiva"), a Moscow aristocrat and civil servant who has been unfaithful to his wife Princess Darya Alexandrovna ("Dolly"). The novel contains several framed narratives: Garp's first novella, The Pension Grillparzer; "Vigilance", a short story; and the first chapter of his novel, The World According to Bensenhaver. The novel details Konstantin's difficulties managing his estate, his eventual marriage, and his personal issues, until the birth of his first child. The novel ends in Florence, in melodramatic fashion, where George and Lucy have eloped without her mother's consent. The novel explores a diverse range of topics throughout its approximately thousand pages. The novel focuses on the narrator and protagonist Quentin "Q" Jacobsen and his neighbor Margo Roth Spiegelman. The novel has themes much more adult than the traditional story. The novel is based on Pride and Prejudice. The novel is divided into eight parts. The novel is evocative of the New Hampshire of Irving's childhood. The novel is set in Florence at the end of the Second World War. The novel opens with Jenny Bunn's arrival at her lodging-house. The novel opens with Mrs Bennet trying to persuade Mr Bennet to visit an eligible bachelor, Mr Bingley, who has arrived in the neighborhood. The novel races towards its climax and Ben also disappears, apparently having gone off with a pretty girl whom Boris did not recognize, but Ben appeared to trust without hesitation. The novel reveals that,

to start a war with the neighboring country of Guilder, Humperdinck himself had arranged Buttercup's kidnapping and murder, but that he now believes that Buttercup dying on her wedding night will inspire his subjects to war even more effectively. The novel was Farrelly's fledgling effort, and served as his thesis when he graduated from the creative writing program at Columbia University. The novel, The Girlfriend, is a success. The now-wealthy Hugo comes to visit Grimes, with Virgie in town. The nurse explains that Jonah falls into a small percentage of men whose sperm cannot be frozen because of biological complications. The pitch for his comic is a science fiction story about a war between alien invaders and humanity. The pixie puts forth a wand and transforms her rag outfit into a fancy dress. The plan backfires. The plan fails, as the music executive (William Frawley) brought on to hear the song does not believe it will sell. The plan is reluctantly accepted by the oldest daughter, Leilani, who believes the deception is because she and her siblings are not white. The plan seems to be working as John relentlessly chases after Kate, even going to her house in the middle of the night while talking to her on the phone at the same time (where Kate tells him that she needs to call the police because there is a stalker outside the house, and John drives away in panic, hitting a trash can). The plan works, and Amelia is told that her father, Donovan and Gilhooley were marooned on the Japanese-occupied island after their destroyer was sunk in World War II. The plan works, and she gets to keep her job. The plane lands safely, at which time Virginia learns that the "affair" was nothing more than a discreet flirtation. The plane then makes an odd turn, and Nick assumes that Russell is harassing him, or possibly going insane, by purposely directing the plane into a dangerous storm. The play consists of four interconnecting plots, connected by a celebration of the wedding of Duke Theseus of Athens and the Amazon queen, Hippolyta, which is set simultaneously in the woodland and in the realm of Fairyland, under the light of the moon. The play is a drama concerning racial prejudice involving mrs Jacoby, a Jewish widow from Brooklyn, New York, and Koichi Asano, a millionaire widower from Tokyo. The play is a flop, at least in part because the lead parts are given to two actors, Dana Coles and Jason Brett (Kathleen Turner and Chris Noth), who are

"not right" for the roles. The play is changed from an interception to a touchdown, and the Bulldogs win. The play is dreadful, and Avice is not much better. The play opens during a dinner party at the home of Sir Robert Chiltern in London's fashionable Grosvenor Square. The play opens with Hermia, who is in love with Lysander, resistant to her father Egeus' demand that she wed Demetrius, whom he has arranged for her to marry. The play quickly closes, much to his relief. The play shows the sexual side of society, so its played naked and shows sex and masturbation scenes. The playwright Beaumarchais (Lionel Atwill) returns to the Comédie-Française and attributes the remark to Garrick himself. The plot centers on a charismatic radio talk show host, Tom Avery (Bruce Greenwood), and his "mermaid researcher" girlfriend Fay (Emilia Fox). The plot closely follows the original Israeli film Eskimo Limon (Lemon Popsicle), and revolves around protagonist Gary (Lawrence Monoson), a typical high school student in early 1980s Los Angeles, and his friends Rick (Steve Antin), the slick ladies' man, and David (Joe Rubbo). The plot contains two parallel story lines: a professional-misconduct challenge brought against Praetorius by his more conventional colleague dr Rodney Elwell (Hume Cronyn), who dislikes Praetorius's unorthodox but effective methods; and the struggle of a distressed young woman named Deborah Higgins (Jeanne Crain), who falls in love with Praetorius while dealing with an out-of-wedlock pregnancy. The plot follows multiple intersecting stories. The plot is delivered in a number of lengthy flashbacks in the narrative of Forrest Gump (Tom Hanks) as he sits at a bus stop with a suitcase full of mementos in Savannah, Georgia in 1981. The plot is set in New York City over three days in the lives of 10 different characters who interact with each other in various sexual encounters which follows from one character to the next. The plot is unusual for its time in that Helen is not denigrated for her beliefs about marriage and Don is not depicted as being a cad. The plot of Stand-In concerns the takeovers of Hollywood studios that occurred during the Great Depression. The plot of the novel revolves around the title character Jane Spring, an attractive and intelligent 31-year-old Manhattan assistant district attorney and West Point general's daughter who grew up without a female role model and struggles to understand why she fails to 'keep' men in a relationship. The plot revolves around a contest – "Gays Gone Wild. The plot revolves around billionaire Jean- Marc Clement (Montand) who learns that he is to be satirized in an off-Broadway revue. The plot surrounds a confused bride Melissa (Prepon) who wakes hand-cuffed to a Mexican stranger who claims to be her husband; she has no recollection of the marriage after having consumed a Mexican "moonshine" drink and having forgotten the events that occurred the previous night. The plot terminates with the revealing of whether or not the dream lover of Xiao-jie's grandmother was her grandfather or the Taiwanese star Bao-long Wan. The plot then splits into two parallel universes, the other detailing what would have happened had she caught that train. The plot thickens when Marni's mother Gail (Jamie Lee Curtis) meets up with Joanna's aunt Ramona (Sigourney Weaver), Gail's former best friend who pushed her into a pool at their senior prom. The plot thickens when he switches identities with one of his clients (James Marsden) for a weekend, and the client's girlfriend dies in an accident. The plots come together in the end, with Peter developing a friendship with the daughter of a neighbor, having been introduced to the hope chest that she has, Christine and Richard displaying a show of mutual acceptance of their attraction to each other, and, as a final plot device, Robby finding that the noise he had awoken to early every morning was that of an early-rising businessman tapping a quarter on a street sign pole. The police are alerted. The police are called, but Robie has disappeared. The police arrest them, led by Rod Cannon (Scott Caan) but they escape and are hidden from the police by Bambi Cummings (Rachel Specter) at her sorority house, Tri-Pi. The police arrive in time to capture the rest of the gang. The police arrive when Michael recognizes one of the robbersthe one who threatened to cut off Julie's earsas a waiter at the club. The police authorized a sting operation on Seymour to tape Keith's conversation and to capture him. The police bring the whole group in. The police catch Bruno, but the inspector in charge recognizes him, much to Janet and Frost's shock, and all ends well. The police chief publicly announces that Foussard was the jewel thief, but, as Robie points out privately in the presence of the abashed Hughson, this would have been impossible because Foussard had a wooden leg, and could not climb on rooftops. The police come to apprehend Franky, believing she is a part of the gang, but she knows nothing of it. The police hover nearby. The police inspector, who is Nestor's superior, and the other policemen, have been aware of the prostitution, but tolerate it in exchange for bribes. The police man doesn't believe Andy's story when he tries to explain his business in the garden, and insists on taking him inside to get a confirmation from his parents. The police only came to question about the check Connie had written out to Steve. The police pursuit ends in a crash, and Zeebo and Wiploc are taken to the emergency room. The police track Dave down using the impression of his face found in the dirt at the crash site and they arrest him. The police, led by Pride, rescue Alan and Ina and arrest Bunmi. The policeman tries to follow, but cannot get past the first floor; in frustration, he shouts at Bill, "You'll do time for this. The popularity of Keppel's cafe allows him to move into the larger "Club Joyzelle". The popularity of his tale was due to his additions to the story, including the pumpkin, the fairy-godmother and the introduction of "glass" slippers. The potentate has her kidnapped and taken to his palace. The pragmatic Patsy sees the assignment as the opportunity Christy has been waiting for and counsels her to romance the heir before telling him of his good fortune. The pre-wedding party becomes a real-life version of Larry and Vickie's radio murder mysteries, werewolves and all. The premiere of The Dancing Cavalier is a tremendous success. The preparations for the marriage are under way

The prince and Cinderella get married, and spend the rest of their lives working as servants for Cinderella's step family, while the step sisters live happily ever after. The prince nevertheless insists on her trying. The prince then holds out the shoe he found, and places it on Cindy's foot. The prince was a risk taker, avoiding his parents' wishes for him to marry. The princess dismisses everyone, except for Jeff. The princess is happy and tells Jeff now she can marry him and not Kasim. The princess learns of this and decides to confront Franz. The princess sends Orville away to get ready for the wedding. The princess tells Kasim that Orville is the first husband, and when he dies, she'll happily marry Kasim and they will live in happiness. The princess' entourage are upset over news that she was arrested the night before. The principal characters are Lawrence, Ellie, Alan and Sara. The principal gives George two choices: he can be expelled, or he can make up all of the homework he has missed all year. The prize doubles with each successive question, in the style of the 1940s radio show The $64 Question. The problem is romance between boss and subordinate in a company is not allowed. The producer of the film learns that Tom has left the film, and he flies cross-country to New Jersey with actor Gil Shepherd (Jeff Daniels) (the "real life" actor playing the part of Tom in the movie). The production is beset with difficulties, including Lina's grating voice and strong New York accent. The productivity and atmosphere of the company thus also changed in a positive note. The professor goes on to tell her that she can at least say hi because the university needs funds. The professor is bitter, arrogant, self-absorbed and uninterested in his students; this does not help him when he parks illegally on campus, his car is impounded and does not pay his fine before getting to the college impound lot watched by a flunked former student. The professors are accustomed to working in relative seclusion at a leisurely pace with a prim housekeeper named Miss Bragg (Kathleen Howard) keeping watch over them. The professors eventually outwit Lilac and his henchmen and rescue Sugarpuss. The professors soon become enamored of her femininity, and she begins to grow fond of them. The program is called Bismark Earthwalk Action Training, orEAT. The promotion proves difficult for the couple's relationship as a result of time constraints and the relationship suffers from the pressures of being apart. The protagonist and narrator is Dexter King (Goldblum), an American actor working in London and living platonically in Camden Town with his "educated, charming. The protagonist discovers on eBay a replica of a lounge chair that was used by his father long ago. The quarrel escalates until Philip declares that, as captain of their ship, he feels entitled not only to perform marriages but to grant divorces. The quartet consists of Joe Spring on clarinet, Pete Summer on accordion and guitar, Mike Fall on piano and trumpet, and an ever-pessimistic Happy Winter on violin. The quartet later become judges of a wild swimsuit competition. The queen gives birth to a daughter named Snow White, but dies soon after. The queen objects to Edvard's choice, but the king tells him that if he loves Paige, he should marry her. The question is whether or not it is true. The question is, who will survive to tell the tale. The question remains whether the college will survive, or if the Dean, Peter and the kids will be joining Grace and Mary on the road. The questions become more erudite and challenging, but Bottomley keeps answering them with ease. The rapper tells Kathy he has to move on, but she decides to follow him. The rationality that has been his whole life comes back and he rejects prayer, the supernatural and by extension, Sophie and her powers. The real adventure begins on the honeymoon, when this screwball comedy really heats up with insults and arguments. The real estate firm, and now Ellen, are merely fronts for a book-making operation run from the back of the office, where Dick and his associates, Gleason (James Gleason) and Kilcoyne (Frank McHugh), take bets on races. The reason for the divorce is not initially disclosed. The reason why he is unhappy is because Austin's father planned for him to go to the University of Southern California with a football scholarship, other than going to Princeton. The reconciled couple dance off into the Venetian sunset, to the tune of "The Piccolino". The relationship between Ann and Steve comes to an abrupt halt, giving Hilda greater leverage for reconciliation with Steve. The relationship between Emma and Aurora comes full circle when Emma is diagnosed with cancer that soon becomes terminal. The relationship between Melvin and Carol remains complicated until Simon (whom Melvin has allowed to move in with him until he can fully heal from his injuries and get a new apartment) convinces Melvin to declare his love for her. The relationship between Qi-sheng and Mei- yue was blossoming, but the director died suddenly when they started to produce the new film. The relationship between the two is at first strictly professional, until one night they go out to a restaurant, an event with which Lauren tries to prove that he can enjoy a night out without worrying about women flirting with him. The relationship ends amidst Jessica's tears and

Helen's realization that she wants more than Jessica is willing to offer. The remainder of the storyline - which runs for the week of the prophecy - revolves around her attempts at introspection. The remaining agents discuss eliminating the dissenting agent before going to lunch. The remaining two women Taylor must persuade to fall in love with him are Erin Cooper, a sexy Philadelphia Eagles receptionist, and Eleanor Larimore, an attractive older woman. The remastered 25th-anniversary edition offers "both the upbeat studio ending and mr Brickman's original, more tentative and melancholic conclusion". The report of the scandal soon flies through the town and we are taken to a bath where everyone is talking about the supposed affair. The reporter gets the actress to dress as a vamp and appear on the scene. The reporter who agrees to cover their wedding for the society page turns out to be Kevin, who writes wedding announcements under the pseudonym Malcolm Doyle. The reporters believe his impersonation and the city decides to throw the aviator a party. The reporters drill him with questions, but the grilling is interrupted when he receives news his aunt Vanessa has been in a car accident. The representative relents and tells her the sign is $210 per month, three months minimum. The resentful Caesar leads them to where Ace, Josh and Mima are enjoying a local feast. The resident Waponis will only let him mine it if he solves a problem for them. The resident is local Judge Evans, who sentences him to community service at the nearby hospital as punishment rather than allow Stone pay for the fence with cash. The residents are driven into poverty and forced to leave in order to avoid death by starvation. The resolution, however, is long coming. The rest of the actors and crew reveal that they pooled their resources to pay one month of Zack and Miri's bills and are throwing them an early wrap party. The rest of the film centers on Akeem's attempts to win Lisa's hand in marriage, which is complicated by Lisa's lazy and obnoxious boyfriend, Darryl Jenks (Eriq La Salle), whose father owns "Soul Glo" (a Jheri curl-like hairstyling aid). The rest of the novel relates, from Jenny's point of view, the progress of her relationship with Patrick, her activities as a new teacher, getting to know the people around her and a string of incidents such as a visit to Julian's house, a date with Graham and an embarrassing scene in which Dick makes a clumsy pass at her in the kitchen. The restaurant owner Sue (Amy Hill) explains to Henry that one year ago, Lucy and her father Marlin went up to the North Shore to pick a pineapple for his birthday. The result, then, is that Rose unwittingly trades Ted's Thenol for Gerald's aspirin. The resulting chaos gives the appearance of misdeeds by Tommy, which pushes Marie towards the arms of her other suitor. The resulting manhunt includes searches of the Lane house, Belden's apartment, Lane's business office, and all of the local beauty shops; two attempts to intimidate Melsa; two shooting attempts on her life; a charity ball; and a trap set for the murderer using Melsa as bait. The resulting publicity lands her a starring role in the burlesque. The resulting road trip to pick up and deliver the chair as a birthday present for the father in Atlanta takes interesting twists. The results are positive. The retreat proves to be divided into Eden West and Eden East. The return race commences, with newlyweds Leslie and Maggie now a team. The reunion is bittersweet and worsens when Angela finds out that Peaches is on the run from the IRS and only has 60 days to pay $50,000 in back taxes. The revelation devastates Nancy and prompts her to bow out of the play. The revelation of Julia's questionable method of raising funds sends Fred packing. The revelation that life should be enjoyed, rather than understood, helps to prepare him for a second date with Holly, which this time blossoms into love. The revised show proves to be a hit on its Broadway opening. The rich can afford medical treatment, and the poor can rely on the government to pay the bills, but the middle class has to shoulder the financial burden on its own. The rich guy's parents (Jaclyn Jose and Freddie Webb) insist that Wendy sign a prenuptial agreement. The rival Phi Iota Mu sorority intercepts the invitations and prevents them from being mailed out, so the Zetas are again in danger of being shut down at the campus meeting of the Panhellenic Council. The rivalry between the two companies, with cameramen nudging each other out of the way, sabotage acts by one against the other, and reporters fighting to get the 'scoop' does not bode well for the romance. The rivalry for Lexie's affection spills onto the field. The rivalry intensifies after Rosario deflowers Gina after a fight with her parents. The robbery goes smoothly, until a security guard shoots at Celine. The rock star is escorted into one of the hotels and the actress checks into the other. The romance develops further, and Barry finally feels some relief from the emotional isolation he has endured. The romance is terminated when Napoléon Bonaparte escapes from the island of Elba and marches upon Paris. The romantic evening comes to an abrupt end when Lord Rockburn shows up at the same restaurant accompanied by another woman, and Logan and Leslie are forced to make an unobtrusive early exit to avoid a potentially scandalous public scene. The romantic fires are rekindled when the two meet. The romantic love feelings she has for the boy are indeed strong and genuine, but the romantic love he has for her is questionable. The root turns out to be the finger of a murdered woman in a tattered bridal gown named Emily (Helena Bonham Carter), who rises from the grave claiming that she is now Victor's wife. The royal ambitions of the stepmother plays a small part in their attempt to deceive the prince, but more importantly they are trying to protect Cinderella from the law of the land, under which practicing magic is punishable by death. The sailors that were in Rhonda's bedroom go out to investigate and assume that Muriel's companion is attempting to rape her. The same day as she gets the notice from the Red Cross, she also gets two photographs from the house-keeper mrs Tubbs in England, showing Tillie and Johnny, in love, back during the war, when he had his amnesia. The same day she meets Stan (Alex O'Loughlin) when they both try to hail the same taxi. The same day, rich young Mary Buckingham (Ralston) boards the same train after her automobile breaks down in Little Bend. The same night, Emily secretly orders a forty dollar cut-away coat for her husband out of her household account. The same night, Molly attends her surprise bachelorette party and is asked questions about how she and Josh got together. The same night, Rose dines alone at a restaurant and sees a college professor, Perry (John Mahoney), being dramatically dumped by a female student, a similar scene having played out with a different girl the night Johnny proposed to Loretta. The same thing happens to George when a subsequent gust of wind from another incoming train dislodges one of the papers from his folder and blows it into Meg's face, leaving a lipstick-smudged kiss imprinted on the paper, much to her amusement when George retrieves it. The same two horses are scheduled to race against each other the next day, so Brad has film cameras set up around the racetrack. The satirical film spoofs several recent pop cultural It Girl moments such as Janet Jackson's wardrobe malfunction and Ashlee Simpson's lip synching fiasco. The scene begins at a rehearsal with the Glenn Miller Orchestra practicing "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and includes two choruses of the song whistled and sung by Tex Beneke in a musical exchange with The Modernaires. The scene cuts back to the judge announcing the Hot Chili Steppers as the first-place winners, who ecstatically accept their first-place trophy while the Dutch Dragons look in disbelief. The scene finishes with Woody being kissed by Breanna and Nell going home very upset about it. The scene later switches to the house where Joyce (Cheryl Pepsii Riley) shows up and informs Shirley that she called everybody, later Aunt Bam complains about the fact that she still doesn't have a man. The scene now moves six years ahead and shows Melissa and Jamie ringing the doorbell of Stacy's home for a social gathering. The scene returns to the marriage-guidance counsellor's office as the two explain that the realities of marriage do not live up to the fairytale expectation they both had. The scene shifts to a Christmas family reunion at Nat's parents', where a series of embarrassing incidents revolving around Josh occur. The scene then shifts to Vince and Lucretia's wedding, where Lester and Ramona see each other. The scenes as Jed travels around London on his bicycle cleverly give the city an appearance of Paris. The scheme is a huge success, netting $2,000 in only a few days. The scheme nearly succeeds, but Richard captures the smuggler in a tall tree, rolls with him down a steep embankment, and drags a half-drowned man to shore. The schemes are his, Bill constantly backing an eccentric inventor (Mikhail Rasumny) who comes up with a magical hair-growing formula and one that turns flowers into stone. The scheming Michael demands payment for his efforts, then on meeting Cormack's spoiled two children who wish to break up their father's marriage tells them he will break up the marriage if they pay him $30,000 with $15,000 up front. The scholarship prize is won by Denise, yet Simon is proud of his daughter and her talents. The school principal then decides to rename the school library in Kyles honor. The school year ends with everyone at East High School looking forward to summer vacation ("What Time Is It"). The school year ends with the luau ("Rock-a-Hula Luau"), during which the Cycle Lords appear and begin to destroy the celebration. The school's conservative church group run by Marianne decides Olive will be their next project. The school's conservative trustees, led by Ed Keller (Eugene Pallette) threaten to fire Tommy if he doesn't withdraw the reading from his lecture. The scientists find that they have miscalculated, e , $2 + 2 = 5$, and have placed the wrong bet. The screenplay allows Leslie Howard to draw on his classical background by having his character quote lines from Macbeth, Hamlet, The Taming of the Shrew, and Romeo and Juliet. The screenplay, with small but inspired and comedic roles for Noël Coward, Tony Curtis, and other famous stars of the day, makes fun of the movie business, actors, studio heads and itself, and is rife with allusions to the iconic earlier roles of the two main stars. The script, by Garson Kanin, is about a naive young woman named Gladys Glover who yearns for fame. The season 3 episode "Soap Box Derby" shows the Mills Garage in Patterson as a neighbor's son's car sponsor, and the Stephens' station wagon is seen with New York plates. The second date is also a disaster because she wears glasses that aren't meant for her, and brings along note cards to help her sound smart. The second fight between Hannah and Jenny is a full-on super-brawl, destroying part of the neighboring properties. The second is a wild perversion of a Korean short story Sonagiin which the Girl, having died, asks that her lover be buried along with hereven though he's still alive. The second stepsister fits into the slipper by cutting off her heel, but the same doves give her away. The second stereotype being The Couple. The second wedding is that of Bernard and Lydia, a couple who became romantically involved at the previous wedding. The secondary plot involves preparations for a major live show for the soldiers which will feature many MGM musical and comedy stars. The secretary compounds the error by telling Dorothy about the apartment. The sectionals ends with Nikki going to the nationals and Casey becoming the runner-up. The sedative eventually makes her fall asleep on a bench, where Joe Bradley (Gregory Peck), an expatriate American reporter for the "American News Service" based in Rome, finds her. The self-involved Steve develops a guilty conscience. The senator refuses, and Iris is disillusioned. The senator rushes off before he can be recognized. The service actually locates a 5'8" Chinese woman who sings Western opera, speaks five languages and has a single PhD. The setting is Los Angeles in 1970; the arrest and trial of the Manson Family is featured throughout the novel as a current event. The settlement hinges on an Irish castle, Caisleán Cloiche, or "Rock Castle," that each spouse wants. The seven-car race begins, but Fate's long-suffering sidekick Maximilian

Meen (Peter Falk) has sabotaged four other cars (and his own, by mistake), leaving just three cars in the race. The shallowness of all the teens at her school convinces Halley that finding true love is impossible. The shareholders seem swayed by Jorgy's speech and boo Garfield when he gets up to give a rebuttal. The sheikh blames himself for the tragedy, and vows to rebuild this time with the support of the local community. The sheikh does not believe that salmon bred in captivity will survive and rejects Patricia's offer, ending the British government's involvement in the project. The sheikh is excited to meet Alfred, the inventor of the "Woolly Jones" fishing fly. The sheriff comes in and the kids pretend to be dancing. The sheriff tells him to go and Yancy has to defend himself. The sheriff, Paul (Gilbert Roland), says he will find Rosalie a job at the dance hall and Yancy believes that this will be alright. The ship has almost made it out of the sandstorm when rocks kicked up by the wind hit the lander. The shock of the unexpected proposal leads to her instantaneous death. The shoe is momentarily picked up by the prince who arrives at the scene. The shop hangs a photo of Maezumi and his wife with their son happily in Paris. The short ends with Pepé telling the audience: "You know, it is possible to be too attractive," while continuing to run. The short later aired as an individual episode on a 1963 episode of Walt Disney's anthology TV series with new introductory segments. The short story deals with a vague and mild-mannered man who drives into Waterbury, Connecticut, with his wife for their regular weekly shopping and his wife's visit to the beauty parlor. The short was released separately in 1989 in the Walt Disney Mini-Classics line. The show begins with the performance of a dancer, who starts getting harassed by the soldiers, and only Eddie's intervention prevents the situation from getting out of control. The show contains a satire on The Richest Girl in the World, Mimi Carraway (Madeleine Carroll). The show is a great success and the hotel's future guaranteed. The show is not making any money, and nobody has been paid for six months. The show moves on to a new town and Bronco Billy goes to city hall to get a permit. The show portion is hosted by Mickey Rooney. The show runs out of time, but Beauregard promises to come back the next week if people will write in to Milady Soap demanding he be allowed to return. The show works much like the Bachelor TV show, with fifteen beautiful women competing for Banks's love and affection. The show's format features contestants costumed as historical characters or items, who are asked questions about who or what their attire represents. The show's sponsor, Sam Ipswich (Gregory Ratoff), discovered the orphan and made her a star in three months. The show, an American Civil War melodrama, is terribly amateurish, but the audience does not know any better and applauds appreciatively. The shy and awkward Rolando, a school janitor even though he has a degree in teaching, one day manages to have significant windfall. The siblings reminisce about their childhood and what the future will be like after their parents divorce. The sister of the peer sends for her son Jimmy (Mulhall) because she thinks Peggy has designs on Lord Anthony. The sisters visit the Claude-Henri's family's country home for Sunday brunch, where Isabel meets Claude-Henri's mother (Leslie Caron), and her handsome middle-aged brother-in-law, Edgar. The situation becomes even more complicated when the real Sebastian returns from London a day early, unbeknownst to Viola. The situation comes to a head when Adam feels humiliated during the trial when Amanda encourages one of her witnesses, a woman weightlifter, to lift him overhead. The situation gets complicated when Christopher falls in love with heiress Mary Sharon after planning to swindle her when he finds out that she receives a $50 million trust fund on her 21st birthday. The situation gets complicated when the couple accidentally meet outside their apartment, not knowing who the other is, and begin to fall in love. The situation is awkward for all the Dabneys. The situation is immediately complicated by persistent reporters, a romantic interest for the fake mother, and a convention of birdwatchers. The situation makes Gray finally realize that not only is she attracted to women, but is falling in love with her sister-in-law. The situation reaches a crisis when Gladys breaks a date with Pete in order to attend what Adams says is a business conference to discuss a cross-country publicity tour. The situation reaches its head when Gus and Maria invite the entire family to what was meant to be a "quiet" introductory dinner with Ian's demure and private parents, and the evening is a failure. The six women also do not want to return to their homes; they all want to stay at the farm with their new suitors and hide so they will not be taken back home. The skaters find evidence, in the form of a cassette tape recording of the invalid ordeal, to kill the deal. The skipper insists on being paid for Mirza's fare, but none of the three have any money left. The small-town experience soon humbles Ben when he misdiagnoses a young boy as having mitral valve regurgitation leading to late cyanosis, a case the town's curmudgeonly doctor, Aurelius Hogue, treats with a Coca-Cola. The smells from Stephens dinner of mussels and coconuts soon entice the hungry passengers to gather their own food; all except Doris, who tricks Stephen to get his food and gets slapped in turn. The soaked black cat watches his blue form walking away and she falls for him. The soldiers let him in, and R sneaks through the stadium following Julies scent to her house. The song 'Beautiful Girl' is sung by Crosby at the beginning of the film before his departure for Hollywood when technicians arrive to record it. The song does reach number one; after briefly celebrating his victory at a party hosted by Sir Elton John, Billy discerns that Joe is in need of affection and suggests that he and Joe celebrate Christmas by getting drunk and watching porn. The song is an instant hit, and a bidding war starts between Kemple and Klucke and Parker Pianos for the rights to the song. The sorcerer's descendant, Count Gunther Spretzle, arrived with the Enchanted Peasant Girl. The spaceman-João holds him at gunpoint, and makes him leave and let the original events of the night unfold. The spaceman-João then tells Helena to leave the young João, become a model, and meet him again 20 years in the future. The spaceman-João tries to convince the original-future João that he must live his life normally, but the original-future João refuses. The spaceship looks very human, but the aliens don't know how to act in society and the ship displays numerous superpowers. The spell becomes a curse for several generations. The spirited Sarah is engaged to Lord Hugh, a wealthy but rigid young nobleman, but she and her music teacher have fallen in love ("If You Could Only Come With Me"). The spring and summer fishing season is in full swing with the annual quest to catch "Catfish Hunter," a rather large catfish. The spunky Gladys pulls $1000 in cash from her purse, complains that the man is too "stuck up" to listen to her, asks "What sort of place treats people that way" and starts to leave. The spurned lover Adonis (Vhong Navarro) has to win over Athena's only son, Atong (Makisig Morales), to court his single mom, Athena (Valerie Concepcion). The staff are his old gang from his French Resistance days, paroled based on patriotic war work as long as they keep clean. The staff help them to climb over the tree. The staff is unenthused by "Rex Manning Day", and ultimately many of the fans showing up to meet him are either older women or gay men. The staff is very much a surrogate family, with Joe as the reluctant and perpetually exasperated but lovable father figure. The staff surmises that "Warren" just needs a similar chance. The stage blacks out onto three neon signs, reading "And so she lived hopefully ever after". The station owner has hired Mike to do a segment on her show. The steeple is destroyed by lightning, but everyone survives. The stepfather attacks him and George knocks him down before taking off. The store clerk does not believe Cash, so Cash pulls out a gun and Jack offers to buy the ticket. The

They spend the entire evening and part of the morning getting acquainted. They spend the entire evening together and, by morning, have fallen in love. They spend the evening together, and they both discover that she is a talented photographer and he even makes plans to contract her professionally. They spend the night planning their future, and Karl, who is in the shipping business, asks Louise to go to Australia with him, although she prefers South Africa. They spend the night together, quite chastely, but Logan becomes convinced that Leslie must be married. They spend their Christmas holidays at a ski resort, but as they take a tour of Belavia's natural beauty, Eddie and Paige discover that the evil Prime Minister Polonius has given orders to bulldoze the precious forests to drill for oil. They split again with Logan going to the police department to find Cavanaugh and have him

bring the police force while Kelly and Chelsea go to Taft's museum where the exposition in his honor is being held. They spot Herk loading a safe onto the bed of a truck. They start off by building a roof garden with a day care center, and while the rest of the tenants go at it, Eric takes the kids on a hike. They start racing until the police break it up. They start talking and find each other friendly. They start teaching each other dance moves and Javier convinces her to "feel the music". They start to leave only to be confronted by the same man, Monsieur Lebec (Lionel Royce). They stay in Top's beach house for several days. They steal a Harley-Davidson motorcycle, which Patricia knows how to drive, promising the owner to bring it right back and lose both the map and Agent Rivera in another chase. They steal a boat and hide out in a lighthouse, where they rekindle their romance. They steal his client list and give it to Britney so she can win back her old customers. They step inside and it transports them to a land where everyone acts like they are in a pornographic film. They still have a long way to go, but its a start. They still live in the Sulzenfuss' funeral home in Madison, Pennsylvania, while her Uncle Phil (Masur) has moved to Los Angeles, where he now works as a mechanic. They still manage to escape and the after a merry chase through the mountains head back to town. They stop at a wedding chapel/hotel and get married. They stop the car and Denis, in his underwear, goes to find his shirt, which he finds in a puddle of mud being eaten by a pair of raccoons. They stop to listen to a street band and police show up, stopping Javier while Katey runs away. They storm off into the jungle and the safari leaves without them. They stow away on board a Rio-bound ship, after accidentally starting some fires at a circus. They struggle and Von Luber falls overboard. They subsequently find a bookstore named "Embryo Concepts". They subsequently learn that the only way Henri can get a visa to emigrate with her is under the War Bride Act as the spouse of a member of the expeditionary forces. They succeed, and Paul and Lauren are finally brought together.

They swap stories about their lives including how Justine feels unappreciated by Phil and Holden tells her of his obsession with Salinger's novel, The Catcher in the Rye, from where he got his name. They take a taxi cab to the airport and along the way they say goodbye to various Porpoise Spit "attractions" (such as the shopping mall, the beach, the tourists, and the condos) and ride off to a more promising future. They take her to the emergency room, and Jimmy makes up a lie to Ed, Gretchen's father, that Doug used to play football. They take her to the hospital for a pregnancy test and trick her into admitting the truth. They take him for a millionaire, and use "Linda" to lure him into one of their swindles. They take him prisoner, strip him down to his underpants, and tie him to a toilet in a motel. They take him to have his chest waxed, which he gives up halfway. They take him to the cemetery where they visit the grave of Julie's mother, and Julie tells him how her mother died. They take over a wayside inn where he will be staying, and Beaumarchais devises a plot intended to humiliate Garrick by frightening him into returning to England. They take pride in turning out well trained secretaries. They take refuge with their law-abiding cousin Bobby, who runs a fish and chip shop in Glasgow, Scotland. They talk about their futures and the fact that Beth is resigned to the fact that her life after this is not going to get much better but that Denis has so many opportunities available to him. They talk about their relationship in the past tense. They talk about what to eat for dinner before thinking about running a furniture business. They talk and Val mocks Billie's beliefs on luck and her immaturity (All at Once). They talk and it is revealed that he is a virgin and is waiting for the "right one". They talk to each other and discover that both Bruce and Peter Danilo wanted Eric separated from Polly, for different selfish reasons. They talk, but she cannot answer the question he asks as to why she had not left him for his neglect. They team up to win back Sophia and Lola, but Max still gives in and uses the dive trip as a distraction to steal the diamond, which works perfectly when Mooré's man tries at the same time is caught after the fake plan doesn't work. They tell Ardita that they have been giving a charity performance that afternoon and at the end had relieved the audience of their valuables, and now intended to use the yacht to escape. They tell Play that they didn't like what was done to the three blind rappers earlier in the film (they were stiffed on the pay for a show) so they opted to come back to Kid & Play giving Showboat two new acts instead of just one. They tell her it doesn't have to end, but don't go into any details. They tell his close colleagues, Tony (Adam Goldberg) and Thayer (Thomas Lennon), Andie knew about the bet all along and was playing along to help Ben win. They then adopt Charlie and Sasha, before enjoying their new life together. They then begin to live in their van. They then bring on Baby Rose a former child star to be in their show who performs a number she learned (Way Out West). They then decide that they will stick around instead and find another way to support themselves (Babes in Arms). They then discover the body of Lou Pender (Paul Fix), the would-be burglar, who had masqueraded as North. They then enlist Kate to be the heartbreaker. They then escape back to Valerie's place where work continues on the space ship. They then fight about her controlling nature and his slacker ways and go their separate ways on bad terms. They then find that they have luckily drifted to their destination. They then get mixed up with the distraught Lucia, who first thanks them, then unexpectedly turns them over to the ship's captain. They then go to Nick's friend's hotel that he's staying at. They then have to figure out a way to get her off the ship, and it is arranged that she marry his aged valet, Hudson (Patrick Cargill). They then kidnap Neil Diamond to help Darren and Sandy reunite. They then kiss each other and fly back to the castle. They then kiss. They then marry and begin a long and happy future together, insofar as the ever-present threat of zombie apocalypse permits. They then marry and have their baby together. They then see their missing ball in a photograph taken at the science presentation. They then share a kiss and reflect on their night. They then share a kiss. They then sing a love song about how they feel as though they have met before (Where or When). They then sing and flirt about how they do not care that their relationship is over (I Wish I Were in Love Again). They then take Hope (Tracy Zahoryin) and her boyfriend Dave (Josh Holland) as hostages. They then take the guys' party bus to the club, forcing the guys to either take a Chippendale-type bus, or walk. They then talk about the first time they slept together, which leads to an argument. They then travel out to Old Tobacco Road where Denis and Beth drink and converse about their roles in high school and why exactly Denis fell for Beth; he admits it was because she was pretty and he always sat behind her. They then walk to the main room where musicians and other dancing guests are in attendance. They tie him up and drive to the buyers, unaware that Lambert has outsmarted them (what they think is the covered statue is actually an unconscious Dimples). They tie up and gag Tripp and lock him and Paula together in a room. They toss a coin to decide; Ted jokingly says he will get a job if it lands on its side. They tour the City by the Bay by cable car, sample some especially spicy curry (much to his chagrin), and nearlybut not quitekiss with the Golden Gate Bridge as a backdrop. They track her down to a dance hall where she is hoping to win a prize. They transition into the day of show and show the final number of the follies performed by Baby Rose (Johnny One Note). They travel to California to join a sex-therapy group, where much goes wrong, but all ends well. They travel to the YouTube headquarters, where they meet a receptionist named Stephanie (Helbig) who introduces them to the President of the company, Steve YouTube (Michael Ian Black). They travel to the seaside community of Ocean View to find and profile the person behind the ad. They try out their new manners at a barn-raising, where they meet six women they like Dorcas, Ruth, Martha, Liza, Sarah, and Alice. They try to call Sam but he is unable to answer the phone as he is busy in bed with Miriam. They try to co-exist in the same company, while Laida tries to oppose Miggy's business decisions through a series of events which made them realize the real definition of true love. They try to disrupt the relationship with salacious incidents taken from their mother's fiction books, presenting them as true things their mother has done, hoping Kingsley would be displeased. They try to do this in the standard Western way (riding alongside and jumping on), but a modern train proves to be resistant to such an approach and they give up. They try to hitchhike to Caracas, where Andy has heard the women greatly outnumber the men, but fail at that as well. They try to persuade her to change her mind, and Marvin's children are equally doubtful. They try to put Laida's family in front of her, but it doesn't seem to make her smile. They try to sneak in, but are captured. They turn out to be the Phi Iota Mu sorority, and snobbishly reject her when she tries to join them. They ultimately confess their real identities to the audience and are accepted for who they are. They unite and kiss. They use her to attract marriageable young rich men, whom they swindle. They use their income to buy an entire fleet of shrimp boats. They vacation for the summer on the Greek island of Santorini. They venture to the local LGBT center so Casey can volunteer for an upcoming event, and Casey meets Zack (Chris Salvatore), a gorgeous frequent visitor. They vie for the favours of exotic (and half-Scottish) Princess Lala (Dorothy Lamour), a cousin of the Prince (Murvyn Vye). They vow eternal friendship, and before going their separate ways, promise to reunite exactly ten years later at the same spot. They wake the lovers and, since Demetrius no longer loves Hermia, Theseus over-rules Egeus's demands and arranges a group wedding. They wake to find that each is in the other's body. They wake up an irritable, ailing Olaf, so Caroline introduces her as Sylvia's friend from college. They walk around Boston and begin to bond. They wander aimlessly, seeing a drive-in restaurant, but it's a mirage. They wander the streets, afraid of going back to face Amy/Tillie, who has camped in the hotel lobby, waiting for him to show his face. They want the earrings. They want to show off their tricks and begin gently with panting and moaning. They warn Lord de Winter and the Duke of Buckingham. They watch from the Yankees dugout (he owns part of the team). They watch over him with smiling faces, then depart as friends for eternity. They were both on the golf team at the University of Houston. They were on the run from two corrupt cops and were able to escape using fabricated documents, explaining why he kept his life a secret from Kathy all these years. They were quite comfortable up until the end of World War I, with Charlotte Bartlett leaving them all her money in her will, but the war ruined their happiness according to Forster. They will live together instead, travel around the country with a rock band and heed the advice and wisdom of a Hindu mystic called the Baba Zeba (Professor Irwin Corey). They will pretend Melissa has fallen in love with another man and decided to marry him, which will force Jason's hand. They will read their lines from a teleprompter so that the secret will be kept until the last minute. They win the contest and are sent off to spend some time together at a luxury hotel at Oropesa del Mar. They wind up in a struggle under a tree, in the process discovering that this is where Fella's father's fortune is hidden. They work in the publicity department for the Miramar Hotel and have to follow Victor Macfarland (Zachary Scott), a self-made millionaire who's trying to get on the financial advisory committee for the President. They work together on the case for the cleaning ladies, winning a judgment when they discover that there has been a fraud with their payroll. They worry about her, without realizing that she is spending her final days at the beach in Malagá happily with Briones. They would never see each other or know who the other is, since Jack is out all night and sleeps during the day, and Mary is taking a job selling refrigerators by telephone, which keeps her out all day. They wrap the body in blankets and then Joe calls Abigail and asks to borrow her van. They write a song "Fairytale" together, until Kandi returns for her claim on the single and emotionally tortures Ty to leave Elle or she would sue everyone related to him. They're both looking for 'The One', but don't recognize it when they find it. They're finally brought together when both of their trains stop at the same station; George still covered in paper airplanes and Meg holding his lipstick-marked paper airplane. They've already split up once, and now they're giving it one more try, but the bedroom of their New York apartment is not a happy place. Things are awkward and become worse when Kevin shows up with his army buddies, and Denis and Rich are assaulted and Denis' house (the kitchen) is trashed. Things are going smoothly but the two make a pact not to let men interfere with their life. Things are idyllic at first, but after living together for a while, they begin to quarrel constantly. Things become complicated when his love interest Polly (Ann Rutherford) introduces him to a seductive psychology student (Esther Williams), while his friends continue to delay the payment for his automobile. Things become even more complicated when Emily learns she is pregnant, and is uncertain if Tom or her boyfriend, Elliot is the father. Things become worse when Izzie has a failed double date with Dylan, and she starts to become insecure about her own appearance, something that concerns Rosie. Things begin to happen when the Cottons, a wealthy American family, inherit nearby Scoatney Hall and become the Mortmains' new landlords. Things begin to look better for her as she bonds with the children and their sexy principal, and finally begins to get the hang of being a mom. Things between Greg and Jack go from bad to worse during a game of water volleyball, where Jack becomes irritated with Greg's incompetent playing, and in an attempt to play more seriously, Greg accidentally hits Debbie while spiking the ball, giving her a bloody nose and a black eye; and when Greg later uses a malfunctioning toilet (and claims that Jinx used it, which Jack does not accept), the Byrnes' yard is flooded with sewage. Things come to a head in California when, acting as if everything is all right, Charley comes home to his wife. Things do not quite work out the way she expected and Ally remembers why it didn't work out with those men in the first place. Things don't turn out as well as planned when he spills the wine and a fire occurs. Things even work out in the end for Carter as he makes a commercial for acne medication. Things eventually begin to spiral out of control for the two, as Play is also planning the bachelor party while trying to keep Kid's three younger cousins from Detroit (Immature) in line, and Kid's ex-girlfriend Sydney (Tisha Campbell) has come back to town, which is news that doesn't please Veda at all. Things get complicated when an office romance develops between the unlikely pair. Things get even more complicated when, after Polly returns home without Peabody, police suspect him of murder. Things get so complicated that the men finally hatch a daring plan: kidnap Ray, lie to Eva about his death in an accident and cajole her into leaving the city. Things get worse when Josh and Ace get caught up fishing and turn up late for a party to celebrate Josh's engagement. Things get worse when Micah, Marianne's 20-year-old boyfriend, contracts chlamydia from sleeping with Mrs Griffith, the school guidance counsellor, and blames it all on Olive. Things go from bad to worse when he realizes he will be sitting next to Alison as she heads to UCLA to visit her boyfriend Jason (Boyd Gaines). Things look dark for Andy, but his father goes from despair to success when he wins the orphanage case. Things start to go wrong when Kevin introduces Charlie to his mother, Viola Fields (Jane Fonda). Things take a dive for the worse in eighth grade when Juli overhears Bryce talking to Garrett about her mentally challenged uncle. Things take a turn for the worse, however, because Nancy's oldest son, John-John (Malik Hammond) is jealous of Benjamin going out with his mother and plots to break up the relationship. Things take an ugly turn when Art is trying this scam with mobster Gene (Danny Aiello) whose father just died. Things turn sour for the film idol when a fellow actor, Freddie Stevens (Jack Plotnick) (famous in the film for portraying "Captain Astro" in a succession of Buck Rogers or Flash Gordon-type serial films), decides to steal the lead in Ben-Hur from Guy by taking a picture of Guy exiting a gay bar. Things with Juli start to change when Juli gives Bryce and his family a batch of chicken eggs. Thinking Helen is at her interview, Gerry goes to see Lydia. Thinking Henry was deceiving her, Toni ends their relationship. Thinking Ken is too young for her to have a future with, she hides the pregnancy from him. Thinking everyone forgot his birthday, Larry returns home (which still has the muddy driveway and lawn) to a surprise party with his family and friends in attendance. Thinking he is going crazy, he calls Harry, who does not believe him and advises him to meet with someone else to take his mind off things. Thinking he was blind, Nora allowed Dick to touch her face and then kissed him, only to then find out that he was able to see. Thinking it may by chance be a man with the same name Johnny contacts all the "John Grey"s of Rochester to find out that none were married in England. Thinking its him, 'Fearless' agrees to tell Chuck. Thinking quickly, the Kid fashions himself a Santa suit and begins collecting donations. Thinking she is a Spanish escort, he hires her to pose as his fiancée. Thinking that Jimmy had abandoned him, Albert tells him he's now joined up with the gang. Thinking that Rocky is an undercover cop setting them up, the gangsters flee, telling Rocky that he has blown his last chance. Thinking that her career will come first, Gail does not like her predicted future but finds herself taking an unexpected turn that takes her into a shop that sells sail-boats. Thinking that the DVD is for a prank, he does not do so. Thinking the worst, Basil prepares to fire Polly and tells the Lloyds to leave. Thinking they can get anything they want, Duke and Chester adopt the tough persona and head to the saloon. This puts a strain on his relationship with Lisa, who leaves him. This quickly leads to the pair undressing one another with the encouragement of Casey who is attempting to get the right chemistry between the actors for the show. This rejuvenated Marty's feelings for Sally and immediately goes to her house but he overhears her parents physically beating her. This renders her devoid of estrogen; her famous libido goes dead. This results in a feud between the two. This results in a raise and promotion for Thea, as well as the beginning of a romantic relationship between her and Nick after breaking off her fake engagement with Miles. This results in disaster for Wade as she is immediately fired from her lobbyist job for failing to achieve her objectives, as well as seemingly jeopardizing her political reputation. This results in funny situations. This results in ms Darbus announcing they will create a play about their final days at East High, called Senior Year. This results in their separation, and when Ben expresses amusement at Pete's deception, it leads to a heated argument with Alison as they drive to her doctor. This reveals to Steven that Celeste is indeed an alien and that she has fallen in love with him and accepted Jessie as her own daughter. This revelation sends a shock through their little world, and soon the break-up virus, and its after-effect, the inappropriate hook up virus, make their way through the rest of the characters. This ruins the concert, as well as the party and its ceremonial cake. This scene is cross-cut with groom Joel McCrea hurriedly changing from one formal suit to another while rushing to church for the wedding. This segment is narrated by Edgar Bergen in live-action sequences, who, with the help of his ventriloquist dummies Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, tells the tale to child actress Luana Patten at her birthday party. This sequence was choreographed by Patricia Birch and her assistant choreographer was Jonathan Cerullo. This serves dual purposes, as Jennifer uses it to get the passing Wallace to rescue her from the flames. This sets off a subplot in which Julianne must pretend to be the dutiful maid of honor while secretly scheming ways to prevent the wedding from happening. This sets the library on fire, which sets off the water sprinklers. This sets up an unusual love triangle involving Tom, Gil, and Cecilia. This short was one of many featured in Donald Duck's 50th Birthday. This so disgusts Alexis that he tells Victor that he is through with the scheme; Victor, after trying to bluff him into submission, pretends to give up and gives him back his passport and his bad check. This speech touches Jesse, and he thanks Celeste. This spurs Cady to fully commit to Janis's plan to cut off Regina's "resources", which involve breaking Regina and Aaron up, tricking her into eating nutrition bars that actually make her gain weight, and turning Regina's fellow Plastics against her. This strange realm is populated by people who have committed suicide, such as Eugene, a Russian musician who lives with his mother, father, and brother all suicide victims. This subplot provides for several set pieces in which the choir performs and Gospel music plays a significant role. This tension comes to a head at a party at the country club, which features Joe Santo as a musical guest, performing bluegrass songs on the violin with a small country group. This time Phileine will not let this happen and makes a huge state by disrupting the play. This time Sullivan succeeds in living like a hobo. This time Susan/Linda falls in love with the intended victim, and it's hard for them to find their way to happiness. This time he convinces her to spend the day with him. This time it will be against Carter, who has changed sides from Duluth to Chicago. This time she agrees. This time she tells her unseen, silent therapist that she has decided to stay single and try to get to know herself. This time the judge threatens to throw the book at Petey, sentencing him to six months in jail. This time, Oscar is the calm one while Charity is scared that she is starting to depend on him. This time, she accepts. This time, when Matt finds her huddled alone in the closet, she kisses him. This time, when her husband shows up slightly later, he is armed and threatens Carter, since he knows his wife is hiding in the bedroom. This trip, Nora has brought Gordon for her grandmothers' approval. This unique personality gradually propels Sydney's popularity as seen on the university website. This upsets Becca's family who develops a disdain for Crawl, and Travis who becomes so jealous he punches Crawl in the face. This upsets Janie, who schemes to break up the couple. This upsets Martha greatly, although she manages to hide it. This upsets Renata and the siblings' rapport becomes strained. This version is much more intense than that of Perrault and Disney, in that Cinderella's father did not die and the step sisters cut off their own toes to fit in the golden slipper. This version starred Shari Lewis and Lamb Chop. This version was then re-released in 1994, as part of Disney Favorite Stories collection. This was Doc's wife, the mother of his children. This was the last film to be released within Gable's lifetime (his final film, The Misfits, was released posthumously) and his last film in color. This world is very different, and she finds it difficult to adjust. This, along with Candace's desire to have the perfect wedding, heaps on the stress. This, however, turns into a disaster when Michael sees Candace getting a lap dance; he charges to attack the dancer, leading to an all-out fight between the guys, the ladies, and the dancers. Thomas Barclay (Michael Craig) left the military and has now tendered his resignation from Carr's automobile company. Thomas, a schoolboy, is, like Cassandra, considered "tolerably bright". Thomas, who had earlier resented having to get Tansy out of her various scrapes, uses his army training and tracks the pair down. Thorndyke (with his assistant Havershaw acting as co-driver) pulls every trick in the book to ensure he and his Thorndyke Special are leading at end of the first leg of the race. Thorndyke finally snaps, and persuades Carole to take Jim out on a date while he sneaks round to Jim's house. Thorndyke then arrives and claims that this makes him the new owner of the car. Thorndyke, thinking he is Herbie's new owner, gloats to Jim about what he's going to do to Herbie and kicks Herbie's front fender, and punches Jim, but Herbie then unexpectedly lurches into life and chases Thorndyke from the scene, showing he is more than willing to race on. Those business meetings which preceded prompts Miggy to almost miss a wedding that Laida and him would go to. Those that havent started changing yet, either start to change or fade away into dust. Those with the zombie virus are called the "stricken", "sorry stricken", "un-dead", "unmentionables", or "zombies". Though Babe initially hopes to just get a good story on the new heir, she eventually falls for the unfailingly kind-hearted Deeds, and decides to tell him that she is not who she says she is, but Inside Access, in concert with Cedar (who was fed the truth by the fake robber and was smitten with Babe) reveals it to Deeds first. Though Brad's selfish, cruel manner makes Anna uncomfortable, she continues dating him and they become engaged. Though Bridget's father had accepted this, Greta could not and cut ties with both of them. Though Brooklyn is friendly and charming, and John likes her, Doris is devastated. Though Bugs is initially reluctant due to the fact that Ketty broke his heart, he goes to the General's office nevertheless and confuses the General himself into jail. Though Chris aces Hathway's exam, Chris and Mitch's efforts appear to be ruined when Kent sabotages the laser. Though Dean comforts Henry, Pike does the opposite by secluding himself. Though Denise has not been able to bring herself to flee her husband, even as he kills their closest friends, the remaining bonds of love that have held Danny back from killing his bride seem to have dissolved. Though Duncan's father grounds him, after he cooled off for a bit, he is no longer grounded and he begins to spend more time with his son until he learns that Duncan used his father's credit card. Though Ginger turns away from him, he follows her into the tent and takes her in his arms. Though Hallie says that she and Duncan are only going to dinner and a movie, she and Duncan sneak away from the Secret Service at the movie theater after sharing a kiss.

Though Hemant is initially angry, he is glad for her honesty and - as the affair only reminded Aditi why she stopped seeing Vikram - is confident that they can put it behind them and be happy together. Though Jimmy's heart is set on Mary, Meekin persuades him to try proposing to other women to save them both from ruin or even possibly jail. Though Johnny is turned down, Mibs wants to get married anyway. Though Julie and the officers and troopers of the Regiment despise Dike for doing this, the gentlemanly Colonel Armstrong suggests a scheme to win his Regiment over; the Colonel and Dike swap mounts. Though Marisa and Chris are attracted to each other, Marisa is terrified that management will find out about the ruse and makes it a point to avoid Chris afterwards. Though Nadia cannot speak English and John cannot speak Russian, they soon bond. Though Nikko is skeptical and condescendingly rejects her offer, Courtney begs him to come to a carnival to see the choir perform and then make his decision. Though Paula is demanding, and makes clear from the start that she doesn't like Elliot, he allows her and Lucy to stay. Though Pickering and his mother caution him not to, Higgins allows Karpathy to dance with Eliza. Though Rosalee is still cynical of him as he uses a line from one of his films, his admission of not having "his priorities straight" seems to convince her of his good intentions. Though Sam is becoming better, Henry has the feeling that he should stay with his helpless grandfather because he himself fears becoming an orphan. Though Stevenson reassures an anxious Theodora that only he and his secretary know her identity, his wife Ethel (Nana Bryant) pressures him into an introduction, which the book's illustrator Michael Grant (Melvyn Douglas) overhears. Though Susan claims to be merely annoyed, Julia sees that Susan loves the young man and does her best to bring the two together. Though at first she genuinely likes Norbit and cares about him, going as far as intimidating other kids into letting Norbit play with them Rasputia's kindness deteriorates as she grows up to be an ignorant, arrogant, vindictive, and mean-spirited woman. Though awkward at first, Dan dismisses any conflict when he realizes that Eliot is "the Baxter" that Cecil mentioned and actually thanks him for letting her stay at his house when they fought. Though embarrassed by his appearance, Barney accepts an invitation to dine with Thelma Lou at her sister's house. Though embarrassed, she throws caution to the wind and accepts a lighthearted dance-off against Bradley, a former break-dancer. Though extremely bright, as he gets to know Bunny Watson, he is surprised to discover that she is every bit his match. Though happy for him, Cecil is saddened by the news because, like Eliot, she has always seen herself as a "Baxter" and hoped that the two could commiserate together. Though he at first rejects Nola's "no sex" decree, Jamie agrees to it after initially saying no. Though he ended the relationship she discovered that he was going to see his mistress again. Though he has a very active sex life, he is more sexually satisfied by viewing pornography and masturbating, which enables him to "lose himself". Though he has apologized, Paige is annoyed when Eddie and she are assigned as lab partners for an organic chemistry class. Though he is an expert at conning women, he sometimes worries about what his childhood sweetheart Mia (Regina King) thinks of his adventures. Though he is excited about this development, Matt is still depressed that the child may not be his. Though he makes a last-ditch effort to convince her to elope, she refuses, and Eliot starts bracing himself for the worst when Bradley drops by and begins trying to win Caroline's affections again. Though he steals several bags of blood from a doctor's office, he quickly finds that he needs fresh victims. Though initially doubling the money, Lucas soon loses the entire amount in one bet on a dice table. Though initially reluctant, Cam agrees. Though initially shocked, Banky agrees to participate, whereas Alyssa explains to Holden that it will not save their relationship. Though it just started as a peck on the cheek, it turns into a passionate kiss. Though married to the lovely and affectionate Amy Lind Grimes (Frances Fuller), Grimes still carries a torch for his former sweetheart, Virginia "Virgie" Brush Barnstead (Fay Wray). Though not openly upset, she is displeased with his proposal which affects their interactions the rest of the evening. Though possessing a photographic memory that enabled him to advance from private to senior non-commissioned officer in less than 24 hours, Dodo has one weakness: though his book knowledge enables him to give lectures on weapons disassembly and ballistics, he is gun shy and an incompetent marksman. Though she gets all that she wants - Paris, first class, etc. Though she has achieved financial success and stability as a mergers and acquisitions associate, Grace still yearns for social acceptance among the Upper East Side elite. Though she has found her lifetime companion in Ben Murphy (John Krasinski), Sadie is distressed to learn that St Augustine's has only one wedding slot available over the next two years, though after re-checking their planning book, they find that the wedding can be held in three weeks. Though she initially is off put by his looks and his obsession with scifi and horror films she begins to grow attracted to him when she learns he is working on a screenplay about the life of Colette. Though she is attracted to him, she refuses to have anything to do with Steve. Though silent at first, Matt relents and the two make up, preparing for the baby's arrival. Though still recognized on occasion, Jack's acting career appears to have peaked years ago, when he had a role in a popular TV soap but now does commercial voice-overs and plans to enter his future father-in-law's successful real estate business after he's married. Though surrounded by ladies desperate for his attention, Charles is putty in Jean's hands. Though the Latimores attempt to stop him, Norbit reaches the church and informs Kate of Deion's gold digging schemes. Though the initial investigation proves fruitless, Aziz correctly identifies Harry as a spy and tries to kill him. Though the other professors are inclined to leniency, Victoria cheerfully quits, finally agreeing with George's view that she is being stifled there. Though the pair find themselves marooned in a secluded cove of a seemingly-deserted island, Jenny soon discovers that they have landed a short distance from the resort. Though they are initially reluctant to go against Courtney's wishes, the rest of the group eventually agree that they need a new routine in order to win the competition. Though they aren't very enthusiastic at the idea of acting in a film about the independence movement, Sue eventually manages to convince them. Though they never make it to the dance, Duncan feels satisfied with the outcome of the date. Though things do not go well between them at first, they warm up to one another and start a relationship. Though ultimately unsuccessful in preserving La Fortuna, they finally meet at the Nicotine Anonymous meeting, are then happily married, and have a daughter together. Though upset, Ben makes friends with Mayor Nick Nicholson, who is also the owner of the town's cafe, and Melvin, the local mechanic tasked with repairing his car. Three Russians, Iranov (Sig Ruman), Buljanov (Felix Bressart), and Kopalsky (Alexander Granach), are in Paris to sell jewelry confiscated from the aristocracy during the Russian Revolution of 1917. Three beautiful American women come to Madrid and fall in love. Three damned souls, Joseph Garcin, Inès Serrano, and Estelle Rigault, are brought to the same room in Hell and locked inside by a mysterious valet. Three days before his wedding, George meets two intriguing people: Alicia (Verbeke), a Spanish woman who invites him to a party that night, and Gerard (Girardot), an unlucky-in-love Frenchman who has just been turned down for a marriage proposal. Three different times, she accidentally bumps into Tom Milford, a successful publishing executive, who then asks her for a date. Three ex-GIs, Ted Riley (Kelly), Doug Hallerton (Dailey) and Angie Valentine (Kidd) have served in World War II together and become best friends. Three furry aliensthe blue Mac, the yellow Zeebo, and the red Wiplocare traveling in a space ship. Three girls realizes love between Ishika and Diego and reunite them. Three months later, Delaney goes to see Zack, who has moved on to an exterior concessions job at Mellon Arena during Pittsburgh Penguins games. Three months later, Epifania has installed labour-saving machines, thus boosting productivity and making the plant a big success. Three months later, Isolde is disheartened to have heard nothing from Rock-a-Bye or any of the other adoption agencies. Three months later, Penelope finds Bloom, wanting to be with him and to become a con artist. Three months later, Stephen finds Bloom and convinces him to execute one final con. Three months later, as she is singing, "Can't Take My Eyes Off You", with David's daughter, Phoebe, David becomes upset with Alice, reminding her sternly that she's not Phoebe's mother; as it's revealed that David's wife died two years ago and he has not told Phoebe about it, believing that his daughter is not ready to know, which causes the two to break up. Three of her suitors protest when Molly Truesdale, on a whim, boards a bus in New York City to find out what life in the American West is like. Three other interested parties converge on the valuable rarity: a Greek billionaire, to whom Margaret's unscrupulous brother has independently sold the bottle; an amoral French scientist (Jourdan), who believes it contains the secret to a rejuvenation formula that he will kill to obtain; and a murderous thug (Brimble), who wants to sell it himself. Three plots in three different historical periods—prehistoric times, Ancient Rome, and modern times (the Roaring Twenties)—are intercut to prove the point that man's love for woman has not significantly changed throughout history. Three weeks before her 28th birthday, Michael tells her that in four days, he will marry Kimmy Wallace (Cameron Diaz), a 20-year-old University of Chicago student from a wealthy family. Three years ago, when he was still a high school sophomore, Marty was often picked on by a bully until Sally (Rhian Ramos), a gadget inventor, intervened and later helped Marty get revenge by humiliating the said bully in public. Three years later, Karan is helping his mother plan a wedding that turns out to be Rhea's. Thrilled to see his old room, Drew impetuously offers Tom $250,000 to let him spend Christmas with the

Valcos. Thrilled, Augie and Isolde welcome the infant baby boy to their home days later, and soon everyone notices the baby's similarity to Augie. Thrilled, Genius returns again and again with more of his work. Through a course of events, Donna discovers that Christine had switched their test booklets when they were being handed up to their trainer. Through a private investigator, Julie learns the identity of the donor and meets him Paul (Kevin Daniels), a struggling actor and law school dropout. Through a series of "chance" encounters, she agrees to teach him how to surf for $150 per hour, and brings Lena, Eden and Penny along for the ride. Through a series of flashbacks and flash-forwards, we learn Laurence, a former bridge champion who now teaches the game to wealthy women, went to the airport to pick up Daniel but missed him because the flight landed early. Through a series of mishaps, Rhonda ends up accompanying him on his journey. Through a series of outdoor scenes we see them work together to form a routine. Through a spyglass, Francesca observes Teglash leading the advancing army and finds herself attracted to him. Through a welter of songs into which the principals break at short intervals she at length decides on a lord instead of a highwayman. Through a welter of songs into which the principals break at short intervals, as well as outrageous Pre-Code comedy, satire and drama, Kitty and Lord Varney are at length united. Through a wild chase on the streets near the canal zone of Venice, they race to get it to the cops on time. Through an elaborate scheme, he plots to get even with the Johnsons and get his money back. Through getting to know Albert, Lucy loosens her inhibitions, breaks off her engagement to Bink, and marries Albert shortly afterwards. Through her "Contacts and Contracts" company, Mae Swasey is busy scheming to bring couples together. Through her marriage, Pippa has become the "perfect wife": loving, supportive, everything to everyone and no one to herself. Through his firsthand experiences, he grows more sympathetic to the needs of his workers, while finding unexpected love with sweet-natured clerk Elizabeth Ellis (Spring Byington). Through his motorcycle riding guide Roberto he discovers true love and a career as a Yerba mate exporter. Through it all, the group manages to find family, love, and acceptance where they least expected to. Through plots to get Sheeni closer to him he ends up with several crimes on his hands (including arson, grand theft auto, and foul play) and is forced to run from the police. Through some scheming, Maggie and Dick make it into the soiree at Flostre's home. Through the diary, she learns about the story of five freedom fighters who were active in the movement: Chandrasekhar Azad, Bhagat Singh, Shivaram Rajguru, Ashfaqulla Khan, and Ram Prasad Bismil. Through the early part of their relationship, Jessica finds in Helen everything she'd dreamed of finding in a man. Through the machinations of his boss, Graham's notebook is stolen leading him into a misadventure to try to recover it. Through the pictures she sends back via internet, Biyun finally gets to see the familiar face once again. Through their time together, Newton begins to rely more on Gwen beyond their agreement, and Gwen starts to feel attached to her life with Newton. Through this, Ian is dating Butt Massage Girl, Ian's parents live with them, Anthony has several girlfriends (who he immediately gets rid of because he only wants Anna), they live in a much bigger and better house, and Steve "You-too-bay" is now a pizza delivery man. Throughout everyone eats lots of fruits de mer, especially Sea Violets. Throughout the film Freddie and Maura's paths keep crossing, leading to Sophie wrongly assuming that the two are involved in an illicit affair. Throughout the film it is insinuated that one of the reasons for the marriage breakdown originally was the bride's mental health. Throughout the film, Mikey becomes jealous of Julie, and their parents' fights about Stuart staying there lead to Mollie kicking out James. Throughout the film, Terri develops a mutual fondness for Jay, but she faces competition from Robin Childers (Lauren Mayhew), who was involved with Jay the previous summer. Throughout the first season, it is hinted that Jimmy expected the arrangement to be temporary and he sometimes wonders aloud when Edgar will move out. Throughout the movie, Sam has many dream fantasies which star Drew Barrymore as the subject of his fantasies. Throughout the movie, Will writes journal-like e-mails to Bowie every day, although Bowie never answers. Throughout the next several days, the group's efforts prove to be unsuccessful, partly because all three men give Andy different and sometimes contradictory advice. Throughout the novel the real Beth shows that she is nowhere near the perfect girl that Denis has imagined. Throughout the week, R feeds her food from the airports restaurant, entertains her with his treasures, including a record player, and Julie tries to teach him to drive a car which R has managed to get started. Throughout this three-day period, their every move is filmed by roving cameras who are documenting their success for a promotional TV programme to be shown at a press conference after the three days are up. Throwing their caps in the air, the graduates form a giant "wildcat" before breaking out into song and dance ("High School Musical"). Thrown into the mix is Annie (Sarandon), a "baseball groupie" and lifelong spiritual seeker who has latched onto the "Church of Baseball" and has, every year, chosen one player on the Bulls to be her lover and student. Thus begins his comically ill-fated relationship with the Girl. Thus encouraged, the Hot Chili Steppers take the stage, performing a series of freestyle jump rope tricks in conjunction with a dance number, for which they earn tumultuous applause. Thus leading her to question her life, including whether her 'perfect man' is actually what she truly desires after all. Thus trapped, Carol agrees to the marriage. Thus, Andy avoids all embarrassment when the article about him and Daphne is published. Thus, Billy breaks up with Katie, who then leaves to stay with her close friend Haley. Thus, Brendan starts dating; Leo's colleague and Angie get together; Jeremy and Darren make up; and Leo sleeps with Sally. Thus, Frank and his assistant can listen to all conversations, though Frank does not let his assistant listen to the adult parts. Thus, Marge has plenty of reason to try to sabotage their relationship. Thus, her clumsiness will unleash several disasters, as freezing all her school classmates wanting to stop time in a happy moment, getting caught on the wall with half body inside and half body outside when she tries to teleport from one room to another, or leave the school principal deaf for a few minutes when she sings a song with her super squeaky voice. Thus, his strong desire is to prove himself to his father and older brother. Thus, the judge is obliged to juggle his committee duties with his efforts to keep his children from making fools of themselves. Thus, when Rawlins arrives, the owner's assistant George (Willie Best) thinks he is a ghost. Tiana and Naveen are wed by Mama Odie; and because of Tiana's new status as princess, they are restored back to human form after their kiss. Tiana and Naveen then reveal their love to each other and explain the situation to Charlotte, who agrees to kiss Naveen, as Lawrence is taken away by the police. Tiana then meets Naveen, who, believing her to be a princess because of her costume, asks her to kiss him and break Facilier's spell. Tiara then betrays Sharpay and tells her how she is going to take over next year in the drama department. Tibby (Amber Tamblyn) goes through a pregnancy scare and alienates Carmen. Tibby drives to Vermont, hoping for Carmen's support. Tibby has been working at a video store in New York while retaking a NYU screenwriting class that requires her to finish her script. Tibby, the wife of Samuel Sweetland (Jameson Thomas) dies, and shortly afterwards his daughter marries and leaves home, leaving him on his own with his two servants. Tied to a stove, Beth has become a full-fledged, bloodthirsty zombie, having eaten Maury and bitten off Geenie's hand. Tierney assumes he's going to write more lies, so she announces to the press that the two of them are married. Tiffany despairs when she finds that Nikki actually is in the audience, invited by Ronnie and Veronica who want Nikki to lift her restraining order on Pat and give Pat the chance to reconcile with her. Tiffany sees this and runs off. Tiffany sends Jesse a message asking him to transport the two dolls to Hackensack, New Jersey, in exchange for money. Tiffany shows up at their house and points out that the way she is "reading the signs," Philadelphia teams do better when she and Pat are together. Tiffany tries to get closer to Pat and even offers to deliver a letter to Nikkiif, in return, he will practice dancing with her (which she does as a therapy) and to partner with her in an upcoming dance competition. Tiffany walks to the bar and starts drinking. Tiffany, Pat, and their friends and family arrive at the competition on the night of the football game. Tillie abstains from sex while Pete turns to drink and takes an apartment. Tillie died from her illness before she could make her journey, and left two orphaned twin children, Joyce and Johnny Jr. Tillie ends up in a sanitarium. Tillie's depression is alleviated a bit by a friendship with Jimmy (Rene Auberjonois), who is gay but willing to marry her if that would make Tillie happy. Tim Austin sets up Ivy with Jack Parks, a trucking company executive, to wine and dine Ivy. Tim Burke, a movie stuntman, is approached by a fellow named Denno Noonan with a peculiar offer. Tim Hogan (Eddie Gribbon), a fellow milk deliveryman and friend, drives Bill to Sheila's home to try to speak to her, but the police are called and Bill is arrested. Tim Kelly (James Ellison) is a Texan in the oil business who travels to Argentina to bid for some land. Tim falls in love with Lolita O'Shea (Maureen O'Hara), the daughter of the race-horse's owner, Don Enrique (Robert Barrat). Tim gets hold of this and asks Melody why she is encouraging him, to which Melody replies Griff is a freak like her and they love living like that. Tim is then shown walking away with his new girlfriend. Tim persuades a reluctant Parks to date Ivy, and applies pressure by threatening to reveal his illegal gambling casino, which operates at night in the back of a large long-distance truck. Time and time again one almost catches the other's eye, but circumstances intervene. Time goes on, and the final dramatic twist involves a death. Time is running out, as Prince Alexis, (William Orlamond), invades, from the neighbouring country, to seize the castle and marry the Princess. Time is running out, so Pitka skips through the rest of the acronym. Time passes and Sam becomes worse. Time passes and it is revealed that Lyla has had a daughter named Jane, as Don attaches a plaque with her name to their family tree. Time passes, and Harry suggests he write a new book about his experiences with Ruby. Time passes, but Teglash still mourns the loss of Angelina. Timid Bertram Muffet (Richard O'Callaghan) winds up with model Sally Martin (Jacki Piper) after the agency muddles his directions to a blind date. Timmy is torn between his love for Tootie and his desire to keep his fairy godparents. Timmy successfully frees everyone, but is forced to give up his fairy godparents, who vanish the moment he kisses Tootie. Timmy tells them what he did. Timmy then invites Steve to have Christmas dinner with them. Timmy's refusal to mature greatly irritates his parents (who desperately encourage him to move out) and Jorgen von Strangle (Mark Gibbon), who is constantly scheming to entice Timmy into giving up his fairies. Timothy (Tanner Cohen) is an openly gay student at a private boys' school. Timothy is cast as Puck in the senior production of A Midsummer Night's Dream. Timothy lives with his mother, Donna (Judy McLane), who is struggling with her son's sexuality and with getting a job, and his father who is not a part of his life. Timothy uses the flower to have the homophobic town take a "walk in his shoes". Tina is very demanding and controlling and warns Whittier that Derek is not the type of boy she should be dating. Tina, who manages the rink where Casey trains, has Gen on a strict training program. Tipper and Hater ring Mason's doorbell, and when he answers, Tipper slugs him in his testicles. Tipper and Hater subsequently enact a plan of revenge on Mason, devised by Tipper earlier in the film. Tipper tells Jack that she quit her job and that nobody knows where she is. Tira (Mae West) shimmies and sings in the sideshow of Big Bill Barton's Wonder Show, while her current boyfriend, pickpocket "Slick" (Ralf Harolde), relieves her distracted audience of their valuables for Big

Bill (Edward Arnold). Tira and Jack's romance leads to a wedding engagement. Tira sues Jack for breach of promise. Tira tells Big Bill she is quitting to get married. Tired and anxious to get to his hotel, Harvey brusquely dismisses her when she approaches him with the survey. Tired of being disrespected by the skate rental distributor (Nick Cannon) and other skaters at Sweetwater, the group enters a roller disco contest. Tired of losing gigs to the Perennials, Artie Shaw, playing himself, comes to woo Ellen away to be his booking manager. Tired of politics, unhappy with his life in general, and planning to commit suicide, Bulworth negotiates a $10 million life insurance policy with his daughter as the beneficiary in exchange for a favorable vote from the insurance industry. Tired of supporting his freeloading nephew, Max's uncle arranges an introduction between Max and an old friend who has a farm and two unmarried daughters. Tired of the road, she goes to visit her son, played by her real-life son Peter Lind Hayes, as Peter Kendricks, with her personal assistant, played by her real-life daughter-in-law, Mary Healy, as Mary Healy, in cognito. Tish and Tadd are in bed together, when Brad shows up and attempts to turn the coupling into a threesome. Tish asserts that he and Brad are gay, but will not admit it to themselves so they use the pretense of a threesome to have sex with each other. Tish becomes very upset and Tadd speaks of her contemptuously. Titania tells Oberon that she plans to stay there until she has attended Theseus and Hippolyta's wedding. Titania, having received the love-potion, is awakened by Bottom's singing and immediately falls in love with him. Title cards over this closing scene explain that Martha and Walter eventually turned north and returned to the USA and are now living under assumed names, Inga and Bob got married and opened a pet store in Albuquerque, and Whitman continues his search for love. To Ben's dismay, one of Frank's rules is no pre-marital sex. To Cornelia's surprise, the pearls do not turn up when Godfrey's suite is searched. To Don's amusement, Kathy pops out of a mock cake right in front of him, revealing herself to be a chorus girl. To Ellen's relief, Danny finally acts professionally, arranging his number for the show, which Shaw says "has really grown up into something special". To Gabe's elation, they begin spending time together and he is completely enamored with not only her, but her life. To Geoffrey's astonishment, the confused Ernest says that while he finds Anne pleasant and amusing, he does not love her and there has never been any question of the two eloping. To Gidget's surprise, her father is in bed and appears to be asleep. To Gray's surprise, Charlie and Sam become engaged the morning after their meeting. To Katrina's puzzlement, the Count is not offended in the least and remains quite friendly with Johann. To Lawrence's dismay, however, the book is largely re-worked and edited by the publisher and only vaguely resembles his original work. To Lizzie's surprise, Kate agrees to help her and the two become friends again. To Lucky's surprise, a patron later buys Genius's work. To Maria's surprise and joy, he permits the marriage, and Eddie is stunned to learn that his poor European refugee is actually royalty. To Rose's chagrin, Loretta declares that she loves Ronny. To Scott's surprise, his father is enormously proud of what he has accomplished. To Stanley's relief, the baby is delighted to see him, and from that moment on, the two are devoted to each other. To accommodate the new baby, Vada moves out of her bedroom and into Gramoo's old room, which has been renovated, and it brings further problems with adjustment. To achieve the latter, he also needed to silence Alice, unaware that she had fled to avoid testifying. To add insult to injury, the note says that Asher is breaking up with her. To add to her woes she then breaks up with her girlfriend, Danni. Viola Hastings (Amanda Bynes) is a teenage girl who plays for Cornwall high school's soccer team until it gets cut. Viola agrees to cover for him and decides to pass herself off as Sebastian, in hopes of joining their boys' team and beating Cornwall to prove their coach and her cocky ex-boyfriend, Justin (Robert Hoffman), wrong. Viola and

Shakespeare say their goodbyes, and he vows to immortalise her, as he imagines the beginnings of Twelfth Night, imagining her as a castaway disguised as a man after a voyage to a strange land. Viola counters stating Gertrude "smothered him to death", because she thought nobody was ever good enough for him (basically similar to how Viola is). Viola de Lesseps, the daughter of a wealthy merchant, who has seen Shakespeare's plays at court, disguises herself as "Thomas Kent" to audition, then runs away. Viola finds out that Will is still alive, and declares her love for him. Viola has an epiphany and realizes that she wants Charlie to stay, and they reconcile, which ends the feud. Viola is a former newscaster, who has recently been replaced by someone younger, and is in the midst of a meltdown. Viola is appalled when she learns Shakespeare is married, albeit separated from his wife, and she realises she cannot escape her duty to marry Wessex. Viola is delighted as she secretly feels the same way. Viola is miffed that Charlie compared her to Gertrude, although Ruby points out that Viola is actually far worse than Gertrude, as she doesn't ever recall Gertrude trying to poison Viola once, referring to earlier at the rehearsal dinner when Viola put crushed nuts (which Charlie is highly allergic to) in the meal's gravy. Viola oversleeps and misses the first half of the game, while the real Sebastian is mistaken for "Sebastian" and winds up poorly playing his sister's game instead. Viola's identity is exposed, leaving them without a stage or lead actor, until Richard Burbage offers them his theatre. Viola, who is unaware of Olivia's true intentions, is enraged instead because Duke has now abandoned his interest in Viola. Violet (Cohn) is forty, fabulous, and the ultimate fag hag. Zach goes to a friend's house to 'crash' while Georgina heads home. Zach invites Erica for dinner and she accepts, smiling as they drive off. Zach is overjoyed about the news. Zach is reunited with his family at the safehouse, along with a traumatized Erica (Anna Kendrick), who was forced to kill her own grandmother. Zach reveals that he wants children too, however an upset Georgina leaves and Ben has to explain to Zach what had been going on. Zach starts to notice people around town acting similarly to Beth, who has grown increasingly violent and has mood swings; he also discovers smooth jazz can calm her down. Zach visits the graves of Beth and Maury, leaving Beth's scarf on her tombstone, and a knight chess piece on Maury's. Zach walks home and discovers his family members shocked by the sudden reappearance of his dead grandfather. Zach yells at the Slocums to let him in but his brother Kyle, a security officer, escorts him off the premises. Zach's attempts to talk to Beth fail. Zach's mom picks him up in her car, with Erica in the backseat. Zach, however, uses a condom, much to the dismay of Georgina. Zack Brown and Miri Linky are roommates in Monroeville, Pennsylvania (a Pittsburgh suburb). Zack Siler (Freddie Prinze, Jr) is the big man on campus at his Southern California high school. Zack agrees, and as Delaney and the cameraman Deacon explain, Zack learns that Miri never filmed her sex scene with Lester. Zack and Benji make up and start a relationship before beginning to make out too. Zack approaches and attempts to befriend Laney in the hope of subsequently transforming her into prom queen material. Zack befriends her brother, Simon (Kieran Culkin), and in an attempt to stop this, Laney agrees to go to the beach with him once. Zack confesses his true feelings to Laney, and asks for forgiveness as well as the chance to further their relationship, which she grants. Zack finds Casey to talk to, but then finds out that Casey and Ryan had both lied to him. Zack goes to Miri's apartment and reveals to her that he never slept with Stacey; instead, they talked about Miri all night. Zack in turn resumes his pursuit of Eve, although his wife, Pearl, has begun to haunt Eve's bar hoping to catch him with her, unbeknownst to Eve. Zack is dismayed when Miri shows up and insists on shooting the scene as originally planned. Zack manages to improvise a show with the Hacky Sack he happens to carry in his pocket. Zack retools his film to take place in the coffee shop, revamping the film to one with a coffee shop motif, Swallow My Cockuccino. Zack then successfully persuades her to attend a party at Preston's (Dulé Hill) house the same night, and he employs his sister Mac (Anna Paquin) to give her a makeover, transforming her into a stunning beauty. Zack warns Mickey not to come back, before he goes to meet Eve, but Eve in turn sends Zack away, telling him their affair is over. Zack's friend, Dean Sampson, Jr. Zany hijinks ensue as the staff try to one-up each other and win the prize while avoiding a beating. Zarka (Ann Codee), Steve's ruthlessly strict ballet teacher, forces him to wear a tutu and dance with the co-eds, but Steve once again rises to the occasion. Zeke (Romany Malco) and Mya (Meagan Good) arrive, with Zeke's womanizing past constantly being brought up by old friends and former flames, including the concierge at the hotel, who throws her drink in his face. Zeke explains and apologizes to Mya for everything that's been going on, and finally proposes to her; Mya accepts. Zelda meets Polly the next morning and figures out the trick Orville played on her. Zidler learns that Satine does not have long to live. Zidler makes excuses to the Duke, claiming that Satine has gone to confession ("Like a Virgin"). Zidler reiterates this warning to Satine, but when she refuses to return, he finally informs her she is dying ("A Fool to Believe"). Zidler tells Satine that to save Christian's life, she has to tell him that she will be staying with the Duke and she doesn't love him ("The Show Must Go On"). Zikowski is left to determine who of the four claiming guilt is the real perpetrator. Zoe (Jennifer Lopez) has given up on finding the man of her dreams and decides to become a single mother and undergoes artificial insemination. Zoe apologizes to Stan and they begin to work things out. Zoe gives birth to twin girls, one of whom they name Penny. Zoe is still uncertain whether she is pregnant or not and if she should tell Stan. Zoila and friends do the rain dance but she laughs and doesn't get the smile they are asking for. Zoila and her friends are there, so are Miggy's family. Zolotov has no wish to enter a duel with the banker, and swears he must have been mistaken, since the girl he knew was known to fake fainting to get a man's attention. Zooey, meanwhile, has become suspicious of Sydney. Zoë (Heather McComb) is a schoolgirl who lives in a luxury hotel. Zoë tries to reconcile her divorced mother, a photographer (Talia Shire), and father, a flute soloist.
